NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil." 167.

Care of Antirrhinums

Antirrhinums that were planted early in the season and have grown to be fine bushy plants with lots of bloom and buds showing will now want some feeding. There is nothing better for this than a top dressing of sheep manure, using a mulch of sheep manure and loam in equal parts. When applying these give the surface of the beds a coat of fine bone, but not heavy. This can be followed by the mulch, which should be placed about a quarter of an inch thick all over the beds. These light mulches applied about once a month will be better appreciated by the plants than heavy ones. Do not try to force these plants with too much heat. They throw better and finer spikes when given a temperature of from 48 to 50 at night, and 15 to 20 degrees higher with sunshine.

Ferns

Now when we are obliged to have a good deal of fire heat the ferns will need plenty of moisture to ward off dry air. Damp down the house three times a day and it will pay in the end. Be careful that no plants get a chance to dry out. During good weather give ventilation even if it is only for a short time. All ferns that are well pot bound will do better when given some stimulant in the way of weak liquid manure once or twice a week. Give abundant light and do not place on a heavy shade too soon. Of course, when the sun becomes strong, you will have to shade to keep them from losing their color.

Rambler Roses

Do not be too long in starting rambler roses intended for Easter. They should be brought into a little heat by the first week in January, which will give time to have them right for that date. Give the plants a clean up and cut out any dead or weak growths. To have ramblers on time for Easter they should be allowed ten weeks. The temperature at first should not be higher than 50 degrees at night until the roots begin to make some headway. Every morning give a good syringing to thoroughly dampen the wood. When they have made some top growth the temperature can be raised to 55 degrees and in two or three weeks more to 60 degrees. Great care in the matter of ventilation will be necessary so as to avoid mildew. Give careful attention to fumigation to keep down the green fly which is bound to make its appearance if not guarded against. Keep the atmosphere moderately humid all the time. Give them a place where they can have full sun for it is necessary for the perfect development of these roses in every way.

Keep Propagating

Propagation to the fullest extent from now on and for months to come will hold the grower's interest and claim his unflagging attention. Look up all the stock plants. Some of them may be in undesirable quarters. These must have light, sun and air in order to furnish good cuttings. Let them have what they need and encourage the plants in every possible way to do their best. Besides geraniums and carnations, of which many thousands are already in the sand, there are numerous other good things, most important to the all-around plant grower, that should now be propagated, if good, fair-sized stock for spring trade is to be the issue. Foremost to be started are salvias, begonias, lemon verbenas, fuchsias, double petunias, lantanas, heliotropes and fancy scented and ivy-leaved geraniums. Any such things as Impatiens Sultani and hybrids, achyranthes, coleus, etc., can be propagated later, but where you are short of stock start now.

Tuberous Rooted Begonias

Very nearly every florist can use some of these fine flowering plants to advantage. They are well adapted for a good many summer and fall decorations and also show up well in the show house. It is best to sow the seed in pans. Mix up a light compost of loam, leaf mold and sand in equal parts, give ample drainage to keep the compost sweet, fill the pans to within half an inch of the top and press firmly. On top of this place a little finely sifted compost, press moderately firm, give a good soaking of water, let them stand until they have drained and then sow the seed evenly all over the surface and press in. There is no need of covering the seed. Cover these pans with a pane of glass and keep shaded until they start to come up when they should have full sun. Give the pans a position where they can have a temperature of about 60 at night.

Propagate Lobelia Kathleen Mallard

In order to well up a fine lot of this Lobelia propagating should start now. When they are rooted they can be placed in flats or potted. Give them a rich compost; that used for roses or carnations will do all right. Keep well up to the glass and in a light house. They do not like too much heat. A temperature of from 45 to 50 degrees at night will hold them in good condition.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Rizicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Rizicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Watering

With present weather conditions, the heat has to be put to the houses quite a good deal, and where all the heating pipes are under the benches, it will require careful work to see that the plants do not get too dry in places, or at the bottom of the benches. It often happens that the surface of the benches seems to be plenty wet enough, while the bottom is very dry. The roots are in the bottom of the benches, and with the heat that comes up from the pipes the water will evaporate very rapidly. If the plants are allowed to dry out this way, and remain so for any length of time, serious trouble may result. Water well during cold snaps—not too much but well. This means soak the soil until the water drips through the benches quite freely, leaving no dry spots. Before doing this it is well to go over the benches, and see that the places that are very dry are watered once, and then follow with the last thorough watering. If this were not done, these dry spots would shed water and the result would be that the plants would be dry almost immediately after. It is best not to allow these spots to form, and should there be any places where the soil dries out so fast that it is almost impossible to keep the plants wet, then apply a little manure to these places, with a little coarse sod in it if necessary, and this will keep them on the even with the rest of the bench.

Sand

Sand for propagation should be as clean as it is possible to get it, sharp, and not too coarse, or too fine either. To test the sand for cleanliness, take a handful of it and rub it between the hands. If the sand is clean your hands will remain clean. Should the sand carry a clay or mud, the hands will get a coat of it at once. Such sand is not as good for propagating as clean sand is, but if no other is to be had then it must do. A good soaking will remove a large quantity of the clay, especially if the propagating bench has perfect drainage. It will be well to water it heavily two or three times, leaving the water that runs through to carry away all clay and other sediment. If the water does not disappear rapidly, but remains standing on the surface of the sand there is something wrong with the drainage, and this defect should be remedied at once. It is very important to have perfect drainage, for without this a large portion of the cuttings are almost sure to fail in rooting. Before filling the benches for propagating, make sure that they are well cleaned, and all the old sand taken away. Clean out well under the benches too, for there will be a million fungi there at least, all waiting to get into the new sand to get busy. Whitewash the benches well, not forgetting to use a little copper sulphate in the lime. Sulphur will do nicely, too, but then it should be boiled into the lime when the latter is slaking.

Packing the Sand

As soon as the sand is brought into the benches, it should be leveled off to the proper depth, and watered well to settle and moisten it. After that it should be well packed, and there is no tool better for this than the good old-fashioned brick. It is better to use less force for the work and strike the sand oftener, for a big blow will loosen the sand in another place. Where the bottoms of the benches are made of slate, this is very apt to be broken by careless packing of the sand. An ordinary concrete tamper with the handle sawed off short would make an excellent tool for this work, but it is rather heavy, and the work gets pretty tiresome before the day goes by. In packing the sand, do not strike more than once in the same place, but start on one end of the bench and go all the way across and then go from side to side.

Care of Cuttings in Sand

As fast as the cuttings are made they should be put into the sand, for it will not do them any good to have them stay in water any length of time. As fast as they are cut they should be dropped into a pail of clean water, and then put into sand as soon as possible. Put them in straight rows across the bench, and about the same distance apart. In this way it will be easy to keep count of them, and there will be little guesswork as to the number in sand. A putty knife is about the handiest tool to use, with a narrow strip of wood with a handle in the center and a brick for firming. As soon as one row is in, all that is necessary to firm it is to hit the stick two or three times with the brick, and then make another cut in the sand with the knife on the other side of the stick. In this way the cuttings can be put into the sand very fast, and no time will be lost. As soon as a lot is in, they should be watered at once, after which they should only have water when it is necessary, and this will be every day for the first few days. Make sure that the house is shaded so that there will be no sun to hit the cuttings, and also that the vents are screened if necessary, to prevent draughts of air on the cuttings. Where the propagating is done in a cross-house it will be well to use cheesecloth all around the bench. Fasten it so that it can be lifted at any time. Run the temperature in the sand around 66 degrees F. and about 56 overhead—not warmer, rather a degree or two cooler. The idea of the low temperature overhead is to discourage the cuttings from making top growth, for if this came before the roots started, the latter would not start at all. In putting the cuttings in, make sure that all the leaves are made to point one way. This will make the work look much neater, and be of great advantage all the way around.

Helleborus

The Helleborus, or Christmas-rose, belonging to the order Ranunculaceae, possesses a charm of its own. It is the only winter-flowering garden perennial we have. As a genus comprising about a dozen species inhabiting the temperate zone of the eastern hemisphere one of its distinct characteristics consists of dark-green leathery, palmate or pedate foliage of extraordinary resistance and marked ornamentality. Likewise do the large flowers of greenish, yellow and purple shades arouse our interest. A world-wide distribution and a general popularity in American gardens, however, is enjoyed only by the well known Helleborus niger, producing flowers from two to three inches across. Their color, when grown under glass, is pure white; outdoors the petals appear frequently more or less rosy margined or suffused. Your correspondent had the opportunity last Christmas to admire several large specimens in full bloom in a Germantown (Pa.) garden. The beds and borders under the customary cover of leaves and manure indicated nature at rest, but the mild weather had induced the lightly protected clumps of Helleborus niger to send up through the covering a number of beautiful blossoms in rare perfection. At this time we are apt to be particularly appreciative, accepting them as a valuable gift and as evidence of the wonderful floral possibilities of the herbaceous garden.

Helleborus prefers a rich loamy soil, moist but well drained and thrives best in lightly shaded positions. Established plantations of Christmas roses along a path through wooded sections of park and home grounds flower most freely in March revealing the marvelous resourcefulness of Nature in gratifying beauty-loving human eyes. We should use them oftener than we so far have done.

We know helleborus to be inclined to self-hybridization in a wild state of growth. Of the growers who have given their attention to crossing Christmas roses Froebel in Zurich, Switzerland, and Heineman, Erfurt, Germany, years ago were remarkably successful. I do not know at this writing how many garden varieties of very attractive pink, red, violet and purple shades, of their introductions, are still obtainable. In European gardens ten to fifteen years ago they were extensively cultivated in pots under glass. All could be brought to full bloom by Christmas and proved very popular. In America we have confined ourselves principally to the growing of the original white type of Helleborus niger depicted as a pot-plant by our cover illustration. I believe it to be remunerative for some of us to take up the growing of the best hybrids for pot sales at the Christmas holidays. The greenish flowering species such as Helleborus caucasicus, foetidus, lividus, odoratus and viridus, as well as the purplish kinds—colchicus, purpurascens, olympicus and orientalis, are of interest to botanists and collectors.

In the Middle Atlantic States the leaves from the trees above held on the ground between the plants by their evergreen foliage prove sufficient protection. The rigid northern winters, of course, call for heavier covering. Helleborus may be raised from seed which should be sown right after ripening, or propagated by division.

Perpetual Flowering Carnation Show.

The Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society which is still "going strong," held its seventeenth show recently at the Royal Horticultural Hall, London. There was a falling off in the number of entries as compared with the previous year. A high standard of excellence was observable in the exhibits. C. Engelmann, who has come to the fore as the raiser of several prime favorites, secured the chief award in the class for three vases of American-raised novelties, winning the challenge cup given by the American Carnation Society. The blooms included Enchantress Supreme, Gorgeous and Peerless. Wells & Co. staged some fine specimens of Champion, a scarlet variety, whilst Allwood Bros. exhibited the pale pink Enchantress Supreme. The last named with some excellent samples of Princess Dagmar won the challenge cup offered by Patten & Co., of Tewksbury, Mass. Two new varieties received certificates of merit—Delice, a pink variety of the Enchantress type, shown by H. Dudley, and Nova West, salmon pink with petals of good substance, shown by Mr. West.

Honors for Horticulturists.

The new recipients of the Victoria Medal of Honor are Capt. W. Stackhouse, Mr. C. Pinwill, a Cornish amateur who is a collector of rare plants and liberal distributor of them; Mr. Joseph Cheal, Lowfield Nurseries, well known to many American and Canadian horticulturists; Mr. Whytock, gardener to the Duke of Buccleuch, and Mr. W. Cuthbertson, of Messrs. Dobbie & Co., seedsmen, Edinburgh.

National Dahlia Society.

The annual meeting of this society was recently held in London. Notwithstanding the setback sustained this year owing to there being no autumn show at the Crystal Palace, the balance sheet showed a surplus. The following officers were elected: President, Reginald Cory; chairman of committees, J. Cheal; treasurer, John Green (Hobbies, Ltd.); honorary show superintendent, G. L. Castleton; secretary, J. B. Riding.

SEEDLING CHRYSANTHEMUMS VS. NAMED VARIETIES.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

I was interested in your notes on the comparative excellence of seedling single early chrysanthemums and the varieties introduced under name. I cannot quite agree with your editorial wherein you said that as good varieties could be grown from seed as could be found among the expensive named varieties. Of course, all the existing named varieties were procured from seed—possibly a few from sports and as the hybridizing of single varieties has only become popular these last ten or twelve years, it is possible, occasionally, to get an improvement among a lot of seedlings. Such varieties as Caledonia, Peter Plant, Joan Edwards, Fair Rosamond, in pink; Mensa, Agnes, Gladys Duckham, R. B. Burge, in white; Robert Milner, E. Nottell, Josephine, Golden Mensa, Margaret Totty, in yellow; Miss Hilda Wells, Jessie Curtis, Firelight, The King, Mrs. Foot, Sylvia Slade, Ronpell Beauty, in shades of red, Caterham Bronze, Sundown

Radiance, Mary Richardson, Dorothy Dann, Merstharn Jewel, in different shades of bronze, would, in my opinion, be impossible to get in a lot, of say, a few hundred seedlings. When we consider that one large grower in England who grows ten to fifteen thousand seedlings, and possibly has as many more grown by others for him to select from every year, and that last year he had only one variety that he considered was an improvement and worthy of being named and introduced among the named varieties, you will see that the ordinary grower with his few hundred seedlings stands a very small chance of producing many prize winners in one season.

While on the subject of single chrysanthemums, I would say that the difficulty of shipping the flowers in good shape is against their popularity with the trade. The commercial grower wants the varieties that have a number of rows of petals, and incurve at the tip of the petals, whereas the most graceful varieties have not more than two rows of petals and they point straight out or reflex a little, and of course such varieties do not ship well.

JAMES STEAR.

Mamaroneck, N. Y.

New York—The transportation committee of the N. Y. Florists Club having in charge the matter of the trip to the American Carnation Society's meeting in Buffalo, Jan. 27, are endeavoring to make arrangements so that the possible exhibitors may be able to take their flowers with them on the same train that they will go on to Buffalo. This will be a great convenience and they will be assured of the arrival of their exhibits on time.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

May it be The Best Ever

Another brick thrown

Under this caption we called the attention of our florist readers in a recent issue of HORTICULTURE to the frequent assaults that are being made from various sources upon the florists' business, citing as the then most recent instance that had come to our knowledge, the edict issued by the management of the Metropolitan Opera House in New York forbidding the time-honored practice of passing floral gifts to the performers on the stage, a custom which had brought considerable business to the florists of the metropolis. Now comes to the front the Common Council of the city of Providence, R. I., with a vote requesting the members of the new society who have been in the habit of sending floral greetings to them on the occasion of the inaugural ceremonies to discontinue the practice and, instead, to turn over to charitable purposes the money which the flowers would have cost. One member, in the course of his speech, condemned the use of flowers for any occasion other than three—namely, weddings, funerals and the "coming out" of young society maidens and derisively ridiculed their employment in connection with any of the affairs of business men as an incongruous and frivolous intrusion.

We consider these oft-recurring attacks upon a reputable industry, of which the case we refer to is but one of a long series, to be sufficiently serious to justify the protest to which we devote our entire editorial column this week. An inquiry sent from this office has elicited a reply from a Providence florist stating that, following the aforesaid action of the city council he had been instructed by customers to cancel several orders for flowers which had been previously booked for delivery at the inauguration, a loss to him of business amounting to some hundreds of dollars, and this in a season already marked by unusual business depression and many reverses.

What has happened in Providence is very likely to also occur with dire results to the florists in scores of other cities throughout the country, wherever there are to be found insensate and calloused individuals who look upon flowers as a nuisance and regard those who are touched by floral beauty as effeminate and foolish. Even clergymen have been among the worst offenders in this respect.

The flower industry in this country is now big enough and strong enough to defend itself against these insolent assaults and, through political or other means, to bring retribution on those who would seek to injure it. It should be brought forcibly to the attention of the public that in giving heed to these unjustifiable proscriptions they are aiding and abetting the impairment of a clean and honorable business; that the men engaged in the production and selling of flowers are taxpayers with families to support from the proceeds of their industry. Why should they be interfered with in the exercise of their rights as citizens, their means of livelihood crippled, their families impoverished and their employees be made to suffer by the wanton cutting off of the market for their products?

Furthermore, we think that the average citizen is fully competent to judge as to the purposes for which he shall spend his money. We do not believe that his contributions to "charity," whether large or small, will be increased a nickel's worth by the placing of dictatorial restrictions on his purchasing of flowers. "The poor" will gain nothing through such a course but the prosperity of a refined and beautiful industry will be obstructed and undermined and the poor employee in the greenhouse and the poor clerk in the flower store will be the final sufferers.

This is the time for New Year felicitations and in extending to our readers the compliments of the season we know of no better wish for the florist trade than that during the coming year the "get-together" spirit which has begun to assert itself of late may grow and develop, to the end that with the force and influence which comes only through union and co-operation, the "throwing of bricks" such as we have instanced may be made so dangerous and unprofitable for the throwers that it will be stopped for all time.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS AND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURISTS

NEW YEAR'S GREETINGS

From the President of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists.

One of the privileges as well as one of the very pleasant duties of the president of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturist, is to wish each and every member of the society and his family a very happy and prosperous New Year.

While we are just now emerging from a period of dullness, I believe that in the very near future, times will change very much for the better. Already we see grain shipments becoming extensive, shoe and textile manufacturers report increasing business, the automobile and steel industries are showing immense improvement and best of all, the banks of the country are giving more confidence for the near future.

Thomas B. Reed once said that "the alternation of good and bad times antedates the pyramids," and that certainly ought to give us courage as we know it is true. Commercial horticulturists together with the other great business interests of our country have shared the losses for the past season and although we are apt to think that our particular business has been hit the hardest, we know that this is not the case. But, however that may be, the dominant note of the commercial horticulturists throughout the United States must be that good times are coming and soon will be here.

PATRICK WELCH
President Society of American Florists

Once more, I wish to express to you my gratitude and appreciation for the honors our Society has conferred upon me. I know that with these honors, I have increased responsibility and intend, with your support, to shoulder this responsibility and to carry it successfully throughout the year. At the beginning of the year, when we all make good resolutions, I want one of the resolutions of this Society to be that it will work to increase our membership. Of the ten thousand firms engaged in floriculture and horticulture in the United States, but 20 per cent are members of our Society. This should and must be corrected. We must impress upon the minds of those who are not members that while there are many local clubs and other national organizations, organized for the advancement of floriculture and horticulture, still we are the most important society in America, whose aim and purpose have accomplished much in the past and with their co-operation, will extend the field of operations materially in the future.

I hope that the gentlemen appointed to the Board of Directors and Permanent Committees, with our State Vice-Presidents, will prove themselves leaders in the new crusade to increase our membership. We are now living in an age of co-operation, and what was formerly done by individuals, is now done by organizations; consequently, the members of our Society in each state must work with the Vice-Presidents to insure an increased membership.

An increased membership will have its influence at Washington, with Congress, and at the capitols of the different states, with the legislators both at home and in the national capital. An increased membership will better enable us to continue our campaign of education, at our National Flower Shows and at our annual Convention Garden. Many of our young men traveling through the country, were some sufficient stimulant offered, could assist in increasing the membership, and I am willing to offer the stimulant a

William R. Nicholson.

In placing William R. Nicholson on the executive board of the national society, President Welch has adopted a wise and far-seeing policy. It is a recognition of the younger element in the trade which will be received with approval on all sides and the gentleman thus honored is a worthy representative of this class, without whose loyal support no organization can long remain prosperous. Wm. R. Nicholson was brought up in the florist business, his father, William Nicholson, whom he succeeds in the establishment at Framingham, Mass., being a well known and successful grower and an ex-president and hard worker in the American Carnation Society. The young man has been closely identified with the convention sports department and was an efficient worker in the games and entertainment at the Boston convention last August.

Robert C. Kerr.

Robert C. Kerr is a native of Texas, his father having established the first nursery in that state immediately after the close of the civil war. Upon the graduation of the young man by the A. & M. College of Texas a florist department was added to the business and he was placed in charge. Eight years ago he bought out the florist department, which has now grown to be one of the largest in the South. Mr. Kerr is a hustler in whatever he undertakes. It was he who organized the Houston Florists' Club, San Antonio Florist Club, Austin Florist Club, Dallas Florist Club, and then centralized these by organizing the Texas State Florists' Association. He managed the very successful first annual flower show, held at Houston last November. He is now president of the Houston Florists' Club and the State Association. This recognition of one of the most active and influential men in the Southern section of the country should bring out much latent activity among the Southern horticultural people and greatly enhance the prestige of the national society in that section.

ecutive Board of the S. A. F. in accordance with the vote on affiliation passed at the Boston convention last August are all so well known to our readers that little needs to be added here to what is already familiar.

Harry A. Bunyard.

Harry A. Bunyard, who becomes a member of the board for one year by virtue of his election to the presidency of the New York Florists' Club, has already served a three-year term on the board and will bring to the work this year not only zeal and efficiency of a high order but the advantage of valuable experience in S. A. F. matters.

George Burton.

George Burton, president-elect of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, is the son of John Burton, an ex-president and charter member of the S. A. F. Mr. Burton thus has the honor of representing the first florists' club organized, in the councils of the national body. Like his father, he is a very expert and successful rose grower.

Wallace R. Pierson.

Wallace R. Pierson, who assumes membership on the board by reason of his office as president of the American Rose Society, is still another of the younger element in horticulture, being associated with his father, A. N. Pierson, in the management of the vast plant and flower growing establishment at Cromwell, Conn. As a shrewd business man Wallace Pierson is widely known and he will be no drone in the big national hive.

Irwin C. Bertermann.

Irwin C. Bertermann represents the most recently aroused class in the great floral industry—the retail trade, an element which for years resisted all efforts to get them to support the S. A. F. The recent awakening to the value of the national organization and their mutual obligations is due in no small degree to Mr. Bertermann's zealous work. We look for still greater co-operation on these lines through his membership on the executive board.

S. J. Goddard.

S. J. Goddard, president of the American Carnation Society, will prove, a sincere and loyal worker as an S. A. F. director. For many years his skill and industry as a grower of carnations have placed him in the van of successful culturists supplying the Boston market and winning honors at the exhibitions. He is also popular among a host of friends because of his geniality and companionable traits. Through Mr. Goddard the Carnation Society is well represented for the coming year.

Department of Plant Registration.

As no objections have been filed, public notice is hereby given that the registration by the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., of the Cannas "Pocahontas (Bronze Olympic)," "Flag of Truce," "Dragon," "Princeton" and "Gaiety" becomes complete.

Public notice is hereby given that F. W. Fletcher, Auburndale, Mass., offers for registration the Asparagus described below. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed name is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Description.—Origin: A hybrid seedling, raised in 1911, parentage, Hatcheri x deflexus scandens. This variety is as free-blooming as A. Hatcheri and the cut sprays are as durable and long-keeping as D. scandens. It is absolutely thornless. Not as heavy in growth as plumosa, but very dainty and graceful. Especially valuable for decorative work when in bloom.

Name.—"Asparagus hybrida gracilis." JOHN YOUNG, Secy.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club of Washington will be held Jan. 5. A special entertainment is being provided for the occasion, including a motion picture exhibition.

FLORISTS' AND GARDENERS' CLUB OF RHODE ISLAND.

Cornelius Hartstra, gardner for the Rhode Island Hospital, was re-elected president of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island at a recent meeting of the club. Other officers were chosen as follows: Vice-president, James Dillon; secretary, W. E. Chappell; treasurer, James Hockey. Executive committee, Henry C. Neubrandt, Owen McManus and John Marshall all of Providence. The installation of officers will take place on Jan. 25.

The club will hold its regular meeting on Monday evening when plans for a banquet in connection with the installation of officers will be decided upon. There is considerable talk about having a "blow out" on the first meeting night of the New Year to arouse enthusiasm among the members and prepare for a winter of activity.

W. Atlee Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa.—Burpee's Annual for 1915. This very comprehensive list of flower and vegetables shows each year some distinct addition to its attractive features. The present is its 39th issue. King White sweet pea is used as cover illustration on front and Baby Delight watermelon on the back, both in colors and there are four colored plates inside. Attention is called in several places to the effects of the European war on the seed supply for this year and it is contemplated to issue a "war bulletin" about February 1st, giving such further information as may have come to hand by that date.

Of Interest to Retail Florists

THE RETAILERS' BUSINESS CALENDAR.

Jan. 2, Sat. The old year is dead. Another calendar has been set upon the Road of Time and the race of business to get the calendar to multiply. Many a proprietor today was a clerk in a store before he came to your speeding feet, young flower merchant. Who knows what strain of business he has in his blood? Each dawn is arched with rain. The clouds are dark and the sun is spread but a threshold. Today is but a threshold. No man can dream what lies beyond. The clerk of today is very likely to be the merchant of a year from now. The man who looks down upon himself because he is a clerk, does not give much promise for the future. He should regard himself as an apprentice in life, as a learner of the trade of business, as one who is fitting himself to be a merchant proprietor in a future day. This is the hour of the best man. There are no barriers, no predestined positions, no castes of breed—only of deed.

Jan. 3, Sun. Get busy, at least once a week, and dust off your conscience. Do something, or perhaps one might well say, don't do anything, so as to make Sunday, the day of rest, different from the rest. Now that the rush season is over, every florist has the chance to get home early and get acquainted with his family. A few flowers or an odd plant brought home occasionally goes a long way to cement the tender feelings. All that we send into the lives of others comes back into our own.

Jan. 4, Mon. A vital necessity is successful retail advertising; somewhere in it, drive home and clinch a point which will bring to you dollars and cents. Somewhere state a truth that will convince the reader that what you are talking about is better, cheaper, or more desirable than he will be able to find elsewhere. If you are advertising an article which possesses neither the feature of quality or price, you had better fill your space with a report of the weather.

Jan. 5, Tues. We cannot know too much about our goods. Know them intimately. Know their character; their reputation. One might just as well send a soldier into the battle with a gun he does not know how to use as to rely for commercial success upon ignorance or indifference of the facts about one's flowers, plants, baskets, decorations, etc. Too many times are the questions of customers answered indifferently and carelessly in regard to the care of some plant or bouquet. Patrons will appreciate it if you can show them how to prolong the beauty and freshness of their purchased flowers and it is surprising how little the layman knows about the small things that aid in preserving the life of flowers a little while longer.

Jan. 6, Wed. If we are to accomplish anything of moment in the world, we must strike out boldly on new lines of our own. One cannot expect to make any but ordinary headway doing what others are doing. Competition under such conditions is too keen to admit of great advancement. Break in on old methods with a new plan, or do something better than it has ever been done before. New ideas help make big successes. It is the man who can anticipate new wants or create some new demand that wins fortune. The man with ideas and the nerve and energy to work them out will always find a field, no matter how crowded the market. If you have an idea, don't be afraid to try it out. You'll never know what it is worth until you try. Ideas are rare inspirations. Seize hold of them and act.

Jan. 7, Thur. By this time the results of the Christmas season are definitely fixed. Was there a substantial increase in your bank account? Do you think that more and better advertising would have helped much? At any rate, don't forget the wholesalers and plant growers. Pay bills promptly and start the new year with decks cleared for action.

Jan. 8, Fri. Merchants spend millions of dollars in advertising for new customers and then spend millions more to hire clerks who may drive these customers away as fast as they come. We should remember that customers comes to us voluntarily to be served, and that we cannot compel him to come or to buy if he does not wish to. It takes very little to persuade some people to change stores because the clerks have never made friends of them. Why is it that some customers will wait half an hour to be served by a favorite salesman, if not because the salesman has understood his customers and made friends of them by being both courteous and obliging.

Jan. 9, Sat. You will get your copy of HORTICULTURE as usual. The trade paper is the paper that the retailer reads as the devotee reads his Bible. To the retailer it is the only means he has of getting an unbiased view of what is going on in his field. He looks to his trade paper to learn the facts and secure the real reliable information with reference to lines of merchandise, market conditions and all other divisions of his business, and he will find the advertising pages as valuable in this respect as the reading columns.

Chicago—Word went the rounds of the Chicago market on Monday, that George Wienhoeber would no longer manage the down-town store of the Fleischman Floral Co. on Jackson Blvd. The break came as the result of a little friction over the Christmas trade and Mr. Wienhoeber will go into business for himself. It is stated that he bought out Lubliner & Trintz and will take possession on Jan'y 1st.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

Ladies' Night and the election of officers of the Garden and Florists' club will take place Jan. 12, 1915.

More interest is being taken by local florists and carnation enthusiasts in the Buffalo carnation convention. President Goddard hopes for a goodly following from this section.

The seed stores gathered in a large part of the holiday harvest. This was especially true of Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., who did a heavy business in Christmas wreaths and other greenery.

The season has been a rather unfortunate one for A. Leuthy & Co., of Roslindale. A large shipment of azaleas was made worthless by exposure on a New York dock for over three weeks.

Some specialties in the markets this week that are worthy of mention are carnations Eureka and Matchless from Paul F. Brigham and well-flowered tulips in pans from Mann Bros.. The first Golden Spur narcissi we have seen were brought by J. J. Fee.

Miss E. Patterson, of Wollaston, Mass., is receiving congratulations and best wishes from her many friends upon her engagement to a Quincy business man. The engagement has not been publicly announced and therefore Miss Patterson is reluctant to divulge the name of the lucky gentleman as yet.

The local wholesale houses are cheerful places to visit just now, especially the larger ones, who did a heavy business in shipping trade. Once more do the growers complain of the trade diverted from the sale of natural flowers by the enormous quantity of dried and artificial basket combinations and plants that were sold.

Providence, R. I.—The Providence Common Council put the ban on flowers for inauguration day at its meeting, last Monday night, when it passed a resolution requesting friends to omit the gorgeous gifts of blooms and instead, remit the money intended for flowers to the City Clerk to be turned over to some charitable organization. Councilman William F. Sears offered the resolution, stating that admiring friends might do well to relieve some of the suffering in the city. Mr. Sears said that ordinarily between $250 and $300 is spent for flowers. "It seems to me," Mr. Sears said, "that the flower money would help relieve some of the suffering about the city and that is the only object of my objection."

Councilman B. Thomas Potter took occasion to frown upon the floral decorations and said: "It is time that this body be awake to the fact that we are business men and not a bunch of coming-out maidens. Flowers are really needed on three occasions—the coming out of a young lady, a wedding and a funeral. To the best of my belief, the inauguration day ceremonies are none of these things."

CHICAGO.

Herbert Stone has taken a position as manager of the Mrs. Williams store, known as The Atlas.

The Warren Floral Co. has opened a store at the corner of 12th street and 60th avenue, two blocks from its greenhouses.

A. Lange has taken out a five years' lease in the new Stevens building. This building, lately completed, is one of the finest, though not the largest, of the State street buildings in the loop and caters to a very high class of trade.

The extreme cold of a week ago resulted in the loss of the stock in the N. J. Kruchten greenhouses at Western and Berwyn avenues. A defective gas pipe in the street opposite the houses had caused no damage so long as the ground permitted the escape of the gas. When the ground froze, the gas made its way into the greenhouses and the loss of 35,000 carnation plants and sweet peas seems to be a total one. N. J. Kruchten is one of Chicago's well-known growers and built the range in 1900. His two sons are in the wholesale business in the Atlas Block.

In one block on Wabash avenue the closing year has brought many changes. The passing away of E. E. Peiser, connected with Kennicott Bros. for over thirty years; the closing of the J. B. Deamud wholesale commission store; the opening of Harry Rowe's retail store in a wholesale district and the new venture of the Frank Co. all have occurred within the block between Randolph and Lake street, one of the strongholds of the florists. Harold Kennicott, nephew of the Kennicott Bros., who founded the business in the 70's, has decided to remain in the business in Chicago.

A rather spectacular Christmas azalea sale was an event in the plant market, outside of the florists' realm. One of the big department stores offered 2,000 azaleas, averaging from 12 to 15 inches across the top, at 69 cents each. They sold in an incredibly short time and sales were limited to one plant to a customer. The way in which the plants were handled was brought to a system which made it possible to sell, wrap and deliver plants over the counter to customers as fast as change could be made. The plants were not perfect and a large proportion could not have been sold at a florist's store, but they were purchased by every class of customers. The sale was the result of the oversupply of azaleas which came into Chicago and vicinity the past summer.

Washington.—Gude Bros. Co. report having found it necessary to employ thirty-five additional men to handle the Christmas trade in addition to their regular force and ten men brought in from the greenhouses. In the movement of the goods from the store eleven closed and heated automobiles were utilized.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Mrs. F. W. Chambers has opened a new flower shop at Madera, Cal.

A. E. Schlaudt, who has been in business for many years at San Jose, Cal., on Dec. 12, opened a new shop at 119 S. Second street, that city. G. V. Hiam is buyer and manager of the new store.

A. O. Grassl, lately of Oakland, has taken over a nursery at Grass Valley, and is overhauling the place and putting in a new stock. He will operate under the name of Grass Valley Greenhouses.

The Universal Distributing Company has been incorporated at Suisun, Cal., by Frederick S. Wythe, Marlon Veckl and P. O. Peterson of San Francisco, to conduct a flower, fruit and general farming business in Solano county.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society now has its bowling club formally organized, and the weekly practice is well attended. As a result of the extra exercise, several of the members are throwing off a good deal of surplus weight, which they are well able to spare.

The city of Berkeley is working out a "city beautiful" plan, and has designated Live Oak Park as a "clearing house" for plants with which to adorn the streets. A large number are now ready for distribution, and citizens having a surplus of plants are invited to send them to the park.

A committee consisting of John Vallance of Oakland, W. V. Eberley of Niles, and E. Gill of Berkeley, all well known to the flower trade, has been appointed to make arrangements for the next annual convention of the Pacific Coast and California nurserymen's associations. The time of meeting has been tentatively set for Aug. 12, 13 and 14, this being ahead of the usual time on account of the S. A. F. convention.

In addition to the branch at 156 Powell street, the Art Floral Company has opened another holiday branch around the corner from its main store, putting a large stock of Christmas trees, holly wreaths, etc., on a vacant lot on Geary street adjoining the Stewart Hotel. The large trees are arranged in park-like effect, with plenty of incandescent lights; and as the place is well within the shopping district a lively business is being done.

Obituary

William Kind.

William Kind, father of Hugo Kind, proprietor of Shady Lawn Nurseries, at Hammonton, N. J., passed away on Thursday, Dec. 24, aged 75 years. He purchased the place, which his son now conducts in 1905.

H. S. Chandler.

H. S. Chandler, of Tewksbury, died of a paralytic shock last Tuesday night, Dec. 22. He was fifty-eight years old and had been for many years in the florist business, growing carnations as a specialty. During his lifetime Mr. Chandler also won a rather enviable reputation as an apple grower. The deceased leaves a widow, Theresa, and two sons, J. W. and Thaddeus S., who will continue with the business, consisting of greenhouses and orchards.

Matthew J. Leach.

Matthew J. Leach, florist, died Sunday night, Dec. 20, at his home, New man avenue, Seekonk, Mass., after an illness of several days duration. Mr. Leach, together with his sons, had been engaged in the florist business in Pawtucket, R. I., for the past 23 years and 11 years previous to locating in Pawtucket was located in Seekonk, Mass., where the greenhouses are at present located.

Mr. Leach was born in Yorktown, N. Y., March, 1845, the son of Edwin and Martha Leach, and came to Pawtucket with his parents when a boy. He was engaged in the monument business for a number of years, but later engaged in the florist business, in which he continued until his death. For the past few years Edward I. and Herbert A. Leach, sons, have been in business with their father.

John Munson.

John Munson, proprietor of the Minneapolis Floral Company died at Minneapolis, Minn., on December 28, of pneumonia and a complication of diseases, in the fiftieth year of his age. Mr. Munson came from Sweden in 1892 and worked for August Swanson at Merriam Park and went thence to assume the position of foreman of the Smith greenhouses. In 1890 he started in business for himself and has been very successful. He was an active and popular member of the Minn-neapolis Florist Club, Minnesota State Florists' Association and Society of American Florists. He leaves a widow and one daughter. The funeral on December 31 at Lakewood Cemetery Chapel was largely attended by mourning friends in the florist fraternity.

Frank D. Hunter.

Frank D. Hunter died in New York City on Monday, December 28. Mr. Hunter was last employed as manager for Noll & Co., of Newark, N. J., in their branch seed store in the Hudson Terminal Building in New York. This branch was closed up some months ago as an unprofitable proposition since which time Mr. Hunter has not been engaged in any business.

He was born in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., about 65 years ago, and there obtained his knowledge of the seed business. Later he resided with his parents who had greenhouses, at Lodi, N. J. Subsequently he embarked in the seed and supply business in Passaic, N. J., and afterwards entered the wholesale cut flower commission trade with James Hammond as Hammond & Hunter at 50 West 30th street, New York. On the dissolution of the partnership Mr. Hammond took charge of the book-keeping department of J. H. Small & Sons in their Broadway store, where he remained for 14 years, afterwards taking the aforesaid Noll proposition.

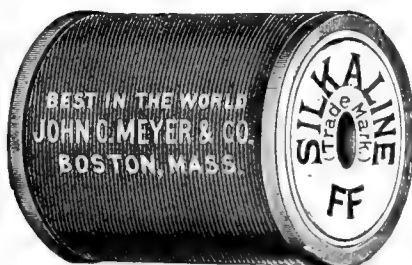

Mr. Hunter was very severely injured by being run down by an automobile several years ago and since that time his health has not been as good as formerly but he was always cheerful and optimistic and everyone in the trade who knew him respected him highly. The news of his death will bring sadness to many friends.

John Muir.

John Muir, the famous California naturalist, died on Dec. 24 of pneumonia. He was visiting his daughter, Mrs. Helen Muir Funk, at Daggett, a town in the desert of San Bernadino county, and fell ill. He was brought to Los Angeles for treatment, but sank rapidly, death coming at 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

John Muir was born in Dubar, Scotland. At the age of 11 years he came with his parents to this country and made his home first in Wisconsin, where by his own energy and industry he was finally graduated after a four years' course in the University of Wisconsin, in the class of 1864, following which he plunged into his life work of geologist, explorer and naturalist, making his home at Martinez, California. He traveled and explored extensively, making elaborate classifications of animal and plant life and wrote considerable in the form of magazine and newspaper articles. He published two books, "The Mountains of California" and "Our National Parks." His writings overflow with an exuberant love for nature and poetic descriptions that fascinate and inspire the reader. Of him the Boston Herald says:

"John Muir, like John Burroughs, with whom his name often has been linked, belonged to that school of British naturalists whose work was so fused with the writer's personality and so permeated by individual feeling that their output was as much literature as science. Philosopher and artist, as well as observer, he took a creative delight in all his work which no mere classification of details could have brought. He isolated himself for 10 years in the Sierra Nevada mountains, suffering untold hardships and perils in order to carry on his investigations. Harvard, Yale, Wisconsin and other universities granted him honorary degrees and he was elected to membership in many scientific societies."

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Boston had real New England Christmas weather—snow, ice, zero temperatures, sleighing, skating, parties, flowers and extremely busy florists in all parts of the trade. The day before Christmas was the coldest December 24th since 1872, a marked contrast to the same date last year when Indian summer and drizzling rain prevailed. Stock was plentiful; in fact, too much in some cases. It almost seemed as if the local growers had waited until Christmas to cut their entire year's product. There was a slight shortage in red flowers only. In direct contrast to the favorable report of holiday business done by the retailers comes the complaint from the salesmen in the markets that they could not secure satisfactory holiday prices. This is not surprising, considering the large supply on hand and the enormous sale of basket combinations of pine cones, alderberries, bayberries, etc., by the retailers. Wreaths, greenery and flowering plants all had a lively call. Azaleas and poinsettias sold best of all the potted stock. The wholesale houses bought heavily in the markets in order to fill their shipping orders. We would like to be able to say that this Christmas was a record-breaker, but that would certainly be an exaggeration. The truth of the matter is that the season was disappointing, except in a very few individual cases where extra efforts by way of advertising brought business up to its normal standard.

Wholesalers doing a shipping trade were badly discommoded by the tardiness of incoming express deliveries on Wednesday, goods being often several hours late and many outgoing orders had to be cancelled and the customers disappointed because the required material was not at hand. The express companies laid the blame on the slippery condition of the icy streets, and the overworked horses.

CINCINNATI The Christmas market was very weak. The supply was far in excess of needs and prices were the lowest we have ever had for Christmas. Growers who pickled their stock in an effort to get holiday prices were badly stung, for the receipts of good stock easily satisfied the needs and the soft blooms had to go into the ash-barrel. Carnation growers were the worst offenders in this respect. Since Christmas day business has been rather slow and stock has accumulated greatly. Offerings in roses including fine American Beauties continue large and excellent in quality. Carnation receipts too, are very heavy but the quantity of fancy stock is rather limited. Lilies are plentiful. Offerings in violets, double and single, orchids and lily of the valley are excellent and sufficient.

CHICAGO A great disappointment awaited Chicago wholesalers Christmas week. Prices began going down early in the week and by the time local sales were heaviest the market had gone to pieces. No one knew where to stop when the drop began and everything went sliding down the scale, till in the panic some carnations were actually sold for ten cents per bunch. American Beauties were also in the worst of the decline and prices dropped to one-fifth of the earlier quotations. Many declare conditions to have been the worst they had ever experienced. There are some, however, who insist that the great quantity of flowers sold must bring an average not so far below the sales of other years, but there are but few who can find any grounds for such a hope. The cuts were enormous and a quantity of flowers were held back that should have been offered days before or not offered at all. Prices had been fixed without apparently a knowledge of the chances of the immense crops and could not hope to be maintained after shipping orders were filled. The American Beauties from the East did not arrive in very good condition, many of them were damaged in transit and many were evidently soft when shipped.

The plant men did a splendid business for Christmas. Practically every plant was sold excepting a few begonias and cyclamen of which there were an unusually large quantity grown this year. The large motor trucks made prompt delivery possible even in the extreme cold weather and few plants were lost.

The market has been very quiet following Christmas. Every one had flowers enough and the calls on the wholesalers are not sufficient to move the left-overs from Christmas day. Each day brings new cuts and so the new week opens with slow sales and an oversupply of almost all kinds of stock.

NEW YORK We have varying reports from the battlefield of last week. Some are certainly jubilant. One prominent retailer says that he "was agreeably disappointed. The business outlook had been very blue but a few days before Christmas the sunshine of prosperity came out in the rifts between the clouds and we had a much more satisfactory trade than we expected. The cut flower trade was satisfactory and the stock certainly good. Exotic plant baskets were purchased in preference to those composed of flowering plants." From a leading wholesale firm we learn that they found their "rose business satisfactory and the Beauty business gave us their stock as we wanted it and profited by this course to the extent of $1.00 or $2.00 per 100 over and above what could have been realized had the stock been held back until the 24th." Other than the above the market report from this firm and from all others in the wholesale section are far from favorable and many of the retailers also confess to a falling off of 25 to 35 per cent from the normal Christmas business. But it is true that this was not unexpected and most of them acknowledge that they might easily have been much worse off.

All stock seemed to be of exceptionally good quality. Of course, there was the usual "pickling" by some of the growers who will not learn, and there was nothing that was really scarce. On Thursday morning business looked very promising in the wholesale district and considerable business was done but at about midnight Thursday, business shut off completely until Saturday, the 26th, and then there was only a moderate business done. As was expected, carnations flooded the market. They seemed to be just on crop. The highest price asked for the red varieties was 6c., the majority of this color selling for 3c. Other varieties of fine quality sold for $10 to $40 per thousand. Violets were equally plentiful. While some very best, 100 in a bunch, sold for 75c., quantities were sold for $3.50 to $5 per thousand and box after box was carried over and even today remain unsold. Never before probably had there been so many roses in this market. As in the case of violets and carnations, thousands were carried over and are still visible in the ice boxes. Red roses sold from $4 per hundred to $15 per hundred; but as is always the case, some especially fine blooms sold for 25c. or more. Yellow roses were abundant. The highest price on Sunburst was 20c. More sold at 15c. and from that down to 4c. The same with Aaron Wards. Arenbergs were in limited supply and while some of these were of poor quality, some higher grade blooms met with ready sale, 30c. being the very top. Ophelia, in limited supply, sold well. Rostands were a disappointment and did not clear out well. Irish Fireflame, not so plentiful, sold at $3 and $5 per hundred. Killarneys everywhere, 12c. being an exceptionally high figure for the pink varieties, down to 3c. for the smaller grades. About the same price prevailed for Taft and Killarney Brilliant. White Killarneys and other varieties of white roses were almost unsalable and were carried over in large quantities and will have to be cleared out this week at ridiculously low prices.

American Beauties seemed to be the one bright spot in the market. Earlier in the week the asking price was 60c. to 75c. and it is safe to say that the majority of the blooms of good quality cleared out at this figure, but on Christmas eve and Christmas morn, the supply having shortened up, $1 was asked and obtained. Shawyers ranged in price the same as Pink Killarneys. Russells were only in limited supply. There were a few Hadleys which sold well. Richmond was unquestionably in oversupply and did not begin to realize the prices of former years, 25c. being the outside figure for a very special bloom, while there were several thousand that were sold from $5 to $12 per hundred. Many of the Richmonds seen on the market were small flowers with weak necks and the retailers were shy in giving orders for them.

Another disappointing feature in the market were the orchids. The report had gone abroad for some weeks that there would be practically no supply of orchids for Christmas, but the contrary was the case, and they arrived by the hundreds on Thursday, with the result that today many wholesalers' windows have cattleyas of fine quality carried over from Christmas which will be compelled to be sold at low figures. Lily of the valley, too, was overplentiful. Lilies were very abundant at $6 and $8 per hundred. Gardenias quite equal to the demand at moderate prices. The novelty of Christmas with one of the wholesalers was a large display of gladiolus blooms. Rubrum lilies did not go at all. There were still a great many chrysanthemums in the market which met with only a moderate demand. Asparagus cleared out nicely, but the Southern was rejected on account of its dropping off. Mignonette of the best quality that was very fine indeed sold from 75c. to $1 per dozen. There were a few yellow Trumpets in the market bringing 75c. per doz. A limited supply of daphne, $3 per doz. Poinsettias had a very light demand at $2 per doz.

A great many shipments of flowers were received frozen stiff; in fact, the damage from frozen flowers this Christmas was much more than in any previous years, and the loss on this account will be very extensive. One of the wholesalers had a shipment of several hundred sprays of pure white lilac from Holland that had been shipped on Dec. 10, but owing to the delay of the steamer getting in, the lilac when unpacked was unsalable, but the grower of this lilac who accompanied the shipment claims that they can be shipped to reach here in good shape.

In the plant line ardisias and azaleas were a drug and many of them were left over unsold in the stores.

PHILADELPHIA Nineteen hundred and fourteen was distinctively a retailers' Christmas week. On the 23rd, when they saw stock coming in freely they began to hammer things. And they got it their own way. They could buy at their own figures and they did it—relentlessly. Prices broke badly all along the line and at the windup there was a big lot of stuff left unsold—no takers at any price. We have heard nothing of the retailers abating their prices. So far as we can learn—they gobbled it all, and let nothing go to their customers. The only bright spots are American Beauties, Lily of the valley and violets, Beauties here, through the good judgment of the growers and wholesalers, were listed reasonable—and much outside business came along. BAILEY'S NEW STANDARD
Cyclopedia of Horticulture

Six large quarto volumes. More than 3,600 pages. 24 exquisite full-page color plates. 96 full-page sepia halftones and more than 4,000 text engravings. 500 collaborators. Approximately 4,000 genera, 15,000 species and 40,000 plant names.

The new Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture has been freshly written in the light of the most recent research and experience. It is not merely an ordinary revision or corrected edition of the old Cyclopedia, but it is a new work from start to finish with enlarged boundaries geographically and practically; it supersedes and displaces all previous editions or reprints of every kind whatsoever. It is both an Encyclopaedia and a Manual, for with the aid of its Synopsis and Key, amateur and professional alike may quickly identify any plant, shrub or fruit contained within the set, and then receive expert instructions for its cultivation. Price $6.00 per volume. Two volumes have now been issued and the others will follow in succession. Order from brought from 50 to 75 cents and were well cleaned up where we hear that in other cities they are things too high at the start and so that error busted the market and let outsiders capture it. We hear that Chicago started special Beauties at $1 and wound up with 25 cents. Nothing like that happened here. All the same, growers generally will not get anywhere near 1913 returns, on their general products.

The florists are just winding up their Christmas rush, and to say that business has been up to expectations is putting it mildly. With fair weather, the downtown district has been thronged for the last four days, and during that time the florists, both wholesale and retail, have hardly had time to eat or sleep. The full returns for the Christmas trade will not be known for several days, but an enormous business has been done, not only down town, but even in the small shops in outlying districts; and any fear that the demand would run to cheap goods seems to have been without foundation. In fact, it is impossible at the moment to report any particular line as a leading feature, aside from the usual holly and greens, and the heavy movement of potted goods of all descriptions. Azaleas, both European importations and those from the Japanese gardens, have had a very large sale; and so have poinsettias, some of the latter offerings from local hothouses being fully equal to anything from other quarters. Begonia and cyclamen plants also have found a great demand, and orchids in pots have attracted considerable attention. As for cut flowers, roses are about at their best, and a very large cutting has been practically cleaned up, bringing very good prices, with little distinction as to varieties. A considerable part of the local cut was of course taken for northern shipments. Warmer weather has helped the violets a little, but hardly in time to give an adequate supply for the shipping trade. Carnations have advanced, as expected, with hardly enough to meet the demand. Lily of the valley has been quite plentiful up to Christmas eve, and is not likely to run short in the few hours remaining, though they are moving well. Some very fine large gardenias have come in, and are quickly snapped up. The cut of orchids has been fair, but will be closely cleaned up.

ST. LOUIS Christmas business this year was, from reports, as good as any heretofore. The plant trade was even greater than any we have had. Nearly all the retailers were sold out of anything in the plant line by Friday noon. The high quotations on cut flowers early in the week had caused the store men to lay in an extra supply of blooming plants and push them instead of cut flowers. Poinsettias, azaleas, Lorraine begonias and cyclamen were the leading plants in demand and good prices were obtained for them. Weather conditions on Thursday were good for delivery, needing only light covering, but on Friday it was close to zero and many deliveries were reported frozen. On Friday morning the flower prices came down and the demand increased somewhat—the market afforded everything in season and at the last minute plenty of it. This holding back of the stock by the growers caused these conditions and they are alone to blame. All seemed to have forgotten former experiences in this respect. Roses were a glut, Beauties came down from $12 to $8 per dozen. Carnations also suffered badly in the cut. There was a scarcity in Roman hyacinths, sweet peas and violets. These alone cleaned up. Paper Whites, lily of the valley and poinsettias were in plenty at usual prices. The plant grower had a harvest this year but the cut flower growers were not happy. After inspecting the different retail establishments after the rush of Friday we can safely say that the florists of this city are well satisfied with their holiday business.

exceptionally good and reported to have been better than that of last year. Several of the florists report having made more large sales than ever before and this is accounted for by the fact that the people gave fine flowers rather than the more expensive pieces of jewelry. Practically all of the stores had to double their forces. The snow storm of the day before served to delay deliveries to some extent, but everything was pretty well cleaned up by noon of Christmas day, although many plants were frozen while on the wagons and automobiles. All plants sold well. There was a heavy demand for Begonia Glory of Cincinnati, in sizes from $1.50 to $5. Cyclamen and azaleas also were popular. There were hardly enough poinsettias to go around. American Beauty roses cleaned up very well. Orchids and gardenias were sold out. Violets and sweet peas were in extra heavy demand. Lily of the valley was one of the few flowers that did not bring more than the regular price. Pussy willow made its appearance for the holiday trade, but met with few buyers. The two flowers that hung fire were narcissi and chrysanthemums.

Canal Dover, Ohio.—With workshops running one-third to one-half time, everyone complaining of hard times, we are away ahead of 1913 in local sales. Christmas very good. Carnations first call; roses in good demand; pot plants in increasing demand. Boxwood and holly wreaths freely called for. Now for the largest Valentine Day, Easter and Memorial Day in our history. SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:

THE BIG "IRON FRAMER" IS 72 x 500.

We furnished the materials, and they erected it. Mr. Harvey states that it took only six days after the side posts were set, and the eave plate on, to put up the complete iron frame. In nine days more, it was all glazed. To use Mr. Harvey's words — "Everything went together just like clock work."

Here is a Letter Lately Received From Alban Harvey & Sons, Brandywine, Pa.

"WE wish to express our sincere appreciation to you, for your kindness in having our truss houses repaired. We think we will have no further trouble with these houses, as the roofs now seem to be thoroughly supported.

It is only another instance of the pleasant dealing we have always had with the Lord & Burnham Company, and a further proof of their cheerful readiness to make good all their work.

We are very much pleased with the big iron frame house you furnished us last summer."

It was the sweet peas grown in this last big Iron Frame house, that walked away with so many prizes at the New York Show last spring. The stems ran from 12 to 16 inches, carrying four blooms. The Easter week cut was 200,000. In spite of losing a $5,000 tomato crop, this house produced its cost the first year.

Good, Strong, Well-Established Plants in 2 1/2 Inch Pots of the Exceedingly

VALUABLE NEW ROSES

Ophelia, Francis Scott Key and Prince E. C. d'Arenberg

These three new roses are additions to the most standard varieties. They are all strong, well-established plants, and have been found to have exceptional vigor.

OPHELIA. New variety, a very attractive, double rose, with very distinct, deep pink, double flowers, very fragrant, and very hardy. It is a very fine, double, bushy garden rose. Compared with its large size and double form, it is an exceedingly fine specimen. It promises to be exceedingly valuable, especially for spring, summer and fall flowering, when other less double roses are difficult to handle. Its keeping qualities are exceptional. Strong plants on own roots, 2 1/2-in. pots, now ready—$15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY. This variety, raised by Mr. John Cook, is very distinct, with a very different type of the indoor roses grown today. Flowers are very large and double, with a deep pink color, and the foliage is very dark green. It is a very fine, double, bushy garden rose. Compared with its large size and double form, it is an exceedingly fine specimen. It promises to be exceedingly valuable, especially for spring, summer and fall flowering, when other less double roses are difficult to handle. Its keeping qualities are exceptional. Strong plants on own roots, 2 1/2-in. pots, now ready—$15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

PRINCE E. C. D'ARENBERG. This variety might well have been termed Red Killarney, as it possesses so many of the good qualities of the Killarneys. In color, the flowers are similar to Killarney, but they are much more double, and it should prove a very much more profitable rose. Flowers have fine straight stems on all the grades from the shortest to the longest. It has fine foliage, comes away quickly, and is even a freer bloomer than the Killarneys. We believe it is the best all round red rose that we have today. Strong plants on own roots, 2 1/2-in. pots, now ready—$10.00 per 100, $80.00 per 1000.

We will be glad to quote on application, prices on all the newer and standard varieties—strong grafted plants ready in March.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Amaryllis

Amaryllis bulbs will now show signs of being ripened and some probably starting to push their flower spikes. To provide a succession it would be advisable to bring some in every ten days. It is not necessary to repot all the bulbs, but they should be examined to see that the drainage is efficient. Where the roots are active and sound and the pots of sufficient size for the bulbs, they will require only a liberal top dressing of rich mulch. It can be made equal parts of loam and well rotted manure and sand. After top dressing or potting the plants should have a temperature of at least 60 degrees at night. Give them a good syringing two or three times a day on bright days and keep the compost moist. Give enough ventilation to keep the temperature during the day at from 70 to 78 degrees.

Gloxinias

Gloxinias make one of the best show plants we have, as well as being a good seller. Start the bulbs in flats, crocked and filled to within an inch of the top with equal parts loam, leaf mold and sand. An inch between the bulbs will be enough. Cover with soil and place in a house about 60 degrees at night. Keep the compost moist, but not wet until they have made top-growth. When they have made roots they can be lifted and potted in a mixture of fibrous soil four parts, leaf mold two parts, well pulverized cow manure two parts, and some sand, and placed well up to the glass.

Orchids

Odontoglossums are again picking up and will, barring unforeseen contingencies, give a fine crop of flowers the coming spring. They should, during winter months, get as much of old Sol's rays as possible. It is utterly wrong to give them a dark north space where in midwinter no sun will strike them for months. It is also a mistake to give them too low a night temperature. We can educate them to 50 or even 55 degrees, and, given this night temperature and plenty of sun, it is really astonishing how much progress they will make. The leaves should take on a bronzy hue. This makes them harder and better fitted to stand our hot and severe summers. Do not keep the houses too damp during dull murky weather, but during bright weather you can damp down two or three times a day. Use any spare time now in cleaning and sponging the orchids. These orchids will not stand a stagnate or humid atmosphere and do well. Of course, there will be plenty of days when we cannot ventilate, but when the weather permits always give ventilation.

Vincas

Strong, salable stock cannot well be had from cuttings in good time for next spring if put in the sand as late as this, but fine stock for another season's trade to be grown into size under field culture next summer may thus be obtained. It is available to pot divisions for the present in as small pots as possible so that at about the beginning of March the last shift into four-inch pots provides them with large amounts of fresh soil and nutriment to which they will then more readily take than now. Thrifty plants in 3-inch pots with three or four hangers and more coming also sell good and are to be preferred to overgrown roots. In order to keep these young vincas growing right along they should have a temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees at night.

Unsold Azaleas

By giving these plants a little care they can be had in good flowering shape by next Christmas. Give them a cool house. Anything above the freezing point will do. Forty degrees or thereabouts till after Easter, when there will be more to join their ranks, the treatment of which I will deal with in the proper season. Do not let these azaleas dry out at the roots as it is sure to injure them.

Next Week: Bulbous Stock; Bedding Plants; Forcing Lilies; Seeds to be Sown; Sowing Smilax; Stock Poinsettias

A common cause We find in the reading columns of our British exchanges frequent complaint during the past two months of the serious injury sustained by the regular trade there similar to what the trade in this country has suffered from the incursions of a certain class of Dutch retailer, who, having sold all the stock they could at the time at fixed prices, undertake to work off the balance on the legitimate customers of the regular dealer, either directly or through some transient emergency channel, at prices away below established rates. We propose the trade here as well as in England will have to "grin and bear it" for the time being, but they might perhaps get together the material for future retributive justice by adopting the policy that is being advocated in England, of ascertaining whenever possible, the identity of all foreign houses that have been indulging in this "penny-wise but pound-foolish" business and then letting them severely alone ever after.

Two ways of boosting prices

Our Christmas reports from the leading wholesale flower markets as published last week furnish food for thought for any grower dependent upon the wholesale markets for his livelihood. We were particularly interested in the vicissitudes of the American Beauty rose as reported in the two greatest markets for this flower—New York and Chicago. In Chicago we are told that the Beauty started out at top figures and then slid down the scale until it was offered at about one-fifth of the earlier quotations. In New York low prices prevailed at the beginning but under the incentive of the lively demand, for which these moderate prices were at least partially responsible, values stiffened up, advancing 30 to 40 per cent by Christmas morning. The only valid excuse for advanced Christmas prices is a demand in excess of the supply and the buyers themselves are partially responsible for such advances, in their rivalry to secure the goods. An artificial high price is, however, almost sure to come to grief, as has happened times without number.

Crude methods and the penalty

Another sidelight upon the Christmas situation in Chicago is thrown by our correspondent in that city in the remark that prices had been fixed apparently without any knowledge of the magnitude of the available crops and could not hope to be maintained after shipping orders had been filled. The further information from Chicago and elsewhere to the effect that large quantities of flowers in the markets gave evidence that they had been held back and should have been offered days before or not offered at all, is significant. This story is hoary with age but, despite all the painful lessons as to the suicidal character of such practices the "pickler" seems unable to resist the temptation to pickle and so destroy the market for himself and everybody else. The pickled stuff is sent in first and the customer at a distance gets it and at enhanced prices for which there is no justification while the local buyer gets the fresh goods which come in last, and at prices usually based strictly on supply and demand. We have suggested before, on several occasions, that one of the greatest needs of the central markets which are looked to for the standards of value from time to time is some comprehensive and well conducted plan for securing advance trade information as to the extent and quality of the various crops in different localities available from time to time. Such an enterprise should and undoubtedly would, in time, become self-supporting but, anyway, it would be a legitimate and proper function for the National Society to assume and to direct—a much more practical and useful project for the advancement and elevation of the flower business than the various visionary schemes which have been advocated for "schools of horticulture," for example, under the Society's auspices.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Potting Soil

With the prevailing cold weather, we are sorry for any growers who could not make arrangements to have a good store of soil covered to keep the frost out. It is a hard labor wasted to have men with picks trying to get into the soil heap when there is a foot or more of frost in it. This soil will take quite a while to thaw out and get warm, so it should be brought into the potting shed a little sooner than soil that was stored in a covered or heated shed. Make sure that it will dry out sufficiently before it has to be used, and that it is warm enough. The roots on the cuttings when they leave the sand are very tender, and will therefore be set back a little if they are potted into soil that is very cold. Avoid using wet soil, as this is bad for the work, and will pack down too much, so that if the soil is heavy at all it will interfere with the drainage a good deal. For the first potting it will be best to use a soil that is not too heavy, and does not contain too much manure. Avoid using any fertilizer in the soil for the first potting, unless the season is advanced, and the young plants are to remain in the pots for a while. We, as a rule, try to induce the plants to make roots as much as possible while they are in the small pots, depending on repotting to make the plants grow later on. The soil should have plenty of fibre into it to make it porous. A good sod used in making the heap will do all this.

Supply of Pots

If these are not already ordered, see that there are enough to suffice for the season, for there is nothing so provoking as to have to wait for a shipment of pots, and having a lot of cuttings in sand. Better make an inventory of all on hand and there will be no time wasted later on. Order good pots even if they are a trifle more expensive. A good pot should be porous, and not too hard to absorb water. If a pot does not do this it is wrong somewhere.

The First Potting

We use two-and-a-quarter-inch pots for the first potting. Two-inch pots are very small and the plants are likely to get pot bound if they are not shifted as soon as is necessary. With the rush that comes on as a rule it sometimes happens that even the best run place will be behind with some of the work, and the plants in a pot that is a little larger will stand a little more. We never use crock in a pot of this size, but provide a good drainage for the bench that the plants are set on. Coal ashes screened will make a good surface. In potting make sure that all the holes in the bottoms of the pots are open, as it will happen with new pots that a large number will have a very thin layer of clay over the opening, thus stopping all drainage. All cuttings in pots like this will die very shortly, as they do not like too much water, and must have drainage, as must all growing plants. Be very careful not to crush any roots when handling the cuttings, and do not firm the soil too much, merely pressing it down gently. Do not fill up the pots too full, for this would bother when the plants are watered. Also be very careful not to fill one pot more than the other. If this is done, there will be little trouble to keep the cuttings at the same stage of moisture, for the pots can be filled with water evenly, and then all will receive nearly the same amount. Be sure to set the pots on the bench level, for a pot set crooked not only looks bad, but cannot be watered right, and as a rule will always be dry. Nice straight rows will also add to the appearance of the work, and perhaps make the plants grow a least bit better. It will be easier to keep track of them, too. Point all the leaves one way, and that is towards the northwest if the houses run east and west. With the leaves this way the cuttings will not shade one another, or interfere with one another's growth. It will also be better for syringing. As soon as the cuttings are potted and taken into the greenhouse, shade them well with newspapers, using them double the first few days, and gradually diminishing this, and putting the papers on later in the morning, and removing them at night until at last the cuttings are shaded only for a while at noon, and then the shade is left off altogether.

ANTHRACNOSE ON SNAPDRAGON.

"Horticulture," Boston:

I enclose a few shoots of snapdragons which are affected. I will be greatly obliged if you can tell me what is the cause and, if possible, a remedy for same.

Yours respectfully,

New York,

W. W.

The disease appearing on the snapdragon is Anthracnose, caused by Colletotrichum antirrhini Stewart. This disease attacks both the stem and foliage, often defoliating and finally killing the aerial portions of the plant. However, it is not often so severe on plants in the greenhouse.

This disease usually appears first on plants when out of doors, and is transmitted on cuttings; hence the first combative measure should be to prevent such transmission by selecting cuttings only from healthy plants. It is not probable that infection is transmitted by seed. In the case of outdoor plants, it is necessary to spray with Bordeaux mixture every one or two weeks through the season in order to keep the disease in check. Spraying is not often necessary or desirable in the greenhouse, but in case the disease becomes severe, spraying with ammoniacal copper carbonate may be resorted to. The formula for this solution is as follows:

Copper carbonate	5 oz.
Ammonia (26 Baumé)	3 pints
Water	50 gals.

The stock solution may be made up by mixing the first two ingredients, and small amounts may be diluted with water in the proper proportion as needed. This spray is preferable in the greenhouse to Bordeaux because it does not show spots on the leaves.

However, it should be possible to keep this disease in check under greenhouse conditions by proper ventilation and the avoidance of draughts and water on the foliage. If water is allowed to stand on the foliage it of course provides a favorable medium for spore germination, and the plant is more readily infected.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

FLORISTS' CLUB OF PHILADELPHIA.

At the January meeting of this club it was voted 12 to 16, as the sense of the meeting that the hall at Broad street and Allegheny Ave. selected by the National Flower Show Committee is not a suitable place for the National Flower Show.

The speaker of the evening was Mr. Berlet, a Walnut St. jeweler, who discoursed very ably on business-bringing methods and gave his ideas in particular as to how to run a flower show. A letter to John Westcott was read by the secretary. It was from the N. Y. Florists' Club inviting their Philadelphia brethren to join them in their trip to the Carnation Convention. No action was taken but no doubt the heaven will work indirectly.

The report of the committee on exhibits was as follows:

"The Pennock-Meehan Company staged the following exhibits for the Bassett & Washburn Company, Hinsdale, Ill.

Four vases of seedling carnations, a rose pink seedling named Helen Washburn, a dark pink, a light pink, and a red seedling named Belle Washburn. All of these were large well formed flowers on long, stout stems. The dark pink variety was exceedingly fine.

A vase of the new carnation, Mrs. Charles Seigward, raised and grown by Charles Seigward, of Baltimore, a larger and seemingly improved flower of bright Eucharis color.

A vase of very fine flowers of carnation Mrs. Akehurst, the large new pink.

A vase of large fine flowers of the new rose, Hoosier Beauty, from the E. G. Hill Company, Richmond, Ind.

Also a vase of very fine blooms of the new rose, Mrs. Moorfield Story, grown by the Waban Rose Conservatories of Natick, Mass. This new rose is a light bluish in color and a very large flower of splendid form, showing a deep shade of pink in the centre. It is borne on long stout stems. Altogether it is a splendid addition to the list of winter blooming roses."

The members present were exceedingly interested in all of the above and the merits of the different subjects were eagerly discussed and the general opinion seemed to be very flattering to each and all of them. Hoosier Beauty is certainly a dandy, far superior to Richmond.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF NEW YORK.

An exhibition will be held on Wednesday, January 20th, at the American Museum of Natural History, 77th street and Columbus avenue, N. Y., city. Premiums for orchid blooms, carnations, sweet peas, antirrhinum and schizanthus are offered. Prizes can also be awarded for meritorious exhibits not provided for in the schedule, and such exhibits are solicited. So if you have an interesting or unusual plant or flower, or a specimen showing unusual skill in cultivation, bring it along, for it may win a prize. Schedules are now ready for distribution, and will be sent upon application to the secretary, George V. Nash, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, N. Y. city.

A meeting of the society will be held at 4 p. m. at which a lecture will be delivered by William N. Craig, on "The Home Vegetable Garden."

Rules Governing the Contest for Membership Prize.

1. Any S. A. F. member desiring to enter the contest shall first register by sending his name and address to the National Secretary, John Young, 53 West 28th Street, New York, on or before March 1, 1915, who will return application blanks immediately.

2. The contestants shall forward to the secretary at least once a month a list of new members secured, accompanied with fee, five dollars for each annual member, and thirty dollars for each new life member. Each annual member shall count one, but each life member shall count five in the contest.

3. The Secretary shall publish a list of the new members thus secured and accredit the contestants securing them in a notice in the trade papers monthly. No one shall be considered as entitled to the prize unless at least fifty memberships have been accredited to him.

4. The prize shall be selected by a committee of three, two of whom shall be appointed by the President and one by the winning contestant.

NEW JERSEY FLORICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The regular monthly meeting of this society was held in Orange, Monday evening, Jan. 4th. Election of officers resulted as follows: President, Henry Halbig; vice-president, Arthur W. Jackson; treasurer, Fritz Bergelund; secretary, Geo. W. Strange; executive committee, Henry Halbig, Arthur Jackson, Fritz Bergelund, Geo. W. Strange, Edwin Thomas, Wm. Reid, Chas. Ashmead, Frank C. Drews, George Wraight, Max Schneider; arbitration committee, Frank C. Drews, chairman, Wm. Reid, Geo. Wraight, John Hayes; Dietrich Kindsgrab, room and library committee, John L. Collins, Edw. A. Manda, Arthur Jackson, Edgar Bourne, Emil Panuska; essay committee, Geo. W. Strange, Jos. A. Manda, Geo. Wraight, A. A. Thomas, Wm. Reid; auditing committee, Frank C. Drews, Emil Panuska, Alfred A. Thomas.

The society decided not to hold its annual dinner. It was also decided best for the society to adopt for the coming year a scale of points, consisting of six classes, namely:

Class 1. Best orchid plant in flower: 1st, $7.00; 2nd, $5.00; 3rd, $2.00.

Class 2. Vase of 12 roses, one or more varieties: 1st, $7.00; 2nd, $5.00; 3rd, $2.00.

Class 3. Vase of 12 carnations, one or more varieties: 1st, $7.00; 2nd, $5.00; 3rd, $2.00.

Class 4. Foliage or flowering plant: 1st, $5.00; 2nd, $3.00; 3rd, $2.00.

Class 5. Vase of cut flowers, any other than above: 1st, $5.00; 2nd, $3.00; 3rd, $2.00.

Class 6. Bunch of fifty violets or sweet peas: 1st, $5.00; 2nd, $3.00; 3rd, $2.00.

The winner among the highest number of points for the entire 8 monthly competitions to receive the prizes.

Awards for the evening were as follows:

Peter Hauck, Jr., gard. Max Schneider, class 1, 85 points; class 4, 65 points; class 5, 75 points; class 6, 65 points. Mrs. A. J. Moulton, gard. Arthur Jackson, class 6, 65 points. Mrs. Wm. Barr, gard. Emil Panuska, class 1, 60 points. Mrs. A. J. Moulton was highly recommended for plate of mushrooms.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

David F. Roy has been re-elected president of the New Bedford, Mass. Horticultural Society.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held on Monday night, January 11, when the new officers will be duly inaugurated.

The sixteenth annual dinner of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society will be held at the Florence Inn, Tarrytown, N. Y., on January 12, 7 P. M. A big occasion as heretofore.

The National Flower Show Committee held a session in New York this week and the draft for the complete schedule for the National Flower Show for 1916 is now about finished.

The St. Louis Florist Club will hold its next meeting on Thursday, Jan. 14, at 2 o'clock. The importance of this meeting should bring out the members. A final vote on the Spring Flower Show will be taken.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society awarded to E. B. Dane a silver medal for a beautiful specimen, Cattleya Trianae alba and to Donald MacKenzie, gardener for Mr. Dane a cultural certificate for a plant of Chysis aurea bearing eight flowers.

The twenty-sixth annual meeting of the South Dakota State Horticultural Society will be held on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, January 19, 20, 21, 1915, at the City Hall in Yankton, South Dakota. A very interesting program has been arranged. The secretary is N. E. Hansen, Brookings.

The regular meeting of the Horticultural Club of Boston was held at the Parker House on Wednesday evening, January 6. Dr. George E. Stone was the guest of honor. He gave a very valuable talk on plant pathology. The table was beautifully decorated with vases of carnation Alice, the contribution of Peter Fisher.

The inaugural meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for the year 1915 will be held at eleven o'clock, a. m., on Saturday, January 9, 1915, at Horticultural Hall, Boston. The business of the meeting will be the hearing of an inaugural address by the President, the report of the Board of Trustees, the reports of officers, and the reports of the chairmen of the various committees.

WILLIAM P. RICH, Sec'y.

The annual meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held Thursday evening, December 31. The following named officers were elected for the coming year: W. Jamison, pres.; J. Featherstone, vice pres.; E. W. Neubrand, sec'y; C. J. Weeks, treas.; Thos. A. Lee, press sec'y.

This being Carnation Night a fine display of cut blooms were exhibited. 1st prize for three varieties, six of each was awarded to A. Golding, supt. for D. G. Reid, who also received certificate of merit for vase of Princess Dagmar and cultural certificate for Mignonette. Honorable mention was given to J. W. Smith, Scott Bros., A. Weeks and W. F. Ross for other exhibits of carnations. A very fine vase of Euphorbia was staged by A. Weeks and received a cultural certificate.

NURSERY GROWN HOLLY

With reference to the propagating of Ilex opaca as expounded by Mr. Hubert M. Canning in the HORTICULTURE of Nov. 21, I enclose a photograph of a holly bed and some cuttings as grown in Mt. Auburn Cemetery. We find it much more practical to take cuttings in August, put them in the sand bed, syringe them four or five times on bright days, and we have them rooted in from four to six weeks. This process naturally prevents the necessity for discarding of so many non-fruit-bearing plants as referred to by Mr. Canning. The selection of fruit or non-fruiting plants is entirely optional with the one who selects the cuttings, insofar as he obtains the cuttings from a fruiting plant, or from one that produces the pollen. It is important, however, that some plants of the pollen-bearing variety be distributed throughout the garden, in order that fruit-bearing plants may be induced to set their fruit. Consequently we must take some cuttings from non-fruiting plants.

Close observation of the cutting to the left in the photograph reveals a berry. These cuttings were taken a year ago last August, and are of a size now which it would take from three to four years to obtain from seed. After potting them we keep them in a cool house during the first winter. The spring following they are planted in the nursery where they remain until large enough to use. Cuttings taken in this climate are naturally much more able to withstand the rigorous New England winters than plants imported from warmer locations.

The suggestion of Mr. Frank Buffington, in the HORTICULTURE of Dec. 5, as to removing the leaves of hollies before planting, is a very satisfactory and practical way to prevent the loss of many plants.

L. G. VAN LEEUWEN.
Cambridge, Mass.

Many valuable points were brought out on the cultivation of carnations through the discussion which followed the judging.

A prize will be awarded for the best flowering plant at the next meeting. The annual dinner of the society will be held at the Florence Inn, Jan. 12, at 7 P. M.

TREE WALKS AND TALKS IN PARKS.

Delivered at Hartford before the New England Park Institute, October 22, 1914, by H. W. Hodge, Landscape Engineer, for the Park Department of Springfield, Mass.

Among the many complex phases of park activity of today the newest is perhaps the "Walking Talk on Tree."

Nature study in some form has ever been of vital interest to man, at first as a means to live and later also from a sense of love and appreciation of the beauties and the wonders of the outdoor world. Besides the preservation of the plants and the development of the art of gardening, the park departments are taking up the study of the parks as the recreation grounds of the city. "Walking Talks on Trees," of some educational value, may be classified as a recreation and are usually considered as such.

In our climate the average amateur student of nature turns to books when the flowers are gone and most of New England's trees are bare. However, for some time many of the agricultural colleges and various institutions interested in the study of horticulture have been teaching the characteristics and identifications of trees during the winter season. Led by the instructor the students walk through the arboretum or woods where various trees are noted and classified at first hand. Talks and lectures of a popular nature are conducted by the management of Arnold Arboretum of Harvard University. The Hampden County Horticultural Society conducted a talk on the trees of Forest Park, Springfield, in April. All of these talks have been very well attended.

In the fall of 1913 walking talks for the public were conducted in the Boston Public Parks, under the leadership of Mr. Fischer of Franklin Park. During the same season Supt. G. A. Parker introduced the Walking Talk on Trees, Shrubs and Planting Effects in Hartford Public Parks. Talks were conducted through the many public parks and Supt. G. H. Hollister personally conducted several successful walks in Keney Park. The walks will be continued in Hartford this season.

As leader of the walks in the Public Parks of Hartford last fall I suggest the following:

Selection of Route.

Select if possible a route having a variety of native and introduced trees. Groups of trees as well as specimens and occasionally an opportunity to identify trees at a distance by general characteristics and shape, give variety and therefore add to the interest. Some of the evergreens and any rare or unusual specimens give points of special interest. Usually some trees will be found which will offer opportunity to discuss tree care, including surgery, combating insects, pruning, planting, moving, etc. Some time may well be spent on this phase of the subject as many are personally interested, having trees and shrubs of their own needing care.

The length of the route may be determined in a general way by (1) make up of the party, age, women and children, etc.; (2) condition of the ground to be covered, whether swampy, rocky, hilly, etc.; (3) the weather, and (4) time for walk. During cold weather the talks should be made shorter and the walking intervals longer. Talk enough to keep up the interest and walk enough to keep warm. Two miles is ordinarily the limit for an afternoon. Keep in mind that while nearly all of the party know the common trees very few know that there are many species of oaks, that the box-elder is a maple, etc. A number of trees of one genera affords a chance to note their common characteristics and differences.

At the beginning of the walk a word about the structure of a tree and the various functions of the many parts makes a good introduction. A small gray birch may well be selected to demonstrate. The value of some definite order of describing the trees should not be overlooked. Some of my talks were in the form of lectures for the boys of the wood-working classes of the manual training schools. Many of these boys had never seen to know them the common trees from which their wood came. They took notes so it was advisable to follow some outline rather closely. The following met with the approval of the teachers and worked out well:

Common name: Give all common names as there are many local ones. Give origin of name and meaning, etc.

Scientific name: Reason and need of, etc. (Introduce a short discussion of the use of scientific names, their value, etc.)

Habitat or distribution: Rocky, swamp, meadow, or other situation. Native or introduced, and where found.

Shape: Habit of growth, shape of tree, size, etc.

Characteristics: Bark—Color, texture, close or loose, etc. Twigs—Shape, color, arrangements, etc. Leaves—Shape, size, arrangement, texture, etc. Buds—Size, shape, color, etc. Fruits—Size, shape, color, kind, etc.

Means of propagation: From seed cuttings, etc.

Means of identification: Including comparisons with characteristics of other trees.

Value: Commercially. Wood—Texture, durability, color, grain, hard or soft, etc.

Planting and ornamental uses: Shade, as windbreak, growth, formal, etc.

A much more informal talk is preferable for a general party when questions of general interest may be answered as they suggest themselves. Lists of the trees to be found on the walks were given out in Hartford. These contained the scientific and common names, the former arranged alphabetically, thus saving much time otherwise spent in repeating and spelling names. Before breaking up it is well to announce and outline the next walk. The campfire and hot coffee and frankfurts during cold weather added much to the comfort and enjoyment of the tramps over the frozen ground and snow.

"Walking Talks" in the future could well include the entire year and the birds, animals, and plants in their season. I believe that directed nature study will surely become a part of the park work as has directed play.

PROPAGATING HOUSE,
ALVA N. PIERSON, Cromwell, Conn.

The picture on this page and the one which appears on the cover page of this issue give glimpses of a young rose house just planted and a propagating house in the busy shipping season for young stock, in the mammoth Pierson range at Cromwell, Conn. The place is almost a town of itself employing half a thousand men, more or less, and exciting wonder and admiration on all sides. It is as to where a market can be found for the enormous quantities of plants and flowers that are produced.

GREENHOUSE ROSES

our specialty. In quantity and quality. Whether for a private greenhouse or for extensive commercial establishments, Pierson's roses from Cromwell are to be depended upon for results.

This is Francis Scott Key. Big bold flowers on heavy stems. In color, a cerise pink. A rose for twelve months a year and the finest summer rose in existence. Our catalog describes our roses as well as the other stock we grow. Send for it.

MORE POTASH COMING

American crops and soils are still as hungry for Potash as before the outbreak of the European War, which curtailed the Potash shipments.

Some of the Fertilizer Companies are trying to induce farmers to buy the one-sided low Potash or no Potash fertilizers of a generation ago. This means a fertilizer that is profitable to the manufacturer, but not the best for the farmer. When the Syndicate in 1910 started the direct sales of Potash to dealers and farmers at reasonable prices, Potash sales increased 65 per cent. in one year, a clear proof that farmers know that Potash Pays. They know that Potash gives good yields, good quality and resistance to plant diseases.

Many of the Fertilizer Manufacturers are willing to meet the farmer's wishes and sell him what he thinks he needs. These manufacturers are now willing to furnish as much Potash as they can secure. They offer goods with 5 per cent. and even in some cases 10 per cent. Potash, if the farmers insist on it.

Shipping conditions are improving, more Potash is coming forward although the costs of production and transportation are higher. The higher price of fertilizers is not due wholly to the slightly higher cost of Potash. Much of the Potash that will be used in next spring's fertilizer had reached America before the war started.

There is no substitute for Potash.

We can no more return to the fertilizer of twenty years ago than we can return to the inefficient farm implements or unprofitable livestock of that period.

H. A. HUSTON.

port of his demise came as a distinct shock to his many friends here.

Munson, though well-known to the trade, was a young man, just turned 48. He came to this country 22 years ago from Sweden, his native country, in which he, except for a short sojourn in Denmark, learned and practiced his profession in which he was remarkably skillful, so much so that after but a short time spent with Aug. S. Swanson of St. Paul, The Smith Floral Co., of Minneapolis tendered him the position of foreman and manager of their extensive plant. After three years of success here, he struck out for himself, and as proprietor of the Minneapolis Floral Company for the last 17 years, he certainly demonstrated what skill, energy, perseverance and thrift, when associated and properly directed can accomplish. He built up a business in his line from nothing to the largest in the state.

Munson was first of all a practical man and a hard worker, still he took time and great pleasure in raising roses from seed, and it was a source of endless joy and pride when he could show an interested friend the results of some of his experiments, and then he took no account of time or business when pointing out the good points or merits of some child of his just opening its first flower. Many of his new roses were well known locally, and at least two were known to the trade, Kate Moulton and Minnetonka.

Being such a busy man and constantly absorbed in his work, he did not seem to have found time or thought about choosing a life partner to share his successes and divide his disappointments until about four years ago. He left no family, except the widow and an adopted daughter.

The esteem and regard in which he was held by those who knew him best was amply testified to by the wealth of floral tributes and the great outpouring of the fraternity, who in spite of the inconvenience of the busy holiday season nevertheless gathered about his bier almost to a man, when on the last day of the year his body was laid to rest at the beautiful Lake-wood Cemetery.

Enjoy your well earned rest, old friend, And may your memory be an inspiration to us all.

GIVE THEM THE FLOWERS NOW.

By Leigh M. Hodges

Closed eyes can't see the white roses,
Closed hands can't hold them, you know,
Bright life is still shining through them,
The roses that sweeten the air below.
Don't let the peace beyond open to
The vision of earth dwell on Late in time we can repeat
So give them the flowers now!

He saw the struggles of the
He saw the early dawn
Nights of time to him
And this, his first Wrote good advice
When he brushed the Naught can avail after parting,
So give them the flowers now!

Blooms from the happy heart's garden
Planted in the soil of life,
Brighter than the earth's flowers,
We know that they will live,
Even when the stock
To dwell in the lives of many,
So give them the flowers now!

SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers—President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif.; First Vice-President, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Second Vice-President, F. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa.; Secretary and Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary, S. L. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O.

Mail Order Trade.

Reports from the mail order trade indicate that the season has opened with a fairly good promise and if stocks in certain directions will hold out, the expectation among the mail order houses seems to be that they will have a prosperous and satisfactory season. It is, of course, very early to make predictions along these lines but a good beginning is always most satisfactory in any enterprise, and none more so than the mail order business.

Bean Demand.

The hunger for seed beans has not by any means been satisfied, and those fortunate enough to have any for sale are finding a ready market at unusually high figures. Some of the houses who deal largely with truck farmers are a little pessimistic about the demand for beans the coming year, as it is common knowledge that green beans sold slowly during the latter part of last season and at very unsatisfactory prices. For this reason they think that the demand will be light, and that notwithstanding the great shortage there will be enough to meet requirements at the present high figures.

The demand for beans of the 1915 crop is most remarkable showing conclusively how low seed stocks must be. Reliable information which reaches us says that a number of the larger growers are endeavoring to make contracts with one another, or at least with one or two of the largest producers. It does not seem that anyone would be able to take care of trade of this character this year, as the demand from regular customers will doubtless consume all available seed stocks.

Peas.

There is more interest shown in peas than a year ago as much of the surplus carried into this year will be disposed of before the end of the present season and dealers will have to provide for next year's requirements. We understand that a majority of growers of peas and beans decline to accept orders for the latter item unless accompanied by fairly liberal orders for peas. This is not to be wondered at for the reasons already stated above.

European Seeds.

Importations of seed from Europe are coming in very slowly, and many of the dealers who have been banking on the promises of European growers are beginning to feel uneasy lest they have been leaning on a broken reed. Some of the items they need badly from abroad they will be unable to secure now at any price, whereas these items might have been bought two or three months ago. Reports from more than one source are to the effect that many of the biennials which are ordinarily produced in France will be classed as practical failures for the coming year. Whether these failures can be made good from other sources remains to be seen. Probably some of them can; others we do not believe can be supplied from reliable sources.

A. S. T. Convention.

A number of the California seed growers are now in the East and we understand are working up sentiment in favor of the 1915 convention of the American Seed Trade Association being held in San Francisco. Reference has been made to this matter on two or three occasions and it will not be long now before the momentous question will be settled as the executive committee will meet some time this month to pass on the matter. It is not for us to boom California or to meddle in the affairs of the Seed Trade Association, but we believe, nevertheless that should the executive committee decide on California, it will meet with very general approval. We shall doubtless have the pleasure of announcing the decision of the committee in the near future.

Bulbs and Seeds in San Francisco.

Owing to the practice in former years of dumping surplus bulbs on the market about this time, a good many growers are beginning to look around for bargains. Whether they will get them or not is still uncertain, as many of the dealers, at least, seem to be pretty well cleaned up, and of those who are not, some will undoubtedly plant their own surplus.

Seed dealers find things rather quiet at present, but look for quite a rush of business within the next two months. They have recently had a fair business in Spencer sweet peas, and sales of eschscholtzia seed have been heavy. This is due to a popular movement to cover bare places with these flowers, typical of California, in honor of the Exposition year.

Of Interest to Retail Florists

THE ANTI-FLOWER EDICTS.

Editor HORTICULTURE

Dear Sir: With interest I read your editorials every issue. Any man, preacher, priest, potentate or ordinary every day citizen that places one straw in the way to make the florist as mentioned in your editorial notes of January 2 is uncivilized, and the biggest "bonehead" ever was. Plainly speaking, it is ignorance with a large capital I. Where there is one dollar spent for flowers, there are one thousand spent for luxuries that all lead more or less to vice and the degradation of mankind. Admit that flowers are a luxury, that is the worst said. Are they not elevating? Do they lead to the penitentiary, to the asylum? No, hardly. Are they not cupid's leafy bower? You associate them with mother's love,—yes, with the little babe's caress. God help the ignorant who passes over so many lines of evil luxuries to injure the dissemination of one of nature's most sublime creations, flowers.

C. P. DUDLEY,

Parkersburg, W. Va.

TO MY FELLOW CRAFTSMEN.

Cheer up, the war is over! Before spring peace will reign throughout Europe. There is not a statesman, banker nor merchant prince who is not thoroughly convinced of this by this time. It is only natural that some should be reluctant to admit this, but good sense will prevail, and in due time, say within six or eight weeks, I believe the general desire for the cessation of hostilities will become manifest. Do not allow yourself to be influenced by the fairy tales that have been printed in most of our newspapers. In order to know the true conditions in relation to foreign countries, it is essential to be familiar with the general characteristics of the people in those countries.

We are soon to enter upon an era of great prosperity, for this country will be the first to be benefited when the wheels of commerce are again put in motion throughout the world. Whether we have statesmen, college professors or school boys at the head of our Nation will make little difference.

It is not my intention to delve into the merits or demerits of the various belligerents. "With malice toward none and charity for all."

A. J. GUTMAN

New York.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

A. S. McDonald, of Lexington, is showing some fine Chrys. blooms to the flower market.

John A. Frazer of Woburn is the latest addition to the list of stallholders in the Boston Flower Exchange.

A splendid crop of yellow marguerites is being now cut by J. K. Chandler & Sons of Tewksbury and are among the specialties looked for by the buyers.

Penn the Florist has rented a large basement opposite his store, which is to be used for storage and make-up work. This addition gives this firm probably the largest floor space of any retail florist in New England.

Some specialties noted this week are mignonette from Herman Waldecker of Braintree; French Golden Spur from Wm. Hannan & Sons of Dorchester; carnation Morning Glow from Ed. Winkler of Wakefield.

Wax Bros. featured a table decoration in one of their windows this week. It was very tastefully made up of yellow marguerites and batchelor buttons as a low centre piece with appropriate corsages and boutonnières at each plate.

Thos. J. Clark of 443 Boylston street, suffered an untimely loss before Christmas. With a store crowded with plants of all kinds the heat gave out the night before Christmas and caused a loss of over $400 by frost. Except for this unfortunate incident the holiday season was highly successful, the best yet in the history of this firm.

A sensational floral piece from Penn the Florist was noted at the inauguration of Gov. David I. Walsh, Jan. 7. It consisted of a barrel filled with long stemmed Killarneys, spreading about six feet in diameter. Several newspaper photographers were seen taking the picture of this piece, which was but one of scores sent by friends of the Governor.

H. Kolow of Summer street, who recently doubled the size of his store, is doing a remarkable business, considering the facilities at hand. Although still one of the smallest stores in the city the net income is probably fully as much as some of the larger stores. Thousands of people pass by daily on their way to and from the railroad station, thus making the location particularly favorable.

A credit association is being formed by local growers as a result of the meeting held Dec. 26 by the creditors of Frank W. Houghton. There have been many failures during the last few years and this action is necessarily the ultimate outcome of the severe losses suffered by the growers and salesmen. The credit association and retail distribution through co-operative stores, public markets, etc., are some of the many problems that are being actively discussed by local growers and other members of the trade in anticipation of the meeting to be held Jan. 11 at the American House.

New London, Wis. Guy Blondy has purchased a half interest in the Guelson Floral Co.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The MacRorie-McLaren Company is shipping in a lot of stock for the gardens around the New York State building of the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

The Gill Nurseries of Oakland are still making large deliveries of plants for the landscape work around the Oakland municipal auditorium, south of Lake Merritt, for which they have supplied most of the stock.

The large store of the Luther Burbank Company, opened some months ago at Market and Beale streets, has been making quite a specialty of flowering plants, in which it reports a large business during the holiday season. The windows have been arranged in garden effect, with a fine display of cyclamen, begonias, shrubs, etc.

According to reports in the trade, the Japanese growers who bring in a large part of the cut flowers to San Francisco have had a rather poor season; but they are believed to be in a strong position financially, owing to their cooperative methods. They stand so close together, it is said, that when any one gets into a tight position financially, the others all contribute to help him out. They also have a loan fund, by which each in turn, if he so desires, may borrow up to $500 from the common treasury.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

Mrs. Rosa Hall Ryno reports 25 per cent. increase over last Xmas.

A. J. McNutt states that he found plants of medium size far better sellers than large expensive ones.

A. H. Dailey found inexpensive potted plants greatly in demand and better sellers than cut flowers.

C. L. Baum contends that cyclamen and azaleas of medium size are more in demand than any other plants, while poinsettia and begonias find very slow sales and are unsatisfactory to both florist and customer.

Xmas weather was the worst ever experienced. It rained all day the 24th and the morning of the 25th, tapering off on the afternoon of the 25th with snow and freezing weather; nevertheless trade was very good and practically everything was sold out, and on comparing statements business shows a nice increase over Xmas of 1913. On account of the cloudy weather for the past month or six weeks, flowers did not bloom as freely as they should and it was necessary to buy a few cut flowers from other markets. Plants of all kinds were good and plentiful and seemed to be more in demand than heretofore. Medium size azaleas and cyclamen seemed to be the best sellers, while poinsettia and begonias sold fairly well. C. W. Crouch reports a very fine trade and sold out everything clean.

Eugene, Ore.—W. C. Kaber of La Porte, Ind., has purchased an interest in the Eugene Floral Company, and will take charge of the growing end of the business.

CHICAGO.

Five hundred thousand gladioli bulbs have been sold to the State St. department stores. More competition for the seedsmen in the spring.

A. F. Longren, Clifford Pruner and R. J. Parker, traveling salesmen, all started out with the new year representing Poehlmann Bros. and others.

At Poehlmann Bros.' supply rooms, manager Waters is making a general rearrangement and all lines can be seen at a glance in the different departments. A good season in supplies is reported.

J. Kruchten is not finding his loss on his greenhouse stock so complete as it appeared at first, but it is severe enough. Gas got into the houses through a defective pipe just before Christmas.

The Mrs. Russell rose may now be said to have established itself in this market. As grown by the Poehlmann Bros., it has outclassed everything except American Beauty in size and as a money getter. Regular cuts have been made steadily from June 1, with no deterioration of quality, the best bringing 20c. throughout the summer. For the holidays its size, color, foliage and productiveness were all that could be desired and after a seven months record it has won a high place for itself. Some Mrs. Hadley roses are now being cut and this variety is slowly gaining ground here.

A change of signs from Lubliner & Trintz to George Wienhoeber took place with the beginning of the new year and marks one more of the young men leaving the ranks of the employed to join the fortunes of those who go into business for themselves. Lubliner & Trintz will retire from the business, having other interests which they have found more profitable. George Wienhoeber bought the lease of their store at 41 S. Wabash Ave. including fixtures. For many years he has been manager of the Fleischman Floral Co. in the Railway Exchange Bldg., and is a nephew of Ernest Wienhoeber, well-known retailer on the north side. Two of the Fleischman employees, George Mohn and Peter Miller will assist Mr. Wienhoeber in his new venture.

WASHINGTON.

James Dagleish has returned to his duties at the store of J. H. Small & Sons after an illness of about a week.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Cooke were last week called to Buffalo, N. Y., to attend the funeral of a life long friend.

Due to the fact that the income of the government derived from customs returns will go behind by nearly $70,000,000 during the present fiscal year, it will be necessary, according to a prominent member of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives, for the next Congress to either renew or enact legislation similar to the present internal revenue law of October 22, 1914. Under this law all commission houses are subject to a tax of $20.

The most elaborate decoration seen here in recent years was that accomplished by J. H. Small & Sons for Mrs. Clarence Moore at Rauscher's ballroom late last month. Tall cedar trees lined the walls of all of the rooms except the spacious supper rooms. Here the cedars were massed about the pillars of the apartments and the walls were festooned with southern smilax and quantities of holly and poinsettias. The ballrooms on the second floor were arranged in the form of an Italian garden. The walls were a solid mass of cedars from floor to ceiling, except in the ballroom where the mirrors were outlined with smilax studded with holly, pussy willow hanging fringe-like over the tops. Branches of scarlet berries, with broad scarlet satin ribbons, were placed under the lights on the walls and the ceilings were all a mass of smilax with a fringe of Alabama moss hanging throughout. The doorways were outlined with the cedars, and the stairways had merely an aisle through a forest of evergreens.

PITTSBURGH.

The Blind Floral Company, 511 Liberty avenue, with greenhouses at West View, has recently installed a new stoker and pumping system, as well as built a great pond.

Randolph & McClements are again fortunate in the presence of Samuel McClements, who was confined to his house during the holidays through illness resulting from a combination of cold and overwork.

John W. Jones, foreman of the Phipps Conservatory, has his force of men busy getting the roses ready and other preparations for the Easter Show and cleaning the tropical plants. Several of the palms are fifty feet high and one reached the sixty-five feet high glass roof, requiring the result of its ambition to be "cut off." The most striking display just now is made by the Lorraine begonias and poinsettias.

On the whole, probably no mercantile business in Pittsburgh has been less affected than the floral by the general financial depression of this most notable season of 1914-15. Indeed, judging from building operations, improvements and general indications despite adverse conditions, the New Year opens favorably, rather than otherwise. During the holidays the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Company was, figuratively speaking, a hive of industry by night as well as by day in supplying the retail dealers of western Pennsylvania, eastern Ohio and West Virginia. The handsome and substantial new home of this firm now in course of construction, will probably be ready for occupancy in time for the Easter trade. The structural work is entirely of iron and, while only three stories will be finished at present, the foundation has been laid with a view to twelve in the future. The prospective store is almost directly opposite the firm's present headquarters at 121 Seventh street.

York, Neb.—The C. S. Harrison Nursery Co. are enlarging their business. From thirty pounds of peony seed, they have grown thirty extra fine ones, which they have been testing for years, before putting them on the market. They have also originated some superior irises which will yet be heard from. They have now 200,000 iris in 250 varieties. C. S. Harrison personally bought two lots in the heart of York, a city of 7,000 people,—and has planted them to $1,000 worth of the choicest iris and peonies. Every foot can be irrigated, and the plot will be a fine park, which all the people can enjoy.

PERSONAL.

R. T. Brown of Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y., has gone on a trip to California and will return about January 20.

Miss Margaret Sullivan and Edward L. Higgins, head gardener at the McCormick estate, Cohasset, Mass., were married January 1.

R. E. Ballantyne, formerly florist at the Sonnenberg greenhouses, has resigned and accepted a position with the State Experiment Station at Geneva, N. Y.

Arthur Comery is added to the traveling force of N. F. McCarthy & Co., of Boston. He is one of the popular men "on the road" and he represents a standard house.

Word has been received from E. H. Wilson of the Arnold Arboretum that he has started on his homeward trip from Japan and will arrive in Boston the latter part of January.

Charles D. Stark has resigned his position as gardener for Mr. T. Suffern Tailor at Newport, R. I. Mr. Stark has been in charge of this place the past twenty-eight years but most of that time with another owner.

A. M. Davenport of Watertown, Mass., was waylaid by a trio of footpads when going home from Boston at 11 P. M. last Wednesday night and relieved of $2.00, fortunately all the cash he had in his pocket.

Announcement has just been received of the marriage of Fred Lautenschlager, representative of Kroeschell Bros., of Chicago, to Miss Margaret Marie Bemus, of Erie, Pa., on August 29, 1914. At home after Jan. 10 at 3500 North Herndon Street, Chicago.

Westfield, N. J.—Frederick Doerrer was severely cut about the face last Sunday morning when he was compelled to jump through the side of one of his greenhouses to avoid being run over by his automobile which had started to run while he was at work on the machine. The doctor took twelve stitches in the cuts on his face.

St. Louis—George Waldbart had his new pleasure car stolen from his garage on Monday Dec 28 by joy-riders. The car was recovered the next day in the country badly damaged.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Thirty per cent. below normal—that briefly and and very lucidly expresses the situation of the wholesale flower trade at this writing. Business generally was disappointing before Christmas and now—well, it has pretty nearly disappeared altogether. Plenty of stock and few buyers is one phase of the condition in the markets. The weather is warming up and it looks as if our annual January thaw was due. The retail stores generally report fair trade, but the market salesmen and big wholesalers are inclined to be pessimistic, at least just now. Canadian shipping has fallen off considerably and its decrease is being keenly felt by the wholesalers. Roses are selling fairly well, also violets; but carnations seem to have lost their popularity with the buying public and are being balanced by the increasing sale of marguerites, which several prominent retailers claim to be the coming flower for the average buyer. There are some beautiful English primroses coming in and we have noticed some excellent myosotis in spots. Calendulas are now in the regular class judging from their appearance generally in the florists' windows.

CHICAGO The effect of the holidays still lingers in the market, making trade a little slow. The vast quantity of stock which came into the stores of the wholesalers during a period of ten days has had a tendency to keep prices down, and this, with a rather light demand, has made local sales foot up small. Outside trade has fared better and most wholesalers report shipping trade very good. Quite a little stock was used up locally in refilling orders which had been frozen in delivery. This loss is the retailers' mostly and the heaviest loss was in plants. New Year's day and the day following were fairly good, but the opening of the next week found business very dull. The big crop of American Beauties is now going off and a more normal supply is coming. Sunburst and Ward are also in diminished quantity but these are plenty to meet the demand. Mrs. Russell is shortening for wood is being cut for propagating. Nothing very encouraging can be said of the carnation situation. The market is overfilled and special prices are made on all large orders to move stock. Oncidiums are now out of the market but there is a good crop of cattleyas coming in. Sweet peas are almost out of the question. The buds are forming and it will be the last of the month before there will be a good supply.

CINCINNATI New Year's business, to a certain extent, was rather disappointing. At best it amounted only to an ordinarily good day. The supply since Christmas has been very heavy and appears to be increasing day by day. The call is steady but not very active. Roses, including American Beauties, continue in over large excellent supply. Carnations are very plentiful but the general run is not of the best quality. A few poinsettias that come in have a fair sale. Lilies are plentiful. Violets, both double and single, lily of the valley, orchids and the better grade of sweet peas do tolerably well. Narcissus and Roman hyacinths sell only at the lowest price. Callas are fine.

NEW YORK The old-time New Years no longer exists in New York, so far as the flower demand is concerned. There is, of course, some increased activity in the retail stores and a good many gifts of plants and flowers are sent out, but so vast is the wholesale flower trade now that this makes only the faintest ripple on the surface, where the great product of the producers is concentrated for wholesale distribution. There is no necessity for the retailer to display any eagerness for stock as he knows that, with only rare exceptions, the wholesale market is carrying far more than is likely to be needed for the season.

some spasmodic transient movement, where one or another variety happens to be in reduced supply, that the wholesale district experiences any flurry. So all we can say of the present conditions is that, since Christmas, all values have been tending downward and the salubrious weather prevailing at the present time will have a tendency to hasten the decline. Nothing is scarce and many things are overplentiful in a very sluggish market. Quality is high, especially on roses. Carnations are perhaps the exception, but cattleyas are no far more so.

PHILADELPHIA Here, while fairly good, the market is not very active.

nothing wonderful; and neither in volume nor value was it up to the same period of a year ago. One fortunate thing about it was that the weather was mild and that helped a good deal in cleaning up some of the Christmas surplus. Supplies continued to come in freely all along the line and prices ruled low. There was an exception to this in American Beauties. There were fewer of these and they fell off in quality. The reaction due to the forcing for the Christmas market was quite apparent. Russells continue to sell well and the quality is all that can be desired. Hadleys are scarce and there are also fewer Richmonds to be seen around. All the Killarneys are plentiful and the quality very fine—even better than at Christmas. Violets, singles especially, have improved and are now going better than they have so far this season. Carnations are plentiful and very cheap. Trumpet major narcissi are a new note in the symphony and are bringing good prices. While sweet peas have become more plentiful the market could take more. Snapdragon also is on the scarce side and in good demand. Too many orchids.

SAN FRANCISCO

On counting up the results of their Christmas business, the local retail florists feel very well satisfied. The wholesalers, however, are not any too well pleased, some saying that the trade was hardly as large as last year, the outside demand running rather strongly to cheap stuff. The shipping business in roses was only fair, and with a very poor cut of violets they could not begin to fill their outside orders. This week has been quite a busy one locally, with considerable decorating to be done for the New Year celebration; and sales at the stores, both of cut flowers and potted plants, have been very fair for the week after Christmas. Violets are still very scarce, small and rather short, the weather being much too cold for fine stock. Roses are plentiful, fine and rather easy in price. There has been a big cut of Richmond, Killarney, Aaron Ward and Sunburst, while Beauties are in fair supply with a moderate demand. There seem to be plenty of carnations, but the growers are still holding prices up fairly well. A few chrysanthemums are still appearing, but find only a limited demand. Daffodils and freesias are showing up very nicely, and have so far been well received. There are still plenty of orchids, and cyclamen and begonias are coming in quite freely. Poinsettias are still appearing in moderate quantities, and while sales last week were heavy the demand is still active. Lilies of the valley also remain fairly plentiful. A feature of the holiday trade was the shipment of a carload of California cut flowers to southeastern Alaska ports, via Seattle.

ST. LOUIS

The market since Christmas has been in excellent condition with plenty of anything in season, especially so in roses and carnations. New Year's trade here was most satisfactory with both the wholesaler and the retailer, with cut flowers leading in demand this time, few plants being called for. The reports from some of our leading store men say that this New Year's business was better than last year, owing to the fact that open house was general through the city. At the wholesale markets now we see plenty of good roses and carnations at greatly reduced prices—bulb stock plenty except Roman hyacinths. Violets and sweet peas are not any too many at present. There are a few good callas and plenty of lily of the valley. All greens are plenty except asparagus.

WASHINGTON

The omission of all state and diplomatic reception, including the President's public reception on New Year's day, greatly lessened the demand for flowers. Washington on New Year's Day was socially dead. The florists have always counted on this day's business, which represents thousands of dollars to them, but they will have to wait until things are different. There has been an unusually large supply of flowers, and in some instances stocks could be had at whatever the retailer might choose to offer. While stock is exceptionally good, the cloudy weather has had a bad effect on pink roses. Pink Killarneys have been decidedly off color. A glut of carnations caused a marked decrease in their price. Fine daffodils are being offered at $3 and $4 per hundred.

CALIFORNIA NOTES.

The Ripon Nursery opened a store at Woodland, Cal., Jan. 1.

Endsley's greenhouses and floral shop at Colfax, Wash., has moved to a new location on Park street.

The MacRorie-McLaren Company's nursery shipped 1,400 phalaenopsis blooms to San Francisco for the Christmas trade. This company has just closed a contract for a very large planting on the hillsides back of Vallejo, Cal., which is said to be one of the largest landscape jobs ever undertaken on the Pacific Coast. The work, which is being financed by a number of Vallejo manufacturers, will be done under the supervision of Mr. Refinghoff, of the MacRorie-McLaren Company. It consists mainly of planting native trees and shrubs, California poppies, lupines, etc., converting a formerly barren spot into a picturesque landscape. An initial shipment of five cars of stock has just been sent to Vallejo.

The Practical Book of Garden Architecture. By Phoebe Westcott Humphreys.

The subject of Garden Architecture is one which the lover of nature is pretty sure to approach with some misgiving, if not actual prejudice. Architecture as a principle in garden making is responsible for some awful crimes perpetrated in the name of art and the horticulturist can hardly be blamed if he, at first, is disposed to look askance at the title of the volume we are here reviewing. He will not have gone far into its contents, however, before he comes to realize that he is in very congenial company. It is as pleasing as it is unusual to find the author of such a work going to a florist's home for an example of good taste in garden ornamentation, as this author has done in using a beautiful picture in colors of a wall fountain on H. H. Battles' estate in Newtown, Pa., as the frontispiece for this volume.

The book is most entertainingly written. The author is plainly an exponent of natural simplicity rather than the ostentatious in masonry. Too much "making" and artificial treatment are repugnant to her and quaintness and romantic beauty are a dominant note throughout. She is evidently more at home in the chapters on woods gardens, waterfalls and water scenery than that on French furniture for formal gardens. Pergolas without use or meaning and other architectural absurdities are unreservedly condemned and from first to last the difficult subject of garden architecture is treated from the standpoint of the artist and not from that of the artisan. It is refreshing to find a book of this kind which does not rail against florists' plants or variegated foliage and in which stone, brick and mortar are held subordinate to the plants and vine draperies which grow on and about them.

As evidence of the practical good sense which consistently runs through the various chapters we quote as follows:

"The garden that is attractive and loved almost universally, the flower garden, should be a place of rest and growing beauty, not a place of artificiality and art."

mony with the house and its surroundings will achieve far greater success than the 'show garden' in which the architect has slavishly followed some prescribed canon of formal or naturalistic treatment."

"Pergolas and similar features that have been extensively overdone in many localities. The caution is especially emphatic against using them where they do not belong, and only where there is some reason for their existence."

The prospectus of the publishers tells us that this volume has been prepared from the standpoint of eminent practicability, the best taste and general usefulness. It is all this, and anyone interested in garden beautifying can gain much inspiration and plenty of practical instruction from its pages. There are one hundred and twenty-five illustrations from actual examples of garden architecture and house surroundings. The book is published by J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia. It can be supplied from the office of HORTICULTURE at the publisher's price, $5 net.

Annual Report of the Bureau of Parks, Portland, Oregon, for the year 1913. A progressive document by E. T. Mische, superintendent.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Peacock Dahlia Farms, Berlin, N. J. 1915 wholesale price list of "The World's Best Dahlias."

A. E. Kindred, Goshen, Ind.—Price List of New Ruffled Gladioli, Kunderdi type. Illustrated.

John H. Umpleby, Lake View, N. Y. Wholesale Price List of Derby Gardens Gladioli. For the trade.

S. M. Isbell & Co., Jackson, Mich.—Seed Annual for 1915. Strong on agricultural seeds. Covers in colors, showing specialties in vegetables and asters.

Kennedy & Hunter, New York City. Annual catalogue of Vegetable and Flower Seeds, Plants, etc., for 1915. A very neat publication in coffee colored binding.

Watkins & Simpson, Ltd., London, England.—Wholesale Trade Catalogue for 1915. Devoted to flower seeds mainly, which are listed in extensive variety. This is a superb wholesale catalogue, 108 pages, heavy coated paper and finely illustrated. There are 20 pages of interesting novelties.

Peter Henderson & Co., New York. "Everything for the Garden." This is the 1915 edition of the annual catalogue of this old and eminent house. It is well named and one would have difficulty in naming any garden essential which is not offered therein. It is elaborately gotten up, with eight color plates in the body of the work and with gold embossed white covers, with beautiful medallions showing garden scenes in natural colors.

Sutton & Sons, Reading, England.—The 1915 Catalogue and Amateur's Guide of this well-known firm is fully up to the quality of its predecessors in typographical work, binding, etc., and in the beauty of its illustrations which is not equalled by anything we do in flower portraiture in this country. It is a delight for any flower lover to peruse such a book. There are several peas in natural colors in the vegetable section and a grand plate of antirrhinums in the flower department.

FIRES.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Beyer's Flower Shop was damaged by smoke and water from a fire in the building in which they are located, last week.

Robert Leedley of Chicago had the misfortune to lose his storehouse containing 50,000 bushels of onion sets just before Christmas. It was located on Harlem Ave., near 22nd St., and caught fire from the heating system. The stock was insured.

The classification and value of horticultural goods imported into New York for the week ending December 26, 1914, were as follows: Nitrate of Soda, $84,684; Fertilizer, $2,978; Clover Seed, $2,757; Grass Seed, $4,507; Sugar Beet Seed, $8,779; Trees and Plants, $2,363.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt.

Sacks, at:

$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

New Rochelle, N. Y.—Siebrecht & Son, of the Rose Hill Nurseries, have been awarded the contract by the Commission of the State of New York for the landscape work, furnishing and planting of evergreens, bay trees, etc., for the grounds about the New York State Building; also furnishing palms, ferns and bay trees for the interior of the building. This firm has had between thirty and forty men for two weeks preparing for the shipment. Last Thursday they shipped via refrigerator cars three cars containing over 1,000 evergreens, boxwood trees and other plants, and one car of large palms, ferns and bay trees for the interior of the building.

Henry A. Siebrecht, Sr., left on Tuesday evening, Dec. 15, for San Francisco, where he will be for two months with a large force of men to carry out this landscape and decorative work. Mr. Siebrecht also expects to close a large landscape contract in Seattle, Washington.

BROOKLINE, - - MASS.

IF YOU ONLY

KNEW what a good save the METROPOLITAN PATENTED is, you would use no other. It is made of cast iron and will not rust. That part of your greenhouse which in other constructions is the weakest becomes the strongest. Not this alone, it is ice-clearing and carries all the water of condensation from the inside, and it is so constructed that almost the entire end of the bar is exposed to the air, thereby preventing decay. Only one screw, about two inches from the end, is all that is necessary to secure the bars. For side stationary glass, wood headers are absolutely unnecessary, thereby causing no shade. Zinc glass stops are not necessary—the save is made with a lug to prevent the glass from slipping. Let your next house be built with a Metropolitan Patented Iron Wall Construction. You will never regret it. Our price and service are right.

The Flower Shop at Forest Hills, L. I.

If you want to see a distinctively attractive little Flower Shop, with a greenhouse attachment, just go to the Pennsylvania Station and take a run out on Long Island to Forest Hills. You'll be there in twenty minutes.

You will find Forest Hills to be one of the most unique suburban places in this country. It is a highly restricted community, made possible through the money of Mrs. Russell Sage. It is operated under the lead of the Sage Land Trust.

The buildings are delightful combinations of English, French and Belgian architecture, all modeled after the result of the Sage Trust.

In their first Mr. DePue and his partner, who have established this flower shop to which is attached a Hitchings Greenhouse.

Our flowers they sell in surprising quantity, but one of the big ends of their business is potted plants.

The glimpse through the door into the greenhouse is so alluring it tempts people to wander in.

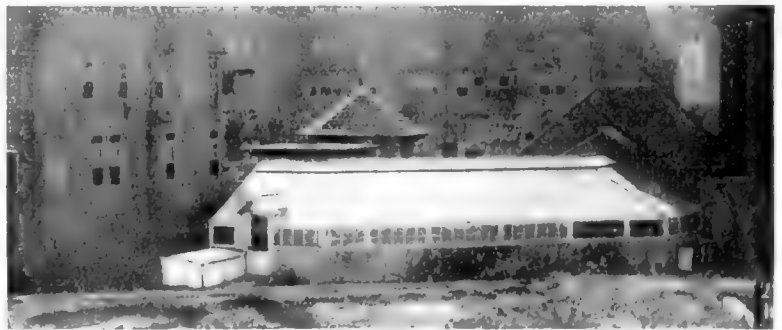

They enjoy the freedom of going up and down the walks and like best to pick things out for themselves.

These enterprising men do not call it their "show house"—not a bit of it, but the "flower garden." They lose no chance to adopt those "touches" which people like so much and for which they pay so well.

Why don't you add some glass to your shop? Let's talk it over. We go on where for business—or to talk business.

Of course, a sign like this "costs money," but don't you think for a minute, it isn't worth to their business many times more than its cost.

The limits of the lot regulated the shape of the Greenhouse. Its very oddity adds much to its interior attractiveness.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be carefully received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the Editor of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil." / /

Bulbous Stock

Now that the holiday trade has left quite some bench space it will come in useful for bulbous stock. Before bringing any bulb stock into heat make sure that they have plenty of roots, otherwise to bring them into too much heat will only spell ruin. Von Sions that were brought at end of November into a cool house can now be given more heat, say 55 to 62 degrees. Tulips that are well rooted can go up as high as 70 degrees night temperature. The conditions to produce fine tulips are heat, moisture, and shade when the flowers begin to open. Roman hyacinths can stand a temperature as high as 60 degrees at night until they are fairly well out. In fact, all this bulbous stock will finish off better if given a cool house when they are out in bloom.

Bedding Plants

The florist who runs into this line quite heavy will need to keep a hustling right along, in order to have plenty of stock next spring. Stock plants should have plenty of light. A side bench in the lightest house will be an ideal place. Here they will start off into renewed growth and vigor. Where very pot-bound they will be greatly benefited by a shift into larger pots. Give them a good rich compost and they will repay you with a bountiful supply of cuttings. They will need a temperature of not less than 55 degrees, but 60 degrees would be much better. During all days that are bright they should have a good syringing. Keep the atmosphere moist by frequent dampings of the walks.

Forcing Lilacs

Batches of lilacs may be forced from January to March with good results. A good syringing two or three times a day will cause a good break all over the plant and when this is secured they will stand up to 70 degrees at night with safety. This high temperature very often has to be employed in holding lilacs at a rapid rate of development. They will even stand as high as 85 degrees and do fine. When they begin to make roots and foliage they will need lots of water at the roots. Great watchfulness in this matter is essential right up to the last. When the trusses have attained a length of about three inches the temperature should be lowered and the spraying lessened. When the flowers show signs of opening stop syringing and keep the air dryer by giving more ventilation and less damping down. When they are full out a little shade from the strong sun will help them to keep better.

Seeds to Sow

These include all such seeds as asparagus, cannas, celosia, cuphea, gloxinia, grevillea, begonias, dracaena, musa, smilax, salvia, torenia, single and double petunia, lobelia, etc., also the following perennials: coreopsis, dianthus, delphiniums, gaillardias, gypsophila, iberis, incarvillea, lavendula, lobelia, lychnis, pentstemon, etc. These can all be sown in flats or pans, provided with proper drainage, and for a compost there is nothing better than new loam, leaf mold and sand in equal parts. Where much stock of this sort has to be raised it is a good plan to select for this purpose a bench with bottom heat to set the flats on. After sowing, press all down firmly and water with fine hose. For a top covering, after the boxes are placed side by side, paper will answer very well. Give a temperature of about 60 degrees, with bottom heat a few degrees higher. All these young plants will require careful watering, transplanting and other attention.

Sowing Smilax

Smilax should be good strong plants in 4-inch pots by the first of June and to have it by that date seed must be sown now. Crock up some pans or flats, fill with loam, leaf mold and sand well mixed; press firmly and sow the seed medium thick. Cover with about one-eighth of an inch of finely sifted compost. To hasten germination give them a steady temperature of from 60 to 65 at night. Keep them shaded until they show signs of germination when they should have all the light possible. When they can be handled nicely they should be transplanted into 2-inch pots and kept growing by necessary shifts until they are in 4-inch pots.

Stock Plants of Poinsettias

Dig up the old plants and pack them under a bench in a medium house. Do not keep them too wet at the roots as they are to go into a resting period until next April. Give enough of water to keep the wood firm until that time. What I mean by a medium house is one with about 55 degrees night temperature.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur C. Ruzicka

With any of the topics presented on this page will be carefully reviewed and promptly answered on the condition that the contributor's name should appear in the HORTICULTURE.

Greenfly

It is a common mistake to think that greenflies do not exist in the greenhouse. They do exist, and getting after them is the only way to keep them from doing harm. The greenflies should be given quite often. This applies especially to young stock, which must be kept free from all insects or it will receive a severe check, and it will then take quite a while for the little plants to get over it, although as a rule they will show the effects all through their life. To make sure that the young potted stock is free from all insects, just take a plant every here and there and turn it upside down so that you can see well under the leaves. There is where the first insects will always appear, and spider will appear on the bottom of the leaves first, and then it will spread to the whole plant if not checked. Tobacco stems should not be burned in the houses now in midwinter, for the roses will take harm, more so with the white ones whose centers will practically be burned out. This may not be noticeable to the ordinary observer, but anyone who knows roses will see it at once. The smell of the cut roses after smoking with these stems will take at least three days to disappear.

Use of Tobacco Stems in Mulching

When the grower is assured that the benches will dry out well, it will be a very good idea to use some tobacco stems around the plants as mulch. They should not be put on very thick, for it is not necessary and would be only waste. A light mulch will be very good, and will be better than the old way of putting the stems in the walks. The stems on the benches will help keep out a good many insects that as a rule will hide among the rough pieces of soil and manure on the surface. During the present cold weather the ventilators will not be open very much, and these stems on the benches will give out a certain amount of fumes which will keep the air with a tint of tobacco in it. This will not kill fly in houses that have it, but it will go a great ways towards keeping it out of houses that are clean. These weak fumes will be so bad for the young flies that they will die or not be very healthy, and that is how they are prevented from spreading. In houses where the fly has been for a while there are a great many old ones that are very hard to kill even with strong smoke. The stems will also act as fertilizer, and will furnish the plants with a certain amount of plant food.

Syringing Potted Cuttings

No matter how clean the wood that had been used in propagating, the young plants will have to be syringed as soon as they are rooted enough to stand it. Here is where the proper setting of the young plants will be a great help in syringing. With the leaves all pointing the cuttings it is made matter to direct the stream of water so that it will not tear the cuttings all to pieces. Use a steady stream, free from the up and down movement that is used while syringing old plants. Were this used on the young plants, it would loosen them in the pots very badly, and that would result in weak growth, and poor plants all the way through.

Roses and Carnations in Same House

Mr. A. C. Ruzicka

Dear Sir:

I have a small house in which I wish to grow carnations and roses. Is it possible to grow carnations and roses in the same house, and if so, what varieties of roses would you suggest?

These flowers would not be grown for sale, merely for home decoration.

Truly yours,

Ohio.

R. P. W.

As a rule we would never advise anyone trying to grow carnations and roses in the same house, but as yours is a private place, and the quality of the roses will no doubt count more than the quantity, you can try it. But it is too late to plant now, unless you can get hold of some good strong old plants, preferring those that had been forced in the greenhouse and then planted outside for at least one season, perhaps one winter. Plants like these will give you a nice crop of roses in carnation temperature. As to varieties we would recommend Radiance and Shawyer, with the single White Killarney for a white, Richmond for red. All these varieties will stand the low temperature of the carnation, only they will not produce as many flowers, but those that will come will be extra large. You must be careful not to feed these too much, and to keep them more on the dry side at all times, as the cool temperature would not go good with over-watered benches. If you cannot get hold of any old plants we would recommend that you postpone the growing of roses until the next season, starting the plants in the benches about June, and then planting in the carnations in August or September. If your house runs east and west, plant your roses in the front benches, and then screen the line between the roses and carnations with cheesecloth or other suitable material. This will give the carnations the shade that they need and at the same time will not shade the roses any. Do not raise the temperature more than a degree or two for the roses, or your carnations will be ruined. The roses will come along in the low temperature slowly, but they ought to be nice. Do not feed as much as you would in a regular rose house. The temperature should run not more than 52 at night, with 64 in the daytime with air, and only about 56 or 58 in rainy or dull weather. Commercially it would not pay to do this, for the cut of the roses will be much smaller than if grown under regular conditions.

Arabis

(See Cover Illustration.)

I remember at the beginning of my apprenticeship one of the first botanical names to memorize happened to be that of the rock cress: Arabis. A long border of peonies, in a garden of a Silesian count, was edged by a broad straight line of Arabis albidula. Here I had my first opportunity to see the snowy white of its myriad vernal blossoms. It is the white that blends so harmoniously with the yellow and purple of the crocus in floral spring arrays of today.

The rock cress is well known to every American horticulturist as a useful, absolutely hardy perennial of low trailing admirably dense growth. Its improved garden varieties merit the attention of every gardener and garden owner. For edging in modern herbaceous flower gardens their value remains undisputable. The foliage in some instances proves strikingly attractive. As an example I mention the variety Arabis alpina pleno variegata. The hirsute grayish green of the leafage of A. albidula fl. pl. and the more robust growing A. alpina fl. pl. is handsome. Plantations thereof, when during April and early May bedecked with their wealth of double pure white flowers can be easily made a conspicuous feature of a border. The best single flowering garden forms are represented by the varieties Arabis alpina grandiflora superba, depicted by our illustration, and A. alpina compacta. All the sorts mentioned prefer a light and rather sandy soil and a high sunny location, showing a remarkable resistance during prolonged periods of drought. For this reason they rank among our best rockgarden plants and also, are an excellent material for the dry-wall. Plant collectors will find the two handsome pink flowering kinds Arabis aubrietoides and A. Billardieri rosea of special interest. Likewise are the less known but graceful white varieties, Arabis carduchorum, Halleri, Sturii and vochinensis attractive additions for large rockeries.

Single flowering varieties can be easily raised from seed sown in cold frames during April and May. Plants will bloom profusely the second season. The double and variegated leaved kinds are propagated by divisions during August and September. In order to maintain the desirable even growth, particularly when we employ rock cress for edging in the advanced type of modern formal gardens this replanting and dividing should be done every year. Neglect to do this is in most cases the reason for inferior effects the following season. A light protection by straw, leaves or evergreen boughs during winter is a necessity, particularly in northern states.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

A. C. S. Members:—Do you feel kindly toward the secretary? Well, you can lighten his work at the convention considerably by sending in your annual dues before he starts for the place of meeting. It might also save yourself more or less inconvenience and delay in not having to wait to be waited on at the desk. The time for filing entries free of charge will be up on the 17th. That date falling on Sunday, no charge will be made for entries reaching the secretary by Monday the 18th. Two dollars will be charged for each entry made after that date.

Indications point to a large gathering and one of the best exhibitions ever staged. All members are urged to make every effort to attend. A large attendance promotes enthusiasm. A member asks for a discussion on the relative merits of cuttings taken from the flower stems and those taken from the short blooming shoots. Give the matter a little thought and let us have the benefit of your experience. There will be other matters up for discussion, too.

To Carnation Growers!!

I would like to call the attention of the members of the American Carnation Society to the central location of the City of Buffalo where we hold our twenty-fourth convention, Jan. 27th and 28th.

While we are in the midst of business depression that effects all, let us not forget that better times are in store for us, and every one that can possibly spare the time should endeavor to attend this year from East and West. No one can say that it is too far away this year.

We are expecting a fine display of Carnations, both novelties and standard varieties. Reports from every section indicate that quality was never better.

Come join with us, see how we conduct our business and exhibitions; give encouragement to the officers and show them that you appreciate their endeavors in trying to make this the Best Floral Festival in This Country.

Don't procrastinate While it is unquestionably true that horticultural supplies, including even flower seeds from Germany, have been coming through to this country in a much better manner and quantity than importers expected after the close of the European war, yet everyone in the seed trade is fully aware of the precarious outlook for the flower seed supply especially on late or increased orders. In a recent issue we made note of the warning issued by W. Atlee Burpee & Co. to their customers and in this issue appears a similar admonition sent out by R. & J. Farquhar & Co. Those of our readers who are taking their time about making up their spring seed orders should take heed and attend to it promptly for it is "a condition and not a theory" which confronts us.

Supplanting the seedsman?

The Soils and Crops Department of the Agricultural Experiment Station of Lafayette, Ind., is sending out a new-summer bulletin on the "Better Don't put it off till Grade Seed to the Farmers." The bulletin in question is stated to be to put the farmer in touch with the better strains of seed in touch with a business man to produce such crops as he may desire. The Department together with the State Experiment Station is making recommendations to the prospective buyers. In other words, the Department is to us up the field of the seed trade in their State and undertake to do what the seedsman is constituted to do as a legitimate commercial enterprise. It would be interesting to know whether the Indiana Experiment Station has thus far communicated with the seed-men of their State to first ascertain whether the seed dealers were making proper effort to secure for distribution to the farmers the best and purest strains of seed or are prepared to purchase and distribute in the course of their business seed of a class material as the Department may be able to offer them, before involving a State institution in such an enterprise as this circular would seem to indicate.

Effect of environment upon seed quality

In further consideration of the foregoing, we would respectfully suggest that it is not at all certain that the station officials in Indiana or any other State are any better qualified or even as well able to pass upon seed qualities as are the men whose lives have been devoted to the development of the American seed industry. Well informed seedsmen tell us that the only quality which seeds can acquire through differences of soil or climate is that of earliness or lateness. While crops are absolutely dependent upon quality of soil, supply of moisture, and heat, it has yet to be shown that selection will have any effect upon the adaptation of seeds to soils not suited to them, although this bulletin, in asserting that seed "from a different latitude and a different soil will often produce a low yield or else possibly a large yield, quite poor in quality," plainly asserts otherwise. As to selection for temperature it has long since been demonstrated that temperature has a strong influence on seeds. The Iceland poppy and the buttercup, for example, in arctic regions produce seeds having a much stronger covering than those that have been grown in the temperate zone. Buttercup seeds gathered in Iceland take nearly two years to germinate whereas those harvested in temperate climates may be germinated in five or six months. A remarkable instance of the adaptation of Iceland seeds to this climate is that germination may be interrupted by cold, or even severe cold, and the young plant has the quality of resuming its development when it has thawed out again, a quality which seeds sown here and then subjected to similar Iceland conditions would not possess. Many of the seedsmen, desiring early corn, have it grown in northern New Hampshire or Maine. The same course is followed for early cosmos which, to perpetuate its earliness, must be grown in northern latitudes, the earliness being due to those laws of Nature which enable plants to adapt themselves to more or less adverse conditions in order to assure reproduction. As to their having any ability to overcome unfavorable chemical or mechanical conditions of soil, however, so as to affect the character of the seed produced, with all due respect to our friends in Lafayette we must say that we know of no evidence to support such a claim and have yet to hear of any instance where any local factor other than temperature and moisture has had any appreciable influence on seed character.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

MASSACHUSETTS HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The inaugural meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was held at Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Saturday, Jan. 9, and President J. K. M. L. Farquhar presented his third annual inaugural address. It showed a net gain of 98 members for 1914, and the largest income from membership fees of any one year, with a single exception. During the year the sum of $7035, inclusive of medals, was distributed in prizes and gratuities. Financially the society stands about as it did one year ago. Mr. Farquhar contended that receipts from life membership should be added to the permanent fund and the income only expended. He urged the necessity of a remodeling of the interior of the building and stated that the trustees have under consideration a

The tone of his address was optimistic and inspiring throughout. The address of the president was followed by the annual reports of secretary, treasurer and chairmen of the various standing committees. On the exhibition table were some lovely orchid groups. F. J. Dolansky was represented by a large group of Cattleya Trianae, including the white form. Col. Charles Pfaff, gard. George Melvin staged a superb specimen of Laelia anceps, bearing 23 spikes of flowers. E. B. Dane, gard. Donald Mackenzie, sent Chysis aurea and Cymbidium Gottianum (eburneum x insigne) which was much admired.

Free Lecture Course.

The lecture committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society has issued a program of lectures and discussions on horticultural subjects to be given at Horticultural Hall on Saturdays during January, February and March. These lectures are free and the various topics will be treated by recognized authorities in the different lines.

The program is as follows:

January 16.—"Selection and Care of House Plants," Frederick E. Palmer, Brookline.

January 30.—Conference on Garden Planning and Planting. Conducted by the Staff of the Mass. Agricultural College. 10.00 A. M., "Trees and Shrubs for Home Grounds," Prof. A. K. Harrison; 10.45 A. M., "Garden Planning," P. H. Ellwood, Jr.; 11.30 A. M., "Garden Furnishings," Prof. F. A. Waugh; 1.30 P. M., "Practical Management of the Home Flower Garden," Prof. A. H. Nehrling; 2.30 P. M., "Herbaceous Annuals and Perennials," A. S. Thurston.

February 6.—"The Home Vegetable Garden," H. F. Thompson, Amherst.

February 13.—Conference on Fruit Growing. Arranged by the Mass. Agricultural College. 10.00 A. M., "Grafting and Budding," Prof. W. W. Chenoweth; 11.00 A. M., "Pruning," Prof. F. C. Sears; 1.30 P. M., "Spraying," Prof. R. W. Rees; 2.45 P. M., "Small Fruits," Hon. Wilfrid Wheeler.

ROCHESTER FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

The annual meeting and election of officers of this association took place Monday night, January 11. Officers elected for the ensuing year are as follows: President Charles H. Vick; vice president, Harry E. Bates; treasurer, William L. Keller; secretary, H. B. Stringer; trustees, John Dunbar, George J. Keller, Edwin P. Wilson. The meeting was the most enthusiastic one the association has had for many a day and the spirit displayed seemed to augur well for the future. With such efficient leaders the prospects are surely bright and rosy.

We are glad to have the opportunity to congratulate the Rochester fraternity on their choice of so sterling a man as Charles H. Vick as their leader. "Charlie" Vick is admired and beloved by everyone whose good fortune it is plan for practical rearrangement of the interior, so that the halls will be a source of substantial revenue without change of the beautiful exterior.

Among the recommendations by President Farquhar were fewer and larger exhibitions during the year and the constituting of a committee on Horticultural Progress to study closely the activities of the various committees of the society and to advise as to its future policy. He spoke enthusiastically upon the achievement of the Convention Garden in the Fenway in connection with the S. A. F. Convention last summer, the success of which was due in a large measure to this society and its members and expressed gratification that the garden is to be further developed and permanently maintained by the City of Boston. The visit of the garden committee to Lenox last summer was also alluded to as a movement pregnant with lasting benefit to horticulture in Massachusetts.

to know him. The prosperity and prestige which the association has attained has been due in no small measure to his amiable traits and in the success of the Rochester exhibitions his unselfish and untiring zeal has counted for much.

The vice-president, Mr. Bates is a worthy running mate as are indeed all the other gentlemen associated with him in the official duties of the year. "Do it for Rochester" will be something more than a printed phrase under their leadership.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF GARDENERS.

The following appointments are announced by President John W. Everitt of the National Association of Gardeners for the year 1915:

Directors for three years: William H. White, Yonkers, N. Y.; William N. Craig, Brookline, Mass.; Edward Kirk, Bar Harbor, Me.; John W. Johnston, Glen Cove, N. Y.; Carl U. Fohn, Colorado Springs, Colo.; Peter Johnson, Dallas, Texas; Thomas Proctor, Lenox, Mass. (Comm. 1915)

terest in this important event. With the clouds of pessimism of 1914 passing away with the advent of New Year, we must gird our armor and by will and deed make it a success or we shall be held strictly to account. Many other industries are only too glad to seize an opportunity to take part in such an enterprise. So I say, wake up! The honor of the Florists' Club, the Trade and our City is at stake. Let us inject new life, new hope, new stamina into a cause so worthy and with interests so much identified with our own; let us all pull together for our own common good."

NORTH SHORE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the last regular meeting of this society Mr. Frank S. Gifford gave a lecture on Breeds of Cattle. A silver medal was awarded to E. H. Wetterlow for six plants of a new seedling primula, a cross between Primula chinensis fimbriata and Primula stellata; all mauve in color, the same as the parent plant. All were well grown; the foliage being of the stellata type with long stems and the flowers being very large of the fimbriata type. A certificate of merit was awarded to Ernest Townsend for a very fine plant of Cypripedium insigne in a 10-inch pot.

The sixteenth annual banquet of the society will be held in the Town Hall, Manchester, Mass., on Jan. 27th, at 6.30 p. m. and will be followed by an entertainment by professional talent and dancing from 10 to 12m. Tickets will be $1.50 each, and can be obtained from the chairman of the committee, William Till, Magnolia, Mass. Any visitors will be given a cordial welcome. The subject for the next meeting will be a stereopticon lecture on Gladioli by B. Hammond Tracy of Wenham. W. T.

FLORISTS' CLUB OF WASHINGTON.

All business was called off at the January meeting held last Tuesday evening. It was officers' night and every effort was advanced to make this a red letter affair. The meeting room had been filled with folding chairs the big event being a motion picture show, character stories and songs, music by a Victrola, and the pearls of wisdom disseminated by Professor Wall of the Sheldon Business School, of Chicago, who delighted his audience with his recitations and anecdotes and, in speaking on co-operation, congratulated the club on the efforts being made to bring the members of the trade together. Truly it was a most wonderful evening and its success was duly attested by the hundred or more members and their guests.

LADIES' SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Mrs. W. F. Gude, president, 1915, has made the following appointments:

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the American Rose Society was held at the office of Traendly & Schenck in New York City on Monday, January 11. Those present were President Wallace R. Pierson, Robert Pyle, S. S. Pennock, Louis J. Reuter, Harry O. May and Benjamin Hammond. The decision to hold the Annual Exhibition and meeting for 1915 with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in Horticultural Hall, Boston, on March 18 to 21, inclusive, was carried.

The committee on schedules consists of Messrs. L. J. Reuter, Thomas Roland and Alex. Montgomery. Special contributions to the prize fund were announced of $25.00 each from the following: The Montgomery Co., Inc., A. N. Pierson, Inc., Budlong Rose Company, Thomas N. Cook, S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc. The full schedule will be issued within a few days. The pot roses will be staged on the first day, March 18, and the classes for cut roses will be staged on March 19.

The annual meeting of the society will be held in Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Friday, March 19, at 3 p. m.

The matter of judges for the exhibition was provided for, there being two sets. The appointment of a manager for the Rose Show was left with the schedule committee. Robert Simpson was appointed a committee of one to confer with the New York Botanical Garden committee relative to a June show at that place.

A communication was received from Philadelphia relative to an exhibition by the American Rose Society in the spring of 1916, and a sum of a substantial amount was offered for a prize list. This was gone over carefully and held subject to approval at the annual meeting in March next.

NEW YORK INTERNATIONAL SHOW

The Flower Show Committee of the New York Florists' Club held a meeting at the Grand Central Palace on January 11, every member being in attendance. Everyone seemed to be much encouraged by the favorable outlook and the committee will now hold weekly meetings until the close of the show. Orders for space in the trade section are coming in more freely and there is no question but what over $10,000 worth of space will be sold.

SOUTHAMPTON HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the Southampton, N. Y. Horticultural Society was held Jan. 7th. After preliminary business, hearing of reports, etc., the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Martin McLaughlin; vice-president, Frank N. Smith; financial secretary, William McLeod; recording secretary, Julius W. King; corresponding secretary, S. R. Candler; treasurer, D. T. Wells. Several committees were appointed. It was voted to hold the annual banquet and ladies' night on the evening of Jan. 20th, at the Commercial Hotel. The principal feature will be a turkey dinner, music by a local orchestra and an entertainer from away. William McLeod, gardener to Mrs. Horace Russell, exhibited some fine sweet peas which called forth much favorable comment. A permanent committee was appointed to pass on like future exhibits. We shall expect some sharp competition.

SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers—President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif.; First Vice-President, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Second Vice-President, E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa.; Secretary and Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary, S. L. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O.

Timely Advice.

The following letter has been sent out to a number of flower seed customers by R. & J. Farquhar & Co., of Boston. We reproduce it as a suggestion that others in the seed trade might wisely follow this season. Apart from the peculiar exigencies resulting from the war in Europe the advantage of getting orders in early is apparent to everyone, reducing by so much the tension of the rush season which is sure to come later. Messrs. Farquhar report good returns already, although the letter has just been sent out, and are well pleased with the way it is working:

Dear Sir:

I have just received from you an order for supplies of seeds, plants, etc., etc., which we have fully appreciated.

These conditions are such that we feel it our duty to give you of the situation of the seed trade in regard to flower seeds. We do not at present have particularly short of any vegetable seeds, but many varieties of flower seeds are in the scarce.

We have already received from European countries, including France and Germany, large shipments of flower and vegetable seeds, others are still on their way, delayed somewhat on account of the interruption by war, of the usual twelve-to-fourteen-day transportation, but papers are coming from four to ten weeks.

We believe that supplies already received and on their way are sufficient to meet the demands of our regular patrons, and it is our desire to take care of these first. For this to do this, we would suggest that you send at once your order for your seed requirements for the spring season, as far as possible we may forward them to you, or if you prefer, have them put up and reserved for shipment in February or March.

While the war continues, there will be no cable communication with Germany, and when our first supplies are exhausted it will be impossible to procure more from that country in time for spring sowing.

An Unconstitutional Seed Law.

Editor of HORTICULTURE.

Dear Sir—

Your readers may be interested to know that Judge Cornish of the District Court of the State of Nebraska has recently decided that the Nebraska so-called pure seed act of 1911 is unconstitutional. The court held that it is contrary to the constitution of Nebraska. Of course the decision of the Supreme Court of Nebraska will be needed if the case is appealed. To throw this seed law out of use. This would indeed be a serviceable thing to do as the law is very unsatisfactory and unintelligent legislation.

If this decision is upheld by the Supreme Court of Nebraska, it will go a considerable way in affecting the constitutionality of several other state seed laws, like Iowa, Maine, etc., because these laws are drawn on the same principle of codification of the commercial feeding stuffs and agricultural seed laws under one law.

Yours truly,

CURTIS NAY SMITH

Imports of horticultural material and value of same received at port of New York, during week ending Jan. 2, 1915, were as follows:

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—This year's general catalogue of this firm marks their twenty-fifth anniversary and it is fully up to the occasion in appropriateness and beauty. The cover design is a grand full life size cluster of bloom of Buddleia variabilis magnifica. There are six very fine full-page flower plates in colors, also.

A most interesting brief history of the career of "The House of Michell" during its quarter century of business, by George C. Watson, Philadelphia's most entertaining author, fills two pages, in which appear portraits of Henry F. and Frederick J. Michell, with crisp reminiscences and comment on their ability and industry. HORTICULTURE joins in the wish that the well-won prosperity which this house enjoys may continue and that we may live to see the name of Michell on four sides of a city block. Michell's Wholesale Price List, which comes by the same mail as the general catalogue, has for a cover subject a plant in bloom in natural colors of the promising new scarlet bedding geranium Helen Michell. It is a two-page illustrated book and will find a genuine welcome among the trade.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—No less than three catalogues reach our desk at once from this ever-busy house. The "Red List" is a wholesale catalogue for seedsmen and dealers only who buy to sell again. As always, it is practical and reliable. Next is the Burpee Annual for 1915, with a handsome illustration of Sweet Pea "King White" on a colored panel background as cover subject. On the back cover is "Baby Delight" watermelon, tempting to look upon. 182 pages, crowded with good things for the garden worker. Lastly "The Silent Salesman's Assistant, an aid to Burpee's Annual." The Silent Salesman's Assistant is quite a departure from the usual Burpee Catalogue, with designed headlines and half-tone illustrations with marginal overhang, uniform type, etc., and a very attractive exterior.

WINDOW PUBLICITY.

Window decorating is one form of advertising. The well decorated window goes a long way towards securing favorable public attention, and while those who make up the interested crowd may not all go right in and purchase, yet a mental impression is left which is very likely to bring the admirer of that window back to that particular store later on.

Anyone can get flowers and plants into the window, but it requires considerable study to determine the groupings and colors that show to the best advantage. The study of color harmony began in the most remote ages, and each artist of note has added his experience. Color combinations are governed by set laws, and, as is the case with all other natural laws, it is both foolish and disastrous to ignore them. Harmony is obtained by putting together such intermediate tones as will subdue the crude effects caused by opposite colors. When two colors do not blend perfectly, a mass of white between them will help to that end. Black placed between two bright colors gives a pretty combination. Black and white subdue the brightness of very light colors. Gray may be safely used in almost any combination of colors, and will harmonize beautifully with bright masses of blue or crimson. It is a color that will soften the power of almost any color.

The following combinations of colors and tints will be found harmonious and pleasing:

1. Pink, sky blue and light green.
2. Light blue, dark orange and golden brown.
3. Light red or pink, dark green and pale sky blue.
4. Light yellow, dark purple and light yellowish green.
5. Clear purple, dark red and light lavender.
6. Navy blue, dark red and pale yellow.

These combinations will make very effective groupings with the aid of ribbons, colored baskets, and cloth backgrounds:

Violet, indigo, blue, green, yellow, orange, red. Violet at the top, red at the bottom. Count from the red up and every third and fifth color is an harmonious color.

This, in a nutshell, gives the fundamental principles of the study of the harmonious blending of colors. Time and experience will enable one to convince himself that this is the one great feature in window or interior decorating. It is quite true that flowers, even carelessly and promiscuously grouped, will generally produce an attractive display, but the writer has often noted some "fierce" combinations that were gross violations of color harmony. If the professional florist will not pay any attention to the effective groupings of colors so as to bring out the Heaven-given warmth and delicacy of Nature's gems, how can he expect to educate the general public to the appreciation of his services?

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

CHICAGO.

Mrs. L. L. Peiser has returned from Philadelphia where she spent the holidays.

January Flaw was never considered a money maker. His coming now reminds florists of last year, the warmest in many years.

Now that the holiday rush is over, bowling is again a favorite pastime with the florists. The score will be found in this paper each week.

Harry Rowe has arranged the large rear room of his store on Wabash Ave., so as to accommodate a wholesale business and expects to rent it for that purpose. The new store is so large, light, and in such a good location that it will soon be taken.

A common sight in the wholesale stores is a group of florists talking over the decline in flower sales. Many are the opinions offered and not a few think a flower show at popular prices would have stimulated the public to more liberal buying.

A. L. Vaughan was taken ill on his way down town Monday morning and was absent from his place of business today (Tuesday). Mr. Vaughan is a well known man in the trade, being the head of the wholesale commission house of A. L. Vaughan & Co., and has many friends.

Harold Kennicott, son of the late Flint Kennicott, who was one of the Kennicott Bros., has bought the Peiser interest in the firm, known for a generation as Kennicott Bros., and will remain in Chicago. "Nick" Miller has severed his connection with this firm and is now with the A. L. Vaughan Co. in the same block. George Gobel, who is known to all the wholesale florists through his long connection with the Express Co. is now a salesman at Kennicott Bros taking hold as if he had been brought up in the business.

The officers of the Chicago Florists' Club ought to bring to the club a wisdom which comes from being able to look on a subject from a variety of standpoints. Wm. J. Keimel is a member of the firm of Wendland & Keimel of Elmhurst, Ill., extensive growers. Jas. Morton, until recently from New York, represents one of the trade papers. Guy W. French, carnation foreman for Poehlmann Bros. of Morton Grove for seventeen years, and starting for himself in the spring and Paul Klingsporn a resident of Philadelphia till one year ago, and now sales manager for the Chicago Flower Growers' Assn. While all are connected with the trade, the diversity of occupation and place of residence augurs well for the club's usefulness.

E. C. Amling, wholesale commission dealer, has as broad a survey over the Chicago field as any other man in the trade and says that in his opinion, the demoralized condition of the flower market in general at Christmas was the lack of any basis for fixing prices. No wholesaler knew what he should ask for anything. Between the grower who must be pleased with the prospects of a high price for his consumption and the retailer whose customers could not or would not pay high prices, the commission man must find a path that would lead to future, as well as present business. He says we have imaginary prices on flowers that will not hold good when the selling test comes. Price was quoted too high for existing conditions this Christmas. No one wanted to be the first to quote lower, but no wholesaler really expected the price to be maintained. This year the high quotations on American Beauties caused about 40,000 Beauties, from two to three times as many from the east to be put upon this market as were supplied by local growers, with the result that the market went to pieces. Only a better understanding between wholesalers and their shippers as to supply, with a view to settling the proper price is the real solution of the question.

CALIFORNIA NOTES.

H. A. Siebrecht, of New Rochelle, N. Y., has arrived in San Francisco to take charge of the landscape work of the New York State building of the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

C. L. Coulter, traveling representative of C. C. Morse & Co., the San Francisco seed house, returned a few days ago from his annual trip through the East and South, where he reports a much better business than the previous year.

H. B. Stafford, of the Delano, Cal., Nurseries, is opening an office and sales yard adjoining the First National Bank building at that place. In addition to fruit trees, he is getting in quite a lot of shade trees and ornamental stock from a Fresno nursery.

The E. W. McLellan Co., had a very large stock of hothouse poinsettias for the holiday trade, making a cut of 1,000 dozen. The stock has been cleaned up completely and brought very satisfactory prices. They are now showing some exceptionally fine gardenias.

At the meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society Jan. 2, for the annual election of officers, President H. Plath was absent owing to the death of his aunt. The members, of whom a large number were present, extended their sympathy, and the smoker that was to have been held that evening was postponed. The officers elected were the same as for the previous year, with the exception of treasurer, that office being taken by J. Jacques. The exhibition committee was appointed as follows: Daniel MacRorie, Joe Tempson, T. Taylor, H. James, Donald McLaren, Frank Policano, A. J. Rossi, Wm. Kettlewell, Wm. Monroe and D. Raymond. The exhibit of the evening was of Oncidium splendidum, brought by the MacRorie-McLaren Co., which was rated at 99 points.

Moline, Ill.—Julius Staacks, florist, is suing the city of Moline for $20,000 on account of storm water flooding his greenhouses and destroying his plants, caused from improper street grading.

BOSTON.

Rumors are heard that Harry Quint is to open up another store on Boylston Street near the high-class Back-Bay hotels, in addition to his present store on Tremont Street.

All members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston are urged to remember the meeting January 19, when the installation of officers and ladies' night takes place. An attractive program is promised.

John J. Cassidy, a well-known florist of 6 Beacon Street, has been appointed a sinking fund commissioner of the city of Boston by Mayor Curley. Mr. Cassidy enjoys the further honor of being exalted ruler of the Boston lodge of Elks.

Some specialties noted this week are Spencer sweet peas from the Halfax Garden Co., carnations from John A. Nelson of Framingham, Paperwhites from H. W. Vose of Hyde Park, and single violets from Kidder Bros. of Lincoln.

Penn the Florist turned loose a number of fan-tail doves in his window this week. They were prize birds from the Poultry Show, and although the week so far has been stormy and the weather unpleasant, crowds continued to stand in front of the windows admiring the floral setting in which the birds proudly strutted around.

Galvin's new store on Park street is being rapidly brought to completion. It is hoped that the new home of this old-established firm will be ready for occupation by the middle of February. Two stores are being made into one, and with the extremely attractive front that is planned for, this establishment will be one of the show places in the city.

A good-sized delegation is expected to leave Boston for the Buffalo carnation convention. The party will leave South Station, January 26, at 10 a. m., arriving in Buffalo at 11.30 p. m. The fare one way on a 10-party ticket is $9.67, chair $2.00. A large number from this section will take along exhibits. All who have not yet notified President Goddard of their intention to go should do so without delay.

The meeting for the discussion of the surplus stock and credit problems was not held January 11, as scheduled. An informal discussion took place in the markets last Saturday, at which a representative of a collection agency proposed a plan for the organization of a credit protective association, consisting of local growers and wholesalers. Much difficulty is being found in getting a sufficient number to agree upon a course of action.

Terryville, Conn.—At a hearing before Judge of Probate F. A. Scott, on Saturday, upon the application for a conservator over Clarence Fenn, the florist, by the selectmen, the petition was granted and Matthew F. Hayes was selected. An appeal was taken.

Penn Yan, N. Y.—In the action of Watson H. Whipple, a Medina fruit grower, against the Brown Brothers Nursery Company, of Rochester, to recover $1,750 damages as a result of having purchased peach trees of standard varieties, which it is claimed, were not true to name, the jury awarded him $405.

East Bridgewater, Mass.—J. K. Alexander sends a large shipment of dahlias to the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, to be grown and exhibited in connection with the Massachusetts State Exhibit, and in competition for the gold, silver and bronze medals offered for the finest growing exhibit of dahlias. This exhibit is to occupy 2728 square feet of space and is to be made in the form of a circular bed.

Mr. Alexander had an exhibit of equal proportions at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis in 1904 winning the silver medal, the highest honor awarded to any American firm. H. Cannell & Son of Swanley, Kent, England, were the winners of the highest honor, the gold medal.

PITTSBURGH.

F. B. Frauenfelder of Chicago has arrived for his annual visit to Superintendent Moore of the North Side (old Allegheny) Parks, and other friends.

Mr. Marshall, a member of the wholesale firm of McCallum Company, 137 Sandusky street, reports an unusual demand just now for baby primrose plants.

The Ludwig Floral Company is adding a palm and fern house to its already commodious Saxonwald Greenhouses at Castle Shannon. The work has just started with the expectation of being completed by "early frost."

The A. W. Smith Co., in the Keenan building, which claims the distinction of being the largest retail flower house in America, is nearing its forty-first natal anniversary. Anthony J. Smith, the manager, reports the landscape trade picking up with exceptionally good prospects for spring. The Smiths are producing an average of from 300 to 400 orchids daily.

Harvey C. Sheaff, manager for Mrs. E. W. A. Williams, 621 Penn avenue, reports the usual dull post-holiday season rather better than usual with a steady run of orders for small, informal entertainments. Two large demands were made upon his resources owing to the deaths of Sidney B. Liggett and John H. Dury, both veteran officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

David Fraser, under whose regime the private conservatory of Henry Clay Frick has been during its eighteen years' existence, has about recovered from his serious illness of the late summer and autumn. Although naturally of robust physique and constitution, Mr. Fraser suffered from a succession of hemorrhages from the lungs caused through over exertion in rowing, while spending his vacation at "Eaglesmere," the Frick's summer home at Pride's Crossing, Mass. With the assistance of a capable helper, Mr. Fraser keeps the conservatory at "concert pitch," (figuratively speaking) "year in and year out," and practically keeps the Frick New York house on Fifth avenue and Seventieth street, supplied with cut flowers during the family's stay in town, shipping regularly semi-weekly. The chrysanthemum season is usually spent at Pride's Crossing.

DURING RECESS.

The Albany (N. Y.) Florist Club gathered around the festive board last Thursday night and partook of a dinner after the annual installation of officers.

On Tuesday evening, January 12, the Tarrytown (N. Y.) Horticultural Society enjoyed its 16th annual dinner at the Florence Inn, where so many similar happy events have been pulled off in the past. The Tarrytown dinner is a veritable "feast of reason and flow of soul" as everyone knows who has been enabled to participate in any of its annual festivities. We were honored with an invitation but, much to our sorrow were obliged to forego the pleasure this time. We may have some further notes of the proceedings next week.

Frederick W. Smythe of Newport, R. I., has filed a certificate of ownership of the Newport Nursery Company with the City Clerk of that city.

Flower Market Reports

The flower markets are dull and if business does not take a quick jump cobwebs will begin to appear in the stalls. Nothing is moving easily—that's the whole story. Roses are plentiful, so are carnations. Carnation prices are hardly better than those received during the summer. Pink Delight, Beacon, Matchless and Alice Coombs are the best selling varieties. The supply of orchids is more than sufficient. Greens are fairly plentiful. Plants are moving better than the cut flowers. Narcissi, hyacinths and snapdragons are moving slowly. The demand for yellow marguerites still continues.

The week which has just past was quite unsatisfactory. Trade was very dull and receipts were heavy in the rose and carnation line. Beauties are in good supply and the quality good, though the demand lacks. The same holds true with carnations and violets. White Killarney has been very plentiful but a shortage is soon looked for. Some good Formosa and Japan lilies have had a fair sale. All other flowers very good and overstocked.

Rose stock is shortening up and the buyer finds that a given amount of money buys a smaller bundle than last week. Three cents is the lowest this week while roses could be bought for two last week. American Beauties have had another dollar added to the price per dozen and all growers report that flower as going off crop and this would be felt more were trade up to normal. Sweet peas are on the gain, both in number and size, some of the cuts now being of good stem. Spring flowers are beginning to be seen on the counters, daffodils, tulips and pussy willows being first arrivals. Trade is not at all brisk. Even with the big call for funeral work reported quite generally, the trade is in a depressed state and the aggregate for the first half of January is going to be small. Carnations are the most overdone of all stock. The amount coming into the market is entirely beyond its need and it is impossible to sell them. Among the more fancy flowers, cattleyas are also in excess of the demand, and retail florists are making leaders of them at 35c. each in their advertisements.

It were a waste of time and printers' ink to attempt to give in detail the market condition as applying to each and every specialty now listed in the wholesale flower marts. Suffice it to say that the market is overloaded with an excess crop of everything and we know of no exception to this. Carnations at $5.00 a thousand and cattleyas at $10 a hundred are a January fact which we think is unprecedented even in the records of mid-January gluts, for, although equally low selling values may have been known heretofore yet the quality of the stock so quoted has never been so high. Business is very unsatisfactory and there is little activity in any direction at present.

Splendid quality, mostly the higher colored ones—a few almost pure white.

General conditions here were about as usual for the first week after the new year, perhaps a shade less satisfactory than last year if anything, on account of the lower prices. Stocks of all kinds still very plentiful especially carnations. Roses have slackened up a little in quantity.

Since the holidays' business has naturally quieted down a little, though a good many large social affairs are planned between now and the Exposition opening, and the local market is by no means dull. Shipping business also is holding up fairly well. The violet situation has been unsatisfactory; with a large acreage, drought, disease and cold weather left scant supplies for the holidays, while now stock is coming in even too freely and is being sold by street vendors as low as 5c. per bunch. A good deal, however, is being shipped. The chrysanthemum season is about over, and poinsettias are well cleaned up. There is an excellent cut of roses, and some very fine displays are appearing about town. The white varieties are getting much more attention. Killarney Queens are very nice, but neither they nor Richmonds are moving very well, while Beauties are unusually fine and bring good prices. The same is true of Sunburst and Mrs. Aaron Ward. There is a fine crop of Cecil Bruner, but dealers hesitate to pay the prices asked. Short roses, in general, find a good market. Carnations are very fine and plentiful but continue to bring good prices. Lilium formosum is getting fairly plentiful and is well received at satisfactory prices. The same may be said of greenhouse daffodils and freesias. The cut of gardenias is still very fine and the stock cleans up fairly well at the usual figure. Orchids continue in fair supply. As for potted plants, azaleas are still showing up well, with cyclamen and begonias fairly plentiful.

ST. LOUIS The business of last week was not of the pleasing kind in either wholesale or retail circles, the market being very much crowded all week and the demand slow. Roses were in abundance and the better grades had all the demand, while the poorer ones brought little or nothing and extra fancies did not run over $6 per 100. Carnations are good but too many good lilies, lily of the valley and other bulb stock can be had in daily abundance, but sweet peas, Roman hyacinth and violets are not any too many just now.

WASHINGTON Business, according to all reports, is equally as good as in previous years at this time. But very little is expected during the first two weeks in January. There were a few substantial, and quite a number of minor decorations during the week which were very welcome. Stock is comparatively cheap. There has been quite a slump in the violet market. Sweet peas are also very plentiful and equally cheap. Gardenias are in much larger supply and the quality is better than for some time. There is a good supply of cyclamen, primroses and azaleas, for which there is a fair demand. The increased production of roses and carnations has caused a marked decrease in the price. The quantity of red roses is decreasing. The supply of these has exceeded that of January of the last few years. Novelties are holding their own in the week's quotations and Radiance and Mrs. Ward roses are moving very satisfactorily. There is a plentiful supply of narcissus for which there is but a weak demand. White lilac was seen in the market last week, this being its initial appearance of the season.

CHICAGO FLORISTS' CLUB.

Novelty Night and Installation.

The installation of officers of the Chicago Florists' Club took place Thursday, Jan. 7, and was combined with a veritable flower show. The invitation to display stock, especially of new varieties, was responded to in a way which showed that stock is abundant. Probably more attention was given to the Mrs. Russell rose, exhibited by Poehlmann Bros., than to any other rose, for its size, color, form and foliage placed it in a class by itself. An exhibit of 200 cattleyas was also made by this firm. Some splendid roses and carnations were sent by Heller and also by Olinger from New Castle, Ind. There was an exhibition of new carnations by Dorner of Lafayette, Ind. Arrangements for the evening were in the able hands of Michael Fink.

The following officers were installed: President, Wm. J. Keimel, Elmhurst, Ill.; vice president, James

WESTCHESTER AND FAIRFIELD HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

There was a large attendance at the monthly meeting of this society, Jan. 8. The following officers were installed. Pres. Wm. J. Sealey; vice pres. Wm. Morrow; treas. Robt. Williams; sec'y J. B. McArdle; cor. sec'y P. W. Popp; executive committee John T. Burns, Ewen McKenzie, Thos. Ryan, James Stuart, James Foster. The members of this society will please take notice that the meetings will hereafter start promptly at 7.30 o'clock P. M. thereby enabling those who come from a distance to enjoy at least the full business session. It was voted to hold the annual summer exhibition in June, dates and location to be announced later. A committee was appointed to complete all arrangements for the annual entertainment and dance which will be held in February. A feature of this meeting was the illustrated lecture by Neil Morrow Ladd, president of the Greenwich Bird Protective Society on "How to attract the Birds." Feeding devices, shelters, etc., were illustrated and described. A rising vote of thanks was accorded the speaker. The competition for the secretary's prize for the best 18 carnations in three varieties brought out a wonderful display, the judges awarded 1st, to Thos. Ryan; 2nd to John Canning; 3rd, to Robt. Grunnert; the other competitors each received a vote of thanks. In the non-competitive display the judges awarded a cultural certificate to Sam'l Bachelor for a magnificent vase of "Gorgeous" also was highly commended for each of several other fine vases of carnations. Thos. Aitcheson, carnations, vote of thanks; seedling carnations from A. Wynne highly commended; P. W. Popp, yellow sport of Mrs. C. W. Ward, highly commended; A. L. Marshall, laelias, highly commended; Robt. Williamson, Cyrtipedium insigne, highly commended. Votes of thanks to Carl Hankerson for Killarney roses; Thos. Ryan, for carnations; R. Grunnert, for vegetables, P. W. Popp, for Buddleia asiatica.

At the next meeting Feb. 12 will be a lecture on Coniferous Trees, by James Kelly of New Canaan, Conn. John Canning offers prizes for the best vase of roses any varieties.

THE PRACTICAL BOOK OF Outdoor Rose Growing

FOR THE HOME GARDEN

by

GEORGE C. THOMAS, JR.

Elaborately Illustrated with 96 Perfect Reproductions in Full Color of All Varieties of Roses, and a Few Half-tone Plates. Octavo, Handsome Cloth Binding, in a Slip Case. $4.00 net. Postage Extra.

ITS SPECIAL APPEAL

As a Practical Working Manual for Outdoor Rose Growing in America This Volume Contains Several Features Which Make it Exceptionally Valuable:

First, plain and carefully thought out rules, which have proven successful for many years in actual practice.

Second, a list of roses made only after the entire catalogue list of varieties has been systematically tried for years in this country in testing beds.

Third, ninety-six remarkable illustrations in color reproduced from autochrome color photographs made from the varieties tested.

In addition, chapters devoted to general information are added as of interest, and books going further into detail on the various subjects are suggested.

Don't overlook the appropriateness of this beautiful volume as a gift to any friend who loves Roses.

J. J. Wilson Seed Company, Newark, N. J.—List of Flower and Vegetable Seed Novelties and Specialties—1915. Antirrhinum nanum grandiflorum The Fawn, Calliopsis compacta Fire King, and other useful florists' flowers are illustrated.

Weeber & Don, New York.—General Seed and Garden Catalogue for 1915. A very handsome catalogue, fine paper, fine cuts and excellent arrangement. The trade mark of the firm, a sower scattering seeds, make an appropriate cover medallion. There is a tempting novelty list.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co., Boston.—Garden Annual, 1915. A 172-page volume, with a very artistic and unique cover showing a blooming specimen of Lilium myriophyllum in dark green on a pure white surface and overlaid with a panel giving a birdseye view of the extensive plant nurseries and plant houses of this firm at Dedham, Mass. On the back cover appears a group of eight views in different sections of the nurseries. The book is profusely illustrated and well indexed and attractive throughout.

Sluis & Groot, Enkhuizen, Holland.—General Price List of Vegetable, Flower and Agricultural Seeds. Issued under date of December 22, 1914. This is a wholesale price list of 125 pages, very comprehensive, and to anyone interested in European flower seeds and Holland vegetable specialties the book has an intrinsic value of uncommon scope. We must look to Holland as the "go-between" for commercial relations with many European sources of supply under the conditions now existing and in that country Sluis & Groot stand well equipped to be of service. On mignonette, candytuft, calendulas, etc., in florists' flowers and spinach and root crops in market gardening specialties this firm has an enviable record.

H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, Pa.—Dreer's Garden Book, 1915. Appropriately bound in forest green, with gold embossed lettering and the well-known trade mark of the Dreer house and handsomely printed and embellished with engravings, this book will have no trouble in finding its way to the hearts of the garden people. It contains 272 pages of solid, substantial material, including fine full-page colored plates of roses, larkspurs, dwarf zinnias and garden vegetables. Dreer's is a big institution and this, its 77th annual edition of the Garden Book, is in every respect a worthy herald of its spring ministrations to the growing horticultural appetite of the American people.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

Gardeners' and Florists' Annual for 1915. Published by A. T. De La Mare Printing and Publishing Co., Ltd., New York—The contents of this volume are quite fully indicated on the title page, as follows: "A Digest of the Events of the Horticultural Year at Home and Abroad; A Business Section Devoted to Banking, Insurance, Exporting, Importing, etc.; Special Articles of Current Interest, Men Prominent During the Year and an Invaluable Section of Practical Rules; Hints and Recipes all Indexed and Classified." The book contains 232 pages, besides some 50 pages of advertising. It embraces much of timely interest and will, no doubt, be found useful as a handy reference and, as such, will be welcomed by the profession. It gives evidence of much patient and painstaking application in its preparation and insofar as it is intended to fill a new field not hitherto supplied in this country in a practical way, it looks like a success and deserves to be such. The selling price is 50 cents.

First Report of the Board of Park Commissioners, Spokane, Washington—A model of artistic excellence, as well as a very interesting compilation of information valuable for anyone whose mind is engrossed in park work and modern methods of entertaining and refreshing the public in metropolitan communities. Type matter and the illustrations, which are many and beautiful, are printed in dark green ink. There are eight folded maps and plans which add materially to the lucidity of its story and Superintendent Duncan is to be congratulated on the very evident success of his administration.

The Fifteenth Annual Report of the Minnesota State Entomologist, a bound volume of over two hundred pages is just received and is worthy of more than passing notice. The contents include chapters on Insect Conditions in 1913 and 1914, Useful Birds found in Minnesota, Nursery Inspection, Tree Insects, Spraying, Index to Insect Life, Fly Control, Warble Flies, Truck Crop Insects, Wire Worms, Preliminary notes on Odonata and The Acrididae of Minnesota. In addition to the text which is freely illustrated there are sixteen full page plates of which four pages of birds and four of grasshoppers are beautiful examples of color work. The chapter on useful birds, 19 pages, is written in popular form and should prove of much educational value in impressing upon the public the close relationship between bird protection and freedom from destructive insects. In short, the book is teeming with valuable and interesting facts presented in an exact, but not too scientific manner.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
 $4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

ObituaryCharles McTaggart.

Charles McTaggart, 46 years old, chief salesman for W. G. Marshall & Co., seedsmen, at 146 West Twenty-third street, New York, whose home was at Kearny, N. J., was cut in two by an eastbound Erie railroad train running on the west-bound track at 11.55 o'clock Sunday morning, Jan. 10, at the Kearny Station. Mr. McTaggart was to board the train at the station on his way to New York, and had walked along the tracks from his home. Because of repairs to the east-bound track the train approached the station on the west-bound track, and Mr. McTaggart, with his back to it, was unaware of its approach. Women on the station platform shouted warnings, but he heard them too late.

Louis S. Williams, Jr.

Louis S. Williams, Jr., son of Louis S. and Mary R. Williams, aged 19 years, died at his home 175 Acushnet avenue, New Bedford, Mass., on January 7, following an extended illness. Shortly after the boy's graduation from grammar school he entered the employ of William P. Pierce, where he learned the florist business. Two years later he opened a floral store at 180 Acushnet avenue, and had built up a good business. He is survived by a mother and father and a brother, Albert M. Williams.

Good, Strong Well Established Plants in 2½-Inch Pots of the Exceedingly

VALUABLE NEW ROSES

Ophelia, Francis Scott Key and Prince E. C. d'Arenberg

Growers will find all of these valuable additions to the list of standard varieties. They have been tested thoroughly, and have been found to have exceptional value.

OPHELIA. No variety ever introduced possesses so many excellent qualities. It is a splendid grower, a free bloomer, and has fine stems. It sells on sight. The demand and price have exceeded the supply. Anticipating the large demand, we have propagated it extensively. Strong plants on own roots, 2½-in. pots, now ready—$15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY. This variety, raised by Mr. John Cook, is very distinct, being entirely different from any of the indoor roses grown today. Flowers are rosy red, and are unusually large and double, resembling very much a very full, double hardy garden rose. Coupled with its large size and double form, it is an exceedingly free bloomer. It promises to be exceedingly valuable, especially for spring, summer and fall flowering, when other less double roses are difficult to handle. Its keeping qualities are remarkable. Strong plants on own roots, 2½-in. pots, now ready—$15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

PRINCE E. C. D'ARENBERG. This variety might well have been termed Red Killarney, as it possesses so many of the good qualities of the Killarneys. In color, the flowers are similar to Richmond, but they are much more double, and it should prove a very much more profitable rose. Flowers have fine straight stems on all the grades—from the shortest to the longest. It has fine foliage, comes away quickly, and is even a freer bloomer than the Killarneys. We believe it is the best all-round red rose that we have today. Strong plants on own roots, 2½-in. pots, now ready—$12.00 per 100, $90.00 per 1000.

We will be glad to quote on application, prices on all the newer and standard varieties—strong grafted plants ready in March.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil." -Lope.

Bedding Begonias

To have good sized plants by planting out time begonia seed should be sown now. Sow in pans, using some rough soil on the bottom, and then filling up with a compost of finely sifted loam, leaf mold and sand. Stand them in a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees and shade from direct sunlight. In about a month or six weeks the seedlings will be ready to prick out into flats. In March they should be ready for 2-inch pots, using a mixture of soil, old manure, leaf mold and sand. At this stage they will be better in a temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees with a raise to 75 degrees with sunshine.

Calceolarias

Never attempt to hurry calceolarias along with too much heat, as they will not stand to be forced. Forty-five degrees at night will keep them in good health. Keep them moist at the roots, but never in a soaked condition, as extremes in either dry or over-wet are bad. Under no circumstances neglect ventilation. Take advantage of every good day and give some air. Give weekly fumigation against the green aphid. As the plants become pot-bound they will take some liquid manure once a week.

Care of Violets

As with most other plants brought under cultivation, the violet either has brought with it or has become subject to some serious fungous enemies. They should now be in good healthy condition and flowering freely. Give all the air the weather will permit and at the same time have on a little steam (this for mild weather) in order to keep the air dry. At all times keep the air pure and dry. For Marie Louise, Imperial and Single 38 to 40 degrees at night and 10 degrees to 12 degrees warmer during the day is about right. Should the house drop occasionally as low as 35 degrees, there is no harm in it; they really seem to be benefited. Fumigating must be regularly and carefully given. Smoking, not too heavy, two nights in succession each week will keep the plants clean of greenfly.

Next Week:—Care of Carnations; Early Asters; Euphorbia Jaquimaeflora; Geraniums; Sowing Candytuft and Stocks; Pansies, Myosotis, Pinks, Etc.

Fuchsias

It is time now to look after the stock plants of fuchsias. Fuchsias are looked upon by some as old-fashioned, but they are nevertheless popular with many and probably always will be. While we cannot make as manifold uses of them for bedding and exhibition purposes as in Europe, we can use them for flowering in pots, for planting out in partially shaded beds and for piazza boxes, where they do not get too much sun. Given a repotting now, the stock plants will produce a batch of succulent cuttings later on. They are easily rooted. Pot off into 2½ inch pots and later into 4 inch, using at the last potting moderately rich soil. Nice little plants in 4 inch pots, carrying a few flowers sell well in May and June and any country florist who grows a batch can easily dispose of them.

Gardenias

Those who would succeed with gardenias in winter must watch them carefully and keep as even a temperature as possible, particularly at night. A night temperature of 65 to 70 degrees just now is right for those which are blooming. A fairly moist atmosphere is indispensable, as is also a porous soil. Water should pass quickly through the benches when applied. If it does not, the conditions are wrong and yellow foliage and dropping buds are certainties. Be very careful when ventilating as they do not like cold drafts. Give a good syringing on all bright mornings. While there are occasional periods of glut even at this season of the year, prices as a rule hold up well and those who are able to make gardenias bloom freely during the coldest months will find them a paying crop. You can begin to feed with liquid manure water now as the days are becoming longer.

Red Spider

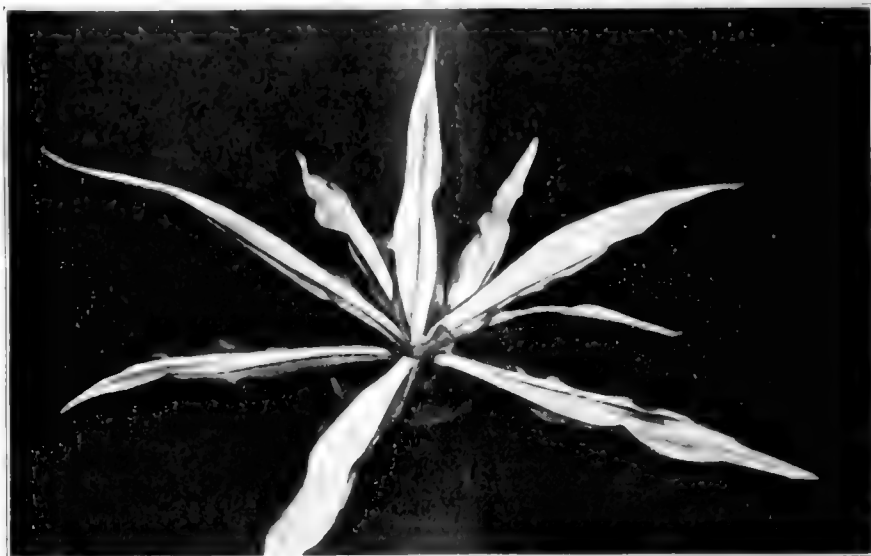

In all warm houses where we have to keep up a good deal of fire heat, we will surely be troubled with red spider. A good syringing on the under side of the foliage whenever we have a good bright day is essential. This will have reference to all such crops as carnations, sweet peas, antirrhinums, gardenias and many foliage plants. Keep right after this dreaded enemy with a good force of water at least once a week.

Furcraea Watsoniana

The Furcraea Watsoniana is a native of the low mountains of the Sierra Nevada. It is a very hardy plant, and is one of the few plants which will grow in the most sterile soil. It was introduced into this country by the late Mr. J. C. Watson, who won a gold medal at the International Exhibition in London. It is indeed a most beautiful plant, the pure white variegation is as clear as a bell. It was first shown at the Great Centennial Exhibition in 1893 by Sander & Son, where it was recognized as Furcraea Watsoniana. It is named after W. Watson of Kew Gardens.

FURCRAEA WATSONIANA.

Oenothera

Oenotheras or evening primroses have the distinction of being nearly all natives of our hemisphere. We know most of the upright bushy growing species to be very valuable border plants on account of the vivid yellow hues of their large clusters of flowers. In the northern part of the New England States I used the fruticosa varieties, such as Eldorado, Fraseri, Pilgrimi and, particularly the very popular Oenothera fruticosa Youngi for June effects. Blended with the blue of delphiniums and the white of the Madonna lilies the clear golden hues of solid masses of evening primroses outclass in purity and strength by far those of Coreopsis grandiflora. In order to obtain the desired perfection we should give our plantations an open sunny exposure, in a rather light but otherwise rich soil. In addition I advise dividing and replanting every other season. The ground remanured each time and, during the summer months, sufficiently irrigated, we are bound to have vigorous growing and freely branching plants of which we may expect that abundance of blossoms necessary for a strong color effect. Neglected evening primroses soon turn out to be an eye-sore in any garden.

Perfectly hardy, the fruticosa species attain an average height of $1\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 feet. As a recent novelty, originating with Henry A. Dreer, I mention Oenothera fruticosa pallida, producing very attractive flowers of a creamy white color. Later in growth about 1 to $1\frac{1}{2}$ feet in height are the two species Oenothera caespitosa with large pure white flowers turning to rose, and Oenothera speciosa, producing pure white blossoms throughout the entire season. Both prove excellent subjects for herbaceous borders. The flowers of the new variety—speciosa rosea, measuring about 3 inches across are of a delicate pink color.

In conclusion I beg to call special attention to the two species of creeping growth, treasured among our showiest inmates of rock gardens. Oenothera Harvadi from Nevada is distinguishable by its grayish white hirsute long narrow foliage and beautiful deep yellow flowers. Oenothera missouriensis depicted by our illustration enjoys the greatest popularity of all the evening primroses. It is the largest flowering species, of clear sulphur-yellow: in bloom from early in July until late in September. Both prefer the high sunny location and endure prolonged periods of draught without serious injury, for their rootstocks penetrate down deep into the ground. Contrary to the fruticosa and speciosa types they should be left undisturbed as long as possible.

On the whole, evening primroses merit more attention and garden space than they have so far received. Under proper cultural care they prove a highly effective material, indispensable for floral midsummer and late spring displays within the precincts of American gardens.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the Editor of HORTICULTURE.

Preventing Washing of Soils

Growers whose places are situated in a hilly country, will save money by not letting any portion of their grounds lie exposed to the weather during the winter months. There is a great loss of manure to have the soil bare and subject to the action of wind and rain which will waste the best portion of the soil, leaving nothing but the coarse grains behind it. This may not be visible the first year, but if it continues for a number of seasons, the soil will be robbed of much of its humus, as well as of its very fine particles, just such as are necessary to grow good stuff. It is waste to buy hundreds of dollars' worth of manure every year and then let it wash out of the soil every winter. If it has been impossible to sow some good cover crop such as rye or vetch, then go over the hills, and make ridges of coarse straw, manure or leaves or anything that can be made to stay put, and this will keep the water from washing out deep trenches all through the soil, and carrying the best portions of it down to some road or somebody else's lot. When the ground is not frozen, this danger will be very small, unless the hills are steep, but even then there will be loss of good plantfood, for the best portion of the soluble fertilizers will sink far down into the earth where it will be of little use to the plants. If the field had been covered with rye or grass the roots of these would hold the food particles together, and when the rye was turned under in the spring, these would be released and once more available to the following crop. The stalks of rye would decay, and add a lot of valuable organic matter, which most soils lack. We have yet to see a field where there was an oversupply of organic matter or humus.

The Dull Weather

After the cold snap that we have had we get a spell with the thermometer up to 40 outside, with heavy rains. This is a trying time for rose growers. Watering, feeding, and ventilation will have to receive the very best of care, for the roses are easily ruined in this weather, when a mistake is made in either of the three, and will receive such a set-back that it will take a lot of time for them to recover. Do not use any liquid manure unless the plants need it very badly, and be careful not to get the houses too warm. It is very seldom that the houses will get too dry, and yet this is possible where the walks and benches and floors are all of concrete. Do not carry too much air, as this would be apt to descend directly on the plants, and give you trouble with mildew.

Leaky Houses

During these wind and rain storms it will be time well spent to go over the houses and mark the places where they leak very bad. If the houses are going to be painted and puttied the coming season, then this will not be necessary, but if this painting is not to be done for a while to come, then it will be good to mark these places as suggested and then putty, and even paint them in the summer. It will be time well spent, for these places will cause more damage than one can imagine at first thought. Blackspot will start here as a rule and then spread to the whole greenhouse if it is not stopped in time. Then, too, if care is not used in watering there will always be places where the plants will be too wet, and these will not produce as much as they should if they were growing under good conditions.

Tying

With the rush of propagation, this item in the growing end should never be neglected. This applies especially to American Beauties for these will feel the effects of this neglect much sooner than any other variety, and if they are allowed to lie around a good deal they will go blind. Spider is always very apt to make headway in houses that are allowed to go untied for any length of time, as syringing will be very difficult. Do not let them go too long and it will be rapid work to go over them once a week and tie them up. Houses that are kept tied all the time will produce far more flowers than houses that are allowed to grow as they best can. Bend all the tall Beauties down, and try to keep them in a nice line. This will give all the shoots the same show, and will make the house look nice and neat at the same time. Shoots that show buds will better be allowed to grow on. Cut out all sticks that remain on the wires, after the specials have been cut off. This applies to the ones that have been bent down and then flowered and were cut off at the wire. If these were cut in the proper place at cutting time, it would take too long to do it, thus wasting a lot of valuable time. Do not let these sticks stay on for that would hamper the plants from starting a new crop of shoots for flowers.

Rainbow chasing A correspondent of the "Horticultural Advertiser" (London) states that several firms at Aalsmeer, Holland, have taken the initiative of making trials of sending roses and forced lilac blooms to the United States, believing it quite possible to deliver cut flowers from Aalsmeer to the American markets. He further says "the Holland-America Line has evidently sanguine expectations respecting the export of cut flowers to America, as this company offered the representative of these firms a free first-class voyage." Evidently these European gentlemen have not read HORTICULTURE or else, in their desperation over their loss of European trade because of war, they have determined to take no heed of the information published from week to week which shows that the production of roses, forced lilac and many other things is more than keeping pace with the demand for these products in the United States. The proposition, impracticable as it is, will not tend to any increased American regard for the Holland growers who would ship plants to growers in this country and then seek to cut into their market for the cut flower product therefrom. Another grievance would be the fact that when nursery stock or other raw materials are imported from Holland it provides employment for American labor, but cut flowers are a finished product and pay nothing to American labor. The fact that the distance is too great to allow of the delivery of such goods in acceptable condition to compete with locally grown fresh material will hardly lessen the resentment that the attempt will arouse. Chasing a rainbow for the pot of gold at the end of it is as old as the human race and this fruitless quest of our Holland friends will undoubtedly have the inevitable ending which comes to all such visionary schemes.

TOMATOES UNDER GLASS.

Horticulture Pub. Co.:

Dear Sirs:—Will you kindly give me a little information regarding tomato culture under glass? I am using my old cold frame soil, which for two years previous has grown lettuce with good success. I heated this soil upon iron plates (to kill eel worm) which I wheeled to my benches, at the same time adding one double handful of fine ground bonedust to each barrow load of soil, thoroughly mixing same; after this I watered the soil to cause the bone-meal to decay.

I planted my tomatoes six weeks later from 5-inch pots; the plants stand 21 inches and 24 inches in the open bench. Six weeks later I gave a dressing of air-slacked lime and worked this into the top inch of soil. I stirred my top soil slightly to keep the green down. All soil here naturally is in part decayed pine needle, and it is hard to get soil free from it. I keep my houses as near as possible 70 degrees by day and 55 to 60 degrees at night. The only ventilation is through the top; no side ventilation whatever, except through the doors on warm days.

The result is in brief: The tomatoes are Beauty (Livingstone), Redfield Beauty, Plum, Red Peach, Wonder of Italy, etc. The first bunch of fruit does well, and ripen in four months. The second and third bunch grew to about half size, then stopped swelling and look as though they have done all they are going to do. The bloom of the fourth bunch dropped entirely.

I have a little "sleepy disease," but I am free from yellow spot with my plants. Can you give me any remedy? Am after giving them two light dressings of phosphoric acid. Kindly oblige a subscriber. W. V. Georgia.

In answer to W. V.'s inquiry in regard to tomato trouble, from details given, I should say two things were responsible. In the first place the compost used appears to be satisfactory so far, but does not contain sufficient food to carry the plants along. When cropping tomatoes will stand quite heavy feeding if the compost of the soil is right. Soil used for two crops of lettuce will have lost some of the necessary food required by the tomatoes. A good compost for tomatoes should be fresh soil with the addition of one half pound each of superphosphate and wood ashes with a dusting of bone meal. The bone meal alone would have the tendency to create a leafy unfruitful growth. The plants should be planted fairly firm to encourage a fine root system and when established in this compost and fruit set they will take regular feeding with liquid manure or weak application of nitrate of soda 1 oz. to the square yard.

Secondly the tomatoes will not thrive unless supplied with plenty of air and light. It is rather difficult to give tomatoes a circulation of air without bottom ventilation. A chink of air on the bottom and top of the house with a warm pipe will create a buoyant dry atmosphere most suitable for tomatoes' developing and setting. The temperature stated by W. V. should be all right if other matters are attended to

J. W. SMITH,

Ridgefield, Conn.

In our editorial note last week regarding the influence of environment on seed qualities a slip of the pen made us say "five or six months" instead of "five or six weeks" as to the time required for the germination of buttercup seed.

CAMPANULA PYRAMIDALIS.

The accompanying picture gives a very inadequate impression of the beauty of this stately plant, which in tints of deep or pale blue and pure white adds so rich and dignified effect and delicious perfume to the halls and balconies of the summer estates that abound in the mountains and along the North Atlantic Coast. Six or eight feet of inflorescence is not uncommon and if the plants are enclosed and screened so that the bees will not fertilize the flowers and seeds will not form they will keep flowering over the entire length of the raceme for a remarkable period of time.

PROPAGATING CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Dear Sir: Will you please answer the following question in your next issue?

When is the best time to strike chrysanthemum cuttings, and will they do in part of carnation house or rose house after they are rooted? What treatment do they require? Is it best to put glass over them? W. Connecticut.

The best time to strike chrysanthemum cuttings is generally about the middle of March. The early varieties might safely be started March 1, mid-season and late varieties rooted later on in the month and even in April, depending upon whether they are to be grown several to the stem or single. The former should be struck earlier. After they are rooted the cuttings will do very well in carnation temperature; but not in the rose house, as doing so would make them too soft. Do not put glass over them, as they are liable to damp off when thus shut in.

PLANT FOR NAME.

The specimen sent to this office for identification by "A. J. M." Tarrytown, N. Y., appears to be Santolina Chamaecyparissus. But for proper identification of any plant something more than the tip of a twig should be sent—also information as to flower, habit of growth, etc., all of which A. J. M. neglected to send.

THE ARRANGEMENT OF FLOWER SHOWS.

Editor of HORTICULTURE:

My Dear Sir—Your article or editorial in the issue of HORTICULTURE for December 26, on more decorative features for our flower shows interests me not a little.

It occurs to me to write you of a small episode of my own recent experience. For the Daffodil Year Book of the Royal Horticultural Society I had occasion to write this past year an article on "The Daffodil in America." In the course of this I described the daffodil show of the Garden Club of Michigan and spoke with enthusiasm of the beautiful exhibits in the class which called for arrangements of daffodils with two other flowers. Rev. W. Wilks, the Secretary of The Royal Horticultural Society in his preface to the Year Book said: "Some of our correspondents must pardon us if we ask that in future such accounts should only contain matter connected with Daffodils and not with other Spring-flowering plants."

When the Year Book received its review in The Gardener's Chronicle (London) of November 7th, this passage appeared: "Is it too much to hope that we may some day see the baskets and artistically arranged vases and tables referred to by Mrs. Francis King in her account of the Daffodil in America finding a place in the Westminster schedule."

I venture to add this bit of conflicting opinion to the discussion in your columns which is full of interest to all who hope to see our flower shows increase in beauty and effectiveness. How the shows at The Grand Central Palace are planned I do not know, but the advice of the best landscape architect in the country would be none too good for such an occasion as this. I mean, of course, on the general arrangement of exhibits,—the floor as a whole.

Very truly yours,

LOUISA KING.

Alma, Mich.

GRAFTING ORANGE TREES.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

I am a subscriber to HORTICULTURE and I write to ask for information through your paper on the grafting of orange trees. How and when is the best time to do it under glass and what are the best grafts to use? Should older ripened wood or softer growing wood be used for the grafts?

Yours truly,

C. H. T.

Oranges under glass can be grafted any time from December to May. The best wood is half ripe material, side or cleft graft or budding. If the tree is old, shorten the long branches and graft as near to the base of stem as possible or on the old stem if not too coarse. As soon as grafted, keep in close frame or under glass for two or three weeks, occasionally looking to see that there is not too much moisture. As soon as the bud or graft begins to grow, slacken the binding, but do not take off the tying material until the graft is well established. After about three weeks, it ought to be able to stand in the green house, but not in too airy a position at first.

LENOX HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

The monthly meeting of this Society was held on Jan. 13. The schedule for the summer show, July 27 and 28 was adopted. The following special prizes for the fall exhibition have been donated. By W. S. Griswold, Lenox, a silver cup for the best collection of eighteen varieties of vegetables. By R. & J. Farquhar & Co., Boston, silver cup for the best collection of twelve varieties of vegetables.

An interesting lecture was then given by Dr. N. W. Sanborn, representing the State Board of Agriculture on "My Way With Poultry." A unanimous vote of thanks was given to Dr. Sanborn who appropriately replied.

HOLYOKE AND NORTHAMPTON FLORISTS' AND GARDENERS' CLUB.

The monthly meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists' and Gardeners' Club was held in Amherst, Mass., at the home of that veteran gardener, Thos. Foulds, on the evening of January 12. It was decided by the members of this club to hold their monthly meetings at each other's places of business or to choose one, owing to age and failing health Mr. Foulds has not been able to attend any of the meetings for the past year, so it was decided to hold the January meeting at his home. His gentlemanly character and kindly disposition, has won the love of all the members, while his broad acquaintance and love of plants, together with his helpful talks, has been an inspiration.

THOMAS FOULDS

E. H. Downer of the Smith College botanic gardens gave an excellent paper on herbaceous perennials which caused much discussion. G. H. Sinclair exhibited fine blooms of the new carnations from his new Smith's Ferry greenhouse and was awarded a first-class certificate. Mr. Carey of South Hadley also showed carnations and was awarded a certificate.

Some fifteen members were present, and five new candidates were elected to membership. Mrs. Foulds provided refreshments and it was one of the most enjoyable evenings the club has had.

PITTSBURGH FLORISTS' AND GARDENERS' CLUB.

The regular club meeting was held in the Fort Pitt Hotel on the evening

January 5. Nomination of officers for the year 1915 was in order, and the present board of officers was renominated without any change, viz.:

President, Neil McCallum; vice-president, E. C. Reineman; treasurer, T. P. Langhans; secretary, H. P. Joslin; asst. secretary, W. A. Clarke. Executive Committee: P. S. Randolph, C. H. Sample, A. Frishkorn.

Geo. Cruickshank, representative of R. & J. Farquhar Co., Boston, showed a blooming plant of Azalea Kaempferi with lively pink blossoms, smaller than those of the Ghent azaleas. It was claimed for it that it was perfectly hardy out of doors and a good forcer. Jno. W. Jones, of the Bureau of Parks, showed Buddleia asiatica in bloom, and Carl Becherer, gardener Dixmont Hospital, two blooming plants of Primula malacoides. Jno. Zimmerman showed an air plant, one of the Tillandsias found growing on the branch of a tree near Tampa Fla.

The subject of the meeting was "Artificial Flowers," and there were fine displays by the Botanical Decorating Co. of Chicago and by the E. J. McCallum Co. of Pittsburgh. The quality of the work was high, and at a short distance it was impossible to tell which was artificial and which was real. This was particularly noticeable in the English ivy, orchids, ferns, wistaria, cyclamen and gloxinias.

There was quite a discussion upon the merits and uses of artificial flowers, and it seemed to be conceded that in decoration, as for example around the ceilings of heated rooms, chandeliers, or any position where flowers will be subjected to much heat, artificial flowers have a necessary place, but it was thought to be against the interests of florists to press them for corsage bouquets. It was stated also that fern dishes with natural ferns would give more satisfaction to the owner than if filled with artificial ferns, the element of loving care and attention entering into the matter in the case of the natural ferns.

A vote of thanks was tendered the exhibitors.

ST. LOUIS FLORIST CLUB.

The Florist Club held a most interesting monthly meeting Thursday afternoon January 14th, 35 members were present, including all the officers. There was an exhibition of roses. A fine vase of Hoosier Beauty from the E. G. Hill Co., attracted a great deal of attention, also a fine lot of Ophelia sent by Ammann Co., Edwardsville, Ill. The reports brought in by the Spring Flower Show committee did not give encouragement for holding the show and it was decided to drop it for this season. The trustees reported on the club's entertainment and dance which takes place Jan. 27 at Westminster Hall. Tickets are selling well and all indications point to a successful affair.

It was decided after a discussion to extend an invitation to the American Carnation Society to hold its 1916 meeting in St. Louis. The club is backed up in this by the local convention and publicity bureau and a member of the club has been delegated to attend the meeting at Buffalo next week and extend an invitation in person.

H. C. Irish of the State Board of Horticulture, reported as to a State appropriation to advance floriculture and state exhibition this report was followed by J. F. Ammann, who told the members how the Illinois State Florists' Association was organized and how it obtained its appropriation from the state. After a lengthy discussion it was voted that the club secretary write to the Kansas City Florists' Club as to the advisability of organizing a Missouri State Florists' Association and have the matter up for discussion at the February meeting. The committee reported on the new rose Hoosier Beauty as follows: "We, the committee, believe that the red rose Hoosier Beauty exhibited by E. G. Hill Co. is an improvement over any red rose in commerce."

The question box brought out a good discussion, after which the meeting adjourned.

WESTERN NEW YORK HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The indications are that the sixtieth anniversary of this time-honored organization will be one of the most successful it has ever had. Entries in the competitive fruit exhibit classes, together with the non-competitive exhibits, will severely tax the space available in the exhibition annex of the great Convention Hall, Rochester, N. Y. The dates of the meeting are January 27th, 28th and 29th, and the program is a model in its galaxy of speakers—practical growers and experiment station men—as also in its popular round table schedules for discussion on small fruits and vegetables. Three exhibition rooms, 100x128 feet each, will be filled with spraying apparatus in motion, tractors, apple graders, spray chemicals, and the large insect and fungous diseases displays of the Geneva Experiment Station and Cornell. Then, on Thursday evening, Jan. 28th, the evening of the second day's meeting, members and their friends are invited to an entertainment of great excellence, which will consist of an opening concert by Rochester's favorite made quartette, followed by an illustrated lecture on Italy, by a noted Continental traveler living in Rochester. Programs may be secured from and membership fees sent to John Hall, Secretary-Treasurer, 204 Granite Building, Rochester, N. Y.

CONNECTICUT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The regular fortnightly meeting of this society was held in the County Building, Hartford, Friday evening, January 8. President Mason announced the following committees:

Executive—John F. Huss, G. H. Hollister, W. W. Hunt, Oscar F. Gritzmacher, C. H. Sierman. Publicity—James M. Adams, Edward Brassill, Alfred Dixon.

President Mason exhibited a fine collection of camellias, Chorizema illicifolia and Clerodendron Balfourii from the conservatories of Mrs. A. A. Pope of Farmington. Alex Cumming, Jr., of A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, staged Buddleia asiatica. A cultural certificate was awarded to each exhibit.

President Mason's proposition of a spring flower show was endorsed with much enthusiasm. Same will be given the last of May or early in June.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club, of Baltimore, will have a Ladies' Night on January 25.

The following named committee was appointed at Farmers' Week, in New Brunswick, N. J., to arrange a meeting for the formation of a State association of nurserymen: L. C. Bobbink of Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford; Mr. Flemer of the F. and F. Nurseries, Springfield; J. L. Lovett of the Monmouth Nurseries, Little Silver.

A Dutch garden will be an important feature of Worcester County Horticultural Society's spring exhibit of flowers and plants which will be held March 4 and 5 in Horticultural Hall, Worcester, Mass. Judging from plans outlined for the Dutch Garden and its setting, the spring show will be one of the most elaborate of any ever given by the society.

The Sixtieth Annual Meeting of the Western New York Horticultural Society will be held at Convention Hall, Rochester, on January 27, 28 and 29. The program of the sessions and the prizes for the fruit exhibits, neatly bound, has been sent out by Secretary John Hall and copies may be had from him on request. His address is 204 Granite Building, Rochester, N. Y.

Since the organization of the American Gladiolus Society, the annual show have been held in conjunction with the conventions of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists. As the convention this year will be held at San Francisco and this is too great a distance from the majority of growers, it has been deemed best to hold our annual show at Newport, R. I., on August 18 and 19, upon invitation of the local Society.

Syracuse, N. Y.

The first meeting of the New London (Conn.) Horticultural Society for 1915 was held on the 14th inst. when Edward A. Smith gave an interesting paper on "The Culture of Carnations." The tables were filled with Primula malacoides, freesias and carnations White Wonder, Matchless, Enchantress Supreme, Gloriosa, Princess Dagmar, Benora, Mrs. C. W. Barron, Northport and several others. The February meeting will be Ladies' Night when the lady members will take entire charge.

Charles F. Tansill of the Department of Agriculture, has been elected president of the Brookland Rose Society of Washington, D. C., the other officers being Dr. William Turner, vice president; Mrs. Margaret B. Downing, secretary, and Miss Carrie Harrison, secretary. The society adopted a resolution by which it will become affiliated with the American Rose Society. The next meeting will be held on February 20, at which time F. L. Mulford, of the Department of Agriculture, who is in charge of the government rose garden at Arlington, Va., will give a talk on "The Pruning of the Rose." There was a large attendance and many plans were laid for the coming year.

The Indiana State Florists' Association held its annual meeting in Indianapolis, on Tuesday, January 12. There was a very interesting exhibition among which were some superb vases of roses and carnations from F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y.; W. Frank & Sons, Portland, Ind.; Baur & Steinkamp, F. Dorner & Sons' Co., Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia; Berterman Bros. and others. A vase of E. H. Wilson's beautiful and fragrant Chinese introduction Buddleia asiatica was much admired. There was a banquet on the evening. Officers were elected as follows: President, J. B. Vesey, Ft. Wayne, Ind.; first vice-pres., John Hartje, Indianapolis; second vice-pres., J. B. Vesey, Ft. Wayne; treasurer, Homer Wiegand; secretary, Oliver E. Steinkamp, Indianapolis.

The Tarrytown Dinner.

The Tarrytown dinner of which brief mention was made in our previous issue, was without a doubt the best held under the auspices of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society. The dining room never looked more beautiful. The tables were profusely decorated with the choicest flowers and when the members and guests had taken their places, there was not a vacant chair. Secretary Neubrand asked the Rev. James J. Henry to ask the blessing and then one verse of "America" was sung while all were standing.

William Jamieson, president of the society, welcomed the guests and then called upon Frank R. Pierson. Mr. Pierson extended a welcome on behalf of the village to all present and he then commended the society for the excellence of all its affairs, exhibitions and dinners. Mr. Pierson then read letters of regret from Assemblyman Walter W. Law, Jr., The Monmouth Society, W. J. Stewart of Boston, and R. A. Patteson, A. P. Cobb, and J. Austin Shaw, the latter sending also a "poem." John F. Dunkel officiated as toastmaster. Among the speakers were the following named gentlemen: Rev. J. J. Henry, Senator Chas. P. McClelland, Judge A. S. Thompson the silver-tongued orator and humorist of Nyack, Hon. Frank L. Young (on "hard times"), C. E. Tibbitts, J. Sperry, J. J. Sinnott, C. D. Millard and Wallace Odell and others. E. E. Carman sang several fine solos.

Peter Henderson & Co. Employees' Jubilation.

The annual dinner of the staff of Peter Henderson & Co., of New York, was held on Thursday evening, January 14, at Mouquin's French restaurant, Fulton street. An excellent menu was prepared under the supervision of Louis Mouquin and was enjoyed by all those present.

After dinner the company was entertained by a series of humorous and sentimental songs by the well-known vocalist, Guy Hunter of Hackensack, N. J., who it is needless to say kept them in roars of laughter by his humor. The songs were interspersed with speeches by Mr. O'Mara, general manager, and representatives of the various departments. Mr. O'Mara's speech was very optimistic as to business prospects for the coming season. Speeches were also made by Messrs. Cole, de Arcas, Fay, Littlefield Low, Mackrell, McDougall, Morton, Peck, Smith and Veitch. The menu card and program, designed and written by T. L. Peck of the catalogue department, was an artistic gem.

Portland Festivities.

A party of florists from Portland and vicinity enjoyed a dinner and entertainment at the Wayland house, Dunstan, Me., last Thursday evening, and it proved a most delightful gathering. Among those in the party were:

Mr. and Mrs. Hannigan of Saco, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Strout of Biddeford, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Libby of Biddeford, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Skillin of Falmouth, Miss Wiegman, Miss Hersey, Mr. Harrington, Miss Marsh, Miss Marion E. McGinnigle, Mr. and Mrs. Mahoney of Saco, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard, Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. Smith of Gorham, Mr. and Mrs. Perez B. Burr of Freeport, Mr. Goldthwaite of Freeport, Miss Blanche Newcomb, Mrs. Orland Smith, Miss Bertha F. Lougee, Urban Carter, Miss Elsie Jacobs, Miss Alice Hersey, Mrs. Cora N. Dennett, Mrs. Liberty B. Dennett, Mrs. McBride, Mrs. Meloon, Mr. and Mrs. Conant.

Following the dinner there were solos by Miss Marsh and readings by Mrs. Skillin, and then the party danced the Virginia Reel and other old-fashioned dances.

The ninth annual dinner of the Nassau County (N. Y.) Horticultural Society will be held at the Oriental Hotel, Glen Cove, on Monday evening, January 25, at 6 P. M. A jovial time is promised.

The Brooklyn Botanic Garden has published a lengthy list of seeds collected during the year 1914 and which are offered in exchange. Anyone interested should write to Curator of Plants, Brooklyn Botanic Garden, Brooklyn, N. Y. Applications for seeds should be made not later than March 1, 1915.

THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, 6 DUANE ST., NEW YORK CITYBRITISH HORTICULTURE.*Amongst the Chrysanthemums.

The National Chrysanthemum Society's winter programme has been considerably curtailed, owing to the war. Its activities, however, are not entirely suspended. On Dec. 9th there was a small show held in London, followed by a useful conference. The Floral Committee granted first class certificates to Richmond, a bright yellow Japanese variety, raised by E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Indiana, and exhibited by Thos. Stevenson, of Addlestone; and Chestnut Beauty, chestnut red, shown by Norman Davis, of Framfield. At the conference, M. E. Mills read a paper on "The culture of the single chrysanthemum." T. Stevenson critically dealt with "Some of the best single chrysanthemums today, and some of the worst." He favored those with florets like Mensa. He thought it better to have too many than too few florets in a bloom. P. Cragg, gave some hints to future raisers of single chrysanthemums. He suggested the importance of endeavoring to lengthen the flowering period, and scent was a development towards which they might aim. As regards the ripening of the seed, he had obtained the best results by cutting the flower, and keeping it in water in a sunny room, changing the water frequently, and cutting the stem at the same time.

National Rose Society.

At the annual meeting held in London, on Dec. 10th, it was reported that notwithstanding the war the society continues to make steady progress. During the past year 695 new members had joined. Allowing for the losses by death and resignation, the total number of members is now 6,257. Arrangements have been made for holding a Spring show at Horticultural Hall, Westminster, on April 16th. The Metropolitan exhibition will take place at the Royal Botanic Gardens, Regent's Park, on June 29th. The autumn show has been fixed to be held at Horticultural Hall, on Sept. 16th.

FROSTED PLANTS.What Not to Do and What to Do.

A bright red slip bearing the following instructions is placed inside every box of plants shipped by R. Vincent, Jr. & Sons Co., during the cold weather. We reproduce it as being of interest to many of our readers and worthy of imitation by plant shippers generally.

Very often during the winter months plants are received in a frosted condition, owing to a sudden or unforeseen drop in the temperature or from the exposure to extreme cold while in transit, on station platform or in delivery wagon, condition over which the shipper has no control for it makes no difference how well the boxes may be lined with paper naturally the frost will penetrate in any object if exposed long enough.

When a shipment of plants is received in even a slight frosted condition, they should not under any circumstance be handled or unpacked, if so then disastrous effects must be expected.

Whereas if properly treated they can be saved almost without an exception. If when received the plants are frosted even to the soil being frozen, the boxes should be opened and the paper loosened, so that the air can penetrate and then the boxes placed in a cool cellar where the temperature is only slightly above the freezing point and let remain there for at least 24 hours or longer if necessary until the frost is thoroughly drawn out, and then unpack and put in a slightly warmer temperature for a few hours, then very little damage to the stock if any will result from the frost.

POSSIBILITIES OF THE FENWAY.

B. Fenway, Boston, Mass., and Fenway, Boston, Mass.

The Back Bay Fens, for purposes of embellishment, possess, from environment, the grandest possibilities of any equal amount of acreage in our park system. The winding lagoons are picturesque and by a judicious decoration of their borders with plants that flourish near the water's edge, and water lilies floating on their surfaces, can be made the finest water gardens in this country. Take the tract that was given over for the display of plants by the Society of American Florists last summer and which attracted so many people deeply interested in horticulture as an example of what may be done for this section of our parks. Boston has never had a rose garden, a section devoted in its entirety to the display of the queen of flowers, where climbing, standard and other varieties planted in groups and all correctly labeled would make a picture not easy to forget and might be considered as one of the features for the "sunken" garden now under consideration. Its banks can be planted with rhododendrons, kalmia, andromedas and azaleas and again with lilacs, hawthorns.

double flowering crabapple, peach or cherry. With a background of trees, further enhanced by the stately buildings of striking architecture already constructed, its splendid avenues of approach combine to make it ideal for an additional horticultural asset to Boston parks. The Forsyth Dental College, the Art Museum, the Simmons College, the Gardner palace and many other splendid types of buildings surround the Fens and instead of a waste, this land should be embellished in accord with those buildings and made the finest exhibit to be found in any park system in the world.

SAN FRANCISCO NOTES.

A. Winters, a florist of Richmond, Cal., has opened a branch shop at Pinole.

H. Plath has a large crop of tulips coming on at his nurseries in the Ocean View district, and will begin cutting in a week or two.

The MacRorie-McLaren Company has a large house of Phalaenopsis coming on, and expects to make a large cutting for the Easter trade.

The H. N. Sanborn Company, of Oakland and Berkeley, is rather working out of the nursery business, and specializing more on seeds, aside from its extensive retail business in cut flowers. The seed department is having a good run on sweet peas and pansies.

The Francis Floral Company, Sutter and Powell streets, conducted by F. Schlotzhauer, had its basement inundated a few days ago, when a Japanese automobilist skidded and broke off a fire plug in front of the store, and narrowly escaped going through the window.

The California Nursery Company at Niles has preparations for the coming season well under way, with a large force of men at work on improvements. This company recently shipped five carloads of Japanese palms, from 15 to 20 years old, to Los Angeles, where they will be planted along the principal streets. A great deal of stock of various kinds, including palms, oranges and oleanders, are being sent to the Exposition.

Ten carloads of rhododendrons, clipped conifers and bulbs, the third large shipment received at the World's Fair for the Netherlands Horticultural Commission, arrived January 19. This shipment completes the most important landscape gardening exhibit ever made by Holland outside of her own borders.

In the cargo were 600 conifers of more than a dozen species, 2,000 rhododendrons in variety, just ready to burst into bloom, and many unusual sorts of magnolias, holly, aucubas and smaller shrubs and bulbs. The exhibit will be transplanted this week into two acres of garden space, bordering the Palace of Horticulture on the west and south, and reaching almost to the Baker street entrance. Many of the conifers and other evergreens—such as Buxus and Taxus baccata, six to eight feet tall, have been clipped and trained into weird shapes.

Sixty thousand tulips, hyacinths, narcissus, daffodils, etc., will be in bloom for the opening day, and a continuous succession of bulb and shrub bloom will be maintained throughout the Exposition period by means of successive planting. This will include 50,000 begonias. These gardens lie between those of Japan and of California, Massachusetts and other states. The entire Holland appropriation amounts to $400,000.

NEW CARNATIONS

This is MATCHLESS, the New White Carnation

There are two new Carnations of last year's introduction that have proved money making varieties and which, for quality and quantity of bloom will satisfy the demands of any reasonable carnation grower. We have planted these varieties in large quantities and believe Matchless and Champion to be worthy of all the praise given them. We can offer either rooted cuttings or pot plants of these two exceptionally fine new Carnations.

Obituary

Michael Sweeney.

Michael Sweeney, a veteran florist, of Providence, R. I., died on Sunday, January 17, at his home in Edgewood. He was in his 71st year.

Mr. Sweeney was born in Leitrim, Ireland, June 3, 1844. When he was a boy he came to this country and settled in Providence. In 1873 he established a greenhouse at Broad and Pine streets and his business, which has since grown extensively, has been located there ever since. He occupied the same business site for 42 years. In 1888, much against his inclination, he was nominated and elected to the city council from the sixth ward. He served three years and in 1891 at his own request he retired from active politics. He was a great home lover and spent most of his spare time there. Mr. Sweeney was highly respected in the trade for his sterling character and his unostentatious but free handed generosity. He served one term as president of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island.

R. W. Allen.

Richard W. Allen a leading florist of Hudson, N. Y., for many years, died on January 10, aged 67 years after one week's illness. Mr. Allen was a native of Cornwall, England being the son of John Allen, gardener on the estate of Lord Falmouth. He came to New York in 1872. He was a member of the Albany Florists' Club, also of the S. A. F. for a number of years.

The Hudson Republican in its obituary notice of Mr. Allen's death paid high tribute to his memory in the following words:

"Mr. Allen possessed a mind and heart that awakened the strongest feelings of friendship in those who knew him well. He was generous to a fault and his generosity took on that fullness that only a broadminded man could possess. It was not so much what he did or gave; it was the hearty sincerity that entered into his doing and giving that made his help so valuable to the recipient. He will be mourned as an affectionate friend, charming companion and model citizen."

Wm. H. Nye.

William Henry Nye, who was for many years gardener on the T. J. Hill estate died at the Rhode Island Hospital, Providence, on January 10, aged 82 years.

NEW YORK NOTES.

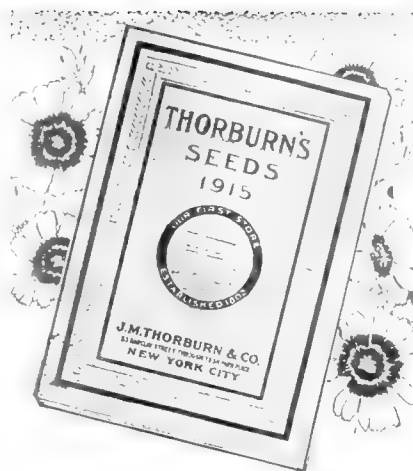

It is rumored that Roman J. Irwin, owing to increased business, will take larger quarters at 108 West 28th St.

President Harry A. Bunyard represented the New York Florists' Club at the Morristown, N. J. dinner held last Tuesday evening.

The Horticultural Society gave a small exhibition at the Museum of Natural History on Wednesday, January 20, from 1 to 5 P. M.

John Young is handling the entire output of cut Polypodium Mandaianum grown by W. A. Manda of South Orange, N. J., and reports that this splendid decorative plant is being taken up more freely by the prominent retailers who are now beginning to see what a wonderful thing it is for decorative purposes, its lasting qualities being so much in its favor. It is a question whether Mr. Manda will be long able to keep up the supply.

The Flower Show Committee will hold a meeting at the Grand Central Palace, Saturday next, the 23rd, at 2 P. M. Reports regarding this exhibition are more encouraging from day to day. The secretary reports additional orders for space in the trade section being received almost daily. The Horticultural Society, through Messrs. F. R. Newbold and T. A. Havemeyer, are working strenuously on their end of it and are to be congratulated on the good results they are obtaining and the interest they are arousing among the flower buying public. It is too bad that we have not more of these men who are interested in the advancement of floriculture. A. L. Miller and the Brooklyn committee are busily engaged raising cash for the purpose of advertising and exploiting "Brooklyn Day" which will be made one of the important days of the Flower Show. F. R. Pierson, chairman of the Flower Show Committee, is in New York almost daily in the interests of the coming exhibition and expects to do so until the close of the show. F. R. has a happy faculty of making the "fur fly" when he gets right down on the job.

GALLICOON, Sullivan County, NEW YORK

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

Charles Burpee has received his catalogue for 1915. His headquarters are in Lancaster, Pa., and he is temporarily located in the city. He has several new propositions under consideration but not offered as yet. Letters addressed to him in care of any of the commission houses will reach him.

Professor Stewardson Brown, of East Penn street, Germantown Academy of Natural Sciences, will leave the latter part of January on a botanical expedition to Porto Rico, with Professor Nathaniel L. Britton, director-in-chief of the New York Botanical Gardens. They will be gone two months.

To stimulate the interest of their poultry customers and to attract people to their store at a time of the year when the average person does not think of entering a seed store, the progressive house of Michell's, on January 12th, held their Sixth Annual Poultry Show at 518 Market street. There were over 1000 entries and nearly every specimen of fowl in this part of the country and across the water were shown. From the time the exhibition opened, January 12th, until the doors were closed on the 14th, the lower floor of the building, which is given over to the exhibit, was thronged with interested onlookers, nearly 10,000 people visiting the show in the three days. Twenty silver cups, blue, red, yellow and special white ribbons were awarded to the winners.

Mr. Burpee with his world wide acquaintance gets so many letters from every part of the universe—strictly personal—that they are bound to pile up on him. In our small way we go up against the same thing. By hook or by crook we get through our business correspondence; the rest can wait a little! Mr. Burpee's card is a clever idea. He calls in old Guttenberg, the printer; and his story is so well put it's worth repeating here:

Philadelphia, Jan. 15, 1915.
To Burpee, Correspondent, La Costa, Calif.
Believe me, I am not a "desk" and I am not a "book" correspondent to whom an apology is due. The fact is, I have seldom been so busy with personal work as this time, and I am sorry because of the change and changing conditions in Europe.

Under the circumstances quite a number of letters were laid aside for more careful consideration than could be given to them at the time received. Now it is impossible to answer all in detail as fully as intended, hence this explanation and apology which I trust you will kindly accept.

Any letters addressed to the firm during my absence will have the usual prompt attention.

With all good wishes for the New Year,
Sincerely yours,

W. A. BURPEE.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Henry Mette, Quedlinburg, Germany
— Trade Catalogue of Vegetable, Flower and Farm Seeds, 1914-15. The usual comprehensive and interesting wholesale list sent out by this well-known seed house.

C. Keur & Sons, Hillegom, Holland;
New York Branch, 8-10 Bridge St., New York City—We have received from this firm a handsome calendar, accompanied by a price list of gladiolus bulbs, over 100 of the main varieties.

James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y.—Garden and Floral Guide; also Fruit and Ornamental Tree Book of the Landscape and Nursery Department. These annual visitors serve to remind us that "The Flower City" is still on the map and the old and trustworthy Vick's seeds are again ready to do their duty in making the gardens blossom. A trio of fine asters in colors adorns the first cover page of the Garden Guide.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—Last week we made note of no less than three different Burpee catalogues. Now comes another—The Blue List, which differs from those of other colors in that it is devoted to "Wholesale Prices for Market Gardeners, Florists and Farmers' Clubs." It contains 150 pages of good stuff with nothing at all in it to make one "feel blue." The best proof of this statement is to send to Burpee for a copy and then look it through.

Leonard Seed Company, Chicago, Ill.
—Leonard's Seeds, 1915. This is a wholesale list, as this house does not solicit retail business. Leonard Seed Co. are also growers as well as dealers. They sell seed in bulk only and do not send out commission packages or box seeds. All of which should be a good passport to the consideration and the patronage of the seed trade. This catalogue contains 114 pages, devoted to field, garden, vegetable and flower seeds and an exceptionally attractive, illustrated trade publication.

The value of foreign shipments of horticultural goods received at the port of New York during the week ending January 9, 1915 was as follows: Clover seed, $73,395; Grass seed, $6,629; Sugar beet seed, $83,927; Trees and plants, $32,798.

Huntingburg, Ind.—Morgen & Seubold, florists, dissolved partnership Dec. 31st. Peter Morgen will continue the business.

Orlando, Fla.—Ed Berno, formerly of Mansfield, O., will commence a florist and nursery business here under the name of the Berno Floral Co.

New York—Dr. N. L. Britton, director of the New York Botanical Garden, at the annual meeting of the board of managers, made an appeal for increasing the endowment to one million dollars.

St. Joseph, Mo.—The hundreds of strawberry and other fruit growers west of St. Joseph in Kansas, are giving close attention to plans of A. W. Themanson to take up the production of essential oils for perfumes. The soil and climate of the district is very similar to the soil and climate of the great rose growing districts of Bulgaria, where most of the attar, or otto, of roses is produced. Mr. Themanson has laid out a plot of forty acres for flowers of various kinds and will erect a still to extract the oils. He is urging on his neighbors the production of flowers to keep the still running a large part of the summer. He has corresponded with a number of perfume manufacturers and says he can dispose of all the oil he can produce.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

CHICAGO.

The Winterson Seed Store has in its first car load of cannas.

Chas. Stewart has again gone into the retail business at 3323 North avenue, near his old location.

Poehlmann Bros. have already booked orders for more than a quarter of a million young plants of Mrs. Russell rose.

A. L. Vaughan thinks an unusually good late winter business is likely to follow the rather slow earlier season. A stenographer has been added to the office force here this week.

Wietor Bros. pronounce the Mrs. Russell rose a success with their house, and will give Hadley another trial before giving it up. He says so far it has a marked tendency to come "blind."

Frank Oechslin has added another car to his equipment. A light weight machine for quick delivery now supplements his two large trucks and carries the plants from his range on the west side.

The Chicago Retail Florists' Association are trying to put their work on a practical basis and stand for a real benefit to that branch of the trade. George Stollery is president; Geo. Walther, vice-president and Louis Witthold, treasurer.

Among the seasonable novelties are heart-shaped baskets for Valentine's Day use and green harps for window decorations for St. Patrick's Day at Poehlmann Bros.' supply department. Some new color effects are shown in baskets for spring flowers.

Zech & Mann have one shipper who bunches freesia so that it presents a solid even top, more attractive than the loose way. While the stock is large and fine the arrangement has something to do with the extra price it always brings. 80,000 freesia of the Purity variety is grown for this firm.

Sam Pearse, who is one of Chicago's largest growers of bulbs for cut flowers this year, is already sending large quantities of jonquils and tulips down town. He has had many years of experience in this line and with his new range of houses and auto truck for delivery is handling the business very successfully.

Among the plant offerings this week are seen pans of tulips of La Mattelas, a favorite light pink; the deep rose pink Proserpine, and yellow Montessor. With the colder and more seasonable weather these latest offerings are meeting with favor. The spring flowers also include potted hyacinths of La Junoese (white) and Gertrude (pink).

Paul Klingsporn finds that during the Christmas week his American Beauty roses averaged 80 cents each. They were all produced by local growers. Mr. Klingsporn has also found that his books show the average on Killarney roses for the four months September, October, November and December is but one-half cent each less than last year, while on Sunburst and Milady the difference is still less. Mr. Klingsporn is manager for the Chicago Flower Growers' Association.

The lag in flower sales this winter does not seem likely to lessen the usual amount of greenhouse building the coming season. The various firms handling greenhouse materials report a steady stream of inquiries which means that many are planning to build. Sharp Partridge & Co., who are in position to be good authority on the glass situation say that without question prices will remain firm, with a tendency to go higher on double-strength, greenhouse sizes. The factories are all running and supply at this time is normal.

The Foley Greenhouse Manufacturing Co. has landed another of the state contracts. This time it is for the Agricultural College at Columbus, O., and work has already begun on it. It is to be similar to the one Mr. Foley recently erected at Urbana, Ill., and is to be completed this spring. This firm reports a very satisfactory business and says the outlook for new business is good. The work of enlarging their factory has been going on for two months and is now completed, giving them one of the most convenient and best equipped plants in the state with three times its former floor space and greatly enlarged yards.

Carnations are receiving a large share of attention just now. The price this season is generally conceded to have been below normal up to the present time and that flower may be said to be on trial. Here is some of the evidence: Nick Wietor—"Too many carnations have been grown. No price for the balance of the season can make up for the loss so far." A. L. Vaughan—"There has been no extra quality of carnations cut this year. The low price is caused by a decreasing demand for that flower, the low price of roses being one of the causes." Paul Klingsporn—"The carnation is the flower of the medium class buyer and the stringency of the times has prevented sales. Too many carnations were grown this year." O. W. Freese, Poehlmann Bros. Co.—"The price of carnations has averaged as high accordingly as the price of roses. Two cents less per rose has been the average."

BOSTON.

Philip L. Carbone expects to leave Boston for San Francisco early in February and will combine business with pleasure.

Paul C. Regan, for twelve years with Sidney Hoffman, has joined the force of King, the Putnam Square florist, Cambridge.

The reconstruction of Harry Quint's new store in the Back Bay is being started this week. According to the architect's plans it will be elaborately appointed.

The meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston has been postponed to January 28. All members are urged to attend, as the installation of officers will be held, and it will also be ladies' night.

Attention is here called to the annual spring show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, March 25-28. Many attractive classes are arranged for, and all who contemplate entering the show are urged to notify the secretary as soon as possible.

N. Fishelson, the retail florist in the Back Bay, has dissolved his partnership with J. Kopelman & Co., of Providence, and will concentrate his efforts upon his retail business in Boston, which he has developed from extremely small beginnings but a few years ago.

The assignee of F. W. Fletcher of Auburndale, has finally after three and one-half years succeeded in selling three lots at Hough's Neck for $150, or $700 dollars less than was expected and has sent to the creditors a first and final dividend of 5 per cent. of their claims.

In one of the show windows of Penn the Florist this week is a Robert Burns exhibit in honor of the poet's birthday. It consisted of a Highland Lassie in costume, a bagpiper, and a picture of Burns' birthplace in a setting of erica. The exhibit was advertised in the newspapers, incidentally suggesting Penn's violets "for auld lang syne."

The construction by the city of Boston of a $500,000 public horticultural building, the best of its kind in the country, on land in the vicinity of the Art Museum, was urged by Mayor Curley in an address on "Municipal Administration," at the free lecture under the auspices of the Field and Forest Club, at the Public Library last Thursday evening.

The seed business in Boston has taken a sudden stimulus this week. In a recent visit to Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., the writer noted the fine catalog which is being widely distributed at this time. A whole building, consisting of five stories is taken up with the business of this progressive firm. Mr. Fiske was quite optimistic concerning the spring seed prospects.

On Saturday afternoon, January 16, Fred E. Palmer of Brookline, Mass., delivered a lecture on house plants before a large and appreciative audience in Horticultural Hall, Boston, this being the first in the series of winter lectures under the auspices of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. Mr. Palmer's talk was, of course, directly addressed to the amateur and was not only a well-phrased and eloquent production, but was plain, truthful and practical throughout, a character which does not always apply to the floricultural literature supplied through daily papers and magazines for public enlightenment. Every retail florist in the country would do well to get a copy of Mr. Palmer's paper from Secretary W. P. Rich and use it as the basis for circulars or verbal advice and replies to inquiries on plant problems by his customers. A wide dissemination of these facts of plant needs which are well-known to professional growers would add greatly to the interest and satisfaction of the amateur culturist and materially increase the sale of plants for window use.

Haverhill, Mass.—E. Yaffe, the florist, is recovering slowly from his recent illness.

Rochester, N. Y.—"The Flower City" wants the Carnation Society for 1916 and the irrepressible representatives from that hustling town will be out in force at Buffalo next week to secure the prize. The Rochester Florists' Association numbers 150 very enthusiastic members. They are talking about arranging for a possible joint exhibition the coming season with the Rochester Industrial Exposition.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Business is still far from normal and at this writing the wholesale markets are inactive with few buyers to cause any excitement. The retail stores seem to be busy, but the wholesalers are not satisfied with conditions. There is a large supply of plants and the demand for them is fairly active, thus cutting somewhat into the sale of cut flowers. Last week carnations were very plentiful, but within the last four or five days stock has shortened up considerably, not only in carnations but roses as well. There is a good supply of cattleyas. Gardenias are more abundant and in better demand. Shipping trade has fallen off a bit, so that stock is not cleaning up as well as it should under existing circumstances.

Last week's receipts BUFFALO were heavy, especially in carnations, some choice, some good, some ordinary and a lot of inferior quality, the last too poor to offer for sale at this season, and consequently the quantity and the quality brought down the price. Roses have shortened in supply but some very choice flowers are in market. Violets sold better, also lily of the valley and mignonette and lilies. Beauties of the long grades did not have any special demand though shorts sold readily. Golden Spur and Victoria narcissi are in and so far have taken well even at the 50c. mark. Tulips in pink, bronze, white and yellow, and freesias are coming in nicely. Sweet peas are fine though not too many.

A little more hopeful CHICAGO tone prevails in the market at present. The chief difference is in a slight increase in local demand and a shortening up of the supply, especially in roses. All kinds of roses have advanced in price and at no time during the season has the cut been less. American Beauties are now decidedly off crop and it will be some time before there is a large supply again. Bulbous stock is heavier each week, the season opening up with a very fair price on good tulips and jonquils. With the enormous quantity known to have been planted the price will probably drop soon. Paper whites are in evidence everywhere and very hard to move. Sweet peas are now coming with good stems, much of the stock being of the butterfly varieties. There are plenty of violets to meet the demand, growers in the East and local ones all cutting fair crops. Orchids still continue to come in at a rate that keeps prices low.

The market is again CINCINNATI in a firm condition. The supply, particularly in roses and carnations, has shortened greatly to a point where the daily demand for stock affects fair clearances in the market. Locally business is only fair but the call from out-of-town is very strong and helps give Third street its present substantial tone. All roses are cleaning up nicely except American Beauties and they have a fair request. The Killarneys are very fine. Carnations, too, are far from being plentiful. All receipts of any good quality at all found a good market for the few days immediately preceding this writing. Lilies enjoy a good call. The narcissus market is picking up. Callas are selling well. The same is true of lily of the valley. In this last-named flower some very fine stock may be had. Other offerings include violets, orchids, Roman hyacinths and freesia.

It is very pleasing to report a much more satisfactory market condition here. Prices have advanced materially all along the line and business has been more brisk. The rose supply has shortened up very considerably with the natural course of events that prices have advanced and the shortened supply of roses has made it possible to obtain fairly good prices for bulbous stock which is now arriving in large quantities. Carnations have also shortened up in supply and increased in price very much. Sweet peas a little more plentiful, but with the usual good prices being maintained. Asparagus from the south is selling very well. Lilies in good demand clearing out nicely at favorable figures. Callas, $12 per 100. Orchids also advanced in price though not to such a great extent as some of the other flowers. Violets remain about the same.

PHILADELPHIA slight improvement in business here last week. Not only was there a little more business but the crops let up a little so that there was a better tone all along the line although prices did not increase to any marked degree. The improvement was particularly noticeable in roses. These fell off crop rapidly with many of the growers. This was especially the case in the white varieties and in American Beauty. Beauties went off quite suddenly and advanced sharply in price while the quality of same went below par, especially in the shorter grades. The specials are good but scarce. Carnations are still in large supply although not so superabundant as they were a week ago. They seem to be over the hill now and the market can probably handle the income and get at least a fair return. Orchids and gardenias are still too plentiful for the demand. Lily of the valley also is a little sluggish. Violets are a pretty fair proposition, all things considered. Sweet peas are in great form at present, especially in the Spencers. These are magnificent long-stemmed stock and grand in form and finish. They are bringing good prices and we are glad to see it. They deserve it. Plenty of daffodils, freesias, Roman hyacinths, paper whites and other miscellaneous stock.

Aside from SAN FRANCISCO eral work business is rather quiet. Wholesale trade is fairly good, with most lines in ample, but not excessive supply and the daily offerings cleaning up at reasonably satisfactory prices. Shipping business from the local distributing houses is none too active, but a good deal of stock is being shipped from the nurseries by large growers. The heavy rains have made the violets rather poor for shipping, with supplies fluctuating greatly from day to day. Carnations are offered less freely, and are just now bringing as good prices as for Christmas week. Roses are doing well, as practically all cheap stuff is out of the market, only hothouse goods being available. The general quality is good and prices fair. There is a good cut of Beauties, but Killarneys, both pink and white, are probably taking the lead in popularity. Bulb stock, daffodils, freesias, etc., are becoming steadily more plentiful, and a few early tulips have been seen, with more coming in a week or two. Liliun formosum is made quite a feature in some shops. There are plenty of lilies of the valley. The cut of gardenias continues large, and the demand has hardly kept up to expectations. Orchids are offered freely. A good many potted azaleas are still shown, but other lines are less in evidence. This week has brought a good deal of pussy willow into the market.

The wholesale market ST. LOUIS is still in a bad way with plenty of good stock and exceedingly slow demand. The fine warm weather of late has caused quite a large daily crop of everything. The demand is nothing like that in former years at this time and prices are lower than ever. There is a splendid crop of roses coming in with all leading varieties represented. Carnations are more than enough in all varieties. Sweet peas and violets are becoming more plentiful. All bulb stock abundant with only fair demand, pipe.

Asparagus is away short of the demand.

Business this week WASHINGTON has shown some improvement. Flowers are not quite so plentiful and prices have advanced slightly. The only flowers reported as being in abundance are sweet peas and American Beauty roses. There are some very fine Spencer peas but these are being passed by in favor of the cheaper varieties. Single violets, as usual, are moving better than the double. Cornflowers and freesias were to be seen here for the first time last week and they are selling well. Mignonette is in much better demand than it has been and calendulas have increased in favor. Some extra fine lilac plants at $2 each were offered last week and the cut stock is also very good. There is quite a scarcity of yellow roses. Mrs. Aaron Ward being practically off crop. Lady Hillingdon, while quite plentiful, are not of the best quality, and Sunburst is coming in with crooked stems. The market is full of Cattleya Trianae at low prices. Lily of the valley has been moving very well. Heavy rains during the first part of the week followed by warm sunshine played havoc in many of the houses and to this is attributed the prevalent splitting of calyxes of the carnations.

Cincinnati - C. E. C. ... a $500 damage ... through the bursting of a water pipe.

WASHINGTON NOTES.
J. Norman Ager, a graduate of the Maryland Agricultural College, who has been employed as a rose grower by Gude Bros. Company, has gone west intending to locate in Southern California or some southwestern state. The best wishes of his fellow-employees at the Mt. Olivet greenhouses are extended to him.
George W. Hess is planning to greatly increase the usefulness of the Botanic Gardens and to make this place more easily accessible to the people of the city and hereafter the Gardens will be open to the public on Sundays from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M. Mr. Hess will provide a competent guide to take parties through the grounds and extends an invitation to all visiting florists in Washington to inspect them. In extending the Garden's facilities, Mr. Hess is having prepared an exhibit of plants and their products that are common in household use for the benefit of the school children while a smaller exhibit will be loaned to the schools upon request.

NEWS NOTES.
Cold Water, Mich. Weage & Tyler have purchased 100 acres of land on which they propose to grow peonies, phlox, iris, etc.
Geneva, N. Y. The firm of Troutman Bros., florists, has been dissolved. The business will hereafter be conducted by Arthur J. Troutman and Stanley E. Smith, under the name of Troutman & Smith.

Outdoor Rose Growing

FOR THE HOME GARDEN

by

GEORGE C. THOMAS, JR.

Elaborately Illustrated with 96 Perfect Reproductions in Full Color of All Varieties of Roses, and a Few Half-tone Plates. Octavo, Handsome Cloth Binding, in a Slip Case. $1.00 net. Postage Extra.

We have sold a number of copies of this sterling book. One purchaser writes as follows:

HORTICULTURE, Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir: Some time ago we ordered a copy of 'Thomas' Book on Roses. We promised to send you postage as soon as we learned the amount. The book was so good that we forgot to about postage until today. Please forgive our lapse of memory.

We loaned it to a friend and he likes it so well we're afraid that we will have to buy another.

Respectfully,

New York. A R

GYPSY AND BROWN TAIL MOTHS DECREASING.

A recent report from the number of both the gypsy and brown tail moths is declared to be decreasing. Entomology of the U. S. Department of Agriculture to have taken place in the period covered by the report which has recently been published of its work for the year ending June 30, 1914. This has been largely brought about by the wilt disease and the parasite and other natural enemies of these pests, which have been introduced to fight them. Several isolated colonies in Greenfield, Mass., appear to have been exterminated, and in the region around Lenox, Stockbridge and Great Barrington the moths have also been almost eliminated. This is also true of the isolated colony at Wallingford, Conn. At Stonington a few egg clusters were found, and the Connecticut authorities are in charge of work there.

In New York a colony at Geneva apparently has been exterminated, and a colony found on a private estate at Mount Kisco is now being stamped out with the co-operation of the New York authorities. The report calls attention, however, to the need for laws in other states similar in character to that of Massachusetts, which provides that each municipality must do its share toward controlling the moths.

Pulverized Sheep Manure From Big Feeding Barns No Adulteration—No Weed Seeds

THIS IS THE BRAND
GUARANTEED PURE

Sheep's Head Manure is the cleanest in America. Here are the big covered corrals of the railroads, where the sheep are unloaded and kept from 60 to 90 days to fatten for the Chicago market.

We Guarantee

our product to be absolutely clean — no pig manure or other adulteration — nothing but sheep manure — dried and pulverized for easy handling, and all the weed seeds killed.

Some of the largest growers in the East have used our product for years.

MASSACHUSETTS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE NOTES

The ten-week's course offered each year at the college opened on Jan. 4. In the floricultural course the work will consist of greenhouse soils and their preparation, fertilizers and their use, methods of potting, watering, heating and ventilation, outdoor planting and such other branches as are necessary to the man in charge of a greenhouse or greenhouse range. In addition to the major and minor crops of the florist, the bedding plants, annuals and perennials used as cut flowers by the florist will be considered.

Many new books have been secured along floricultural lines and placed for use in the French Hall library and an index file has been started dealing with specialized floricultural subjects.

W. H. HATFIELD.

ABOUT SHEEP MANURE.

Sheep manure is an unexcelled, useful and effective plant food and stimulant but its great potential strength should never be underestimated and unless used with discretion its effect is not always satisfactory. Growers should differentiate between crude sheep manure and the processed and pulverized product such as is being offered by some of HORTICULTURE'S advertisers. In this form many of the objections to the use of sheep manure have been eliminated and it is put into a form for very convenient handling and for uniform distribution where wanted. Purity and freedom from chopped straw, sand and weed seeds are all essential for good results and when these qualities are guaranteed, then sheep manure is a sterling standby for the grower, under glass or outside.

QUASSIN A CHEAP INSECTICIDE.

Attention is called in a recent bulletin (No.165) of the United States Department of Agriculture to the possibilities of quassin as a contact insecticide. There is reason to believe, says this bulletin, that quassin can be cheaply prepared and possibly sold at a lower price than some of the materials now used in commercial insecticides. In investigating the efficiency of the quassin spray, the author of the bulletin compared it with a standard insecticide known as nicotine sulphate, a tobacco product. The quassin he believes to be equally effective.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

The money you invest in greenhouse painting is well spent every time.

Doubling the diameter increases the capacity of a pipe four times.

Dry heat and steam are satisfactory agents for disinfecting soil, and not only clear it of eel worms, but also of parasitic fungi causing drop and rot, as well as other pests.

Grafted roses can stand more nitrogen than roses on their own roots.

Easter Sunday falls on April 4, this year.

The sweet pea is a native of Sicily. All shrubs destined to forcing want a period of rest, for which exposure to freezing is very essential. Instead of freezing, aetherizing and hot water treatment is used with very satisfactory results.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

KNEW what a
METROPOLITAN PATENT-ED is, you would use no other. It is made of cast iron and will not rust. That part of your greenhouse which in other constructions is the weakest becomes the strongest. Not this alone, it is ice-clearing and carries all the water of condensation from the inside, and it is so constructed that almost the entire end of the bar is exposed to the air, thereby preventing decay. Only one screw, about two inches from the end, is all that is necessary to secure the bars.
For side stationary glass, wood headers are absolutely unnecessary, thereby causing no shade. Zinc glass stops are not necessary—the save is made with a lug to prevent the glass from slipping. Let your next house be built with a Metropolitan Patented Iron Wall
Construction. You will never regret it.

For Over Two Years Our Rafters Have Been Spaced 12 Feet 1 $\frac{3}{4}$ Inches Apart. We Were the First to Do It. It's One of the Features of Our Reconstructed Construction

FOR over two years we have used the wider spacing of rafters in the first house, we had been experimenting.

Not only had our engineers figured down to the exactness of the strength of, and strain on, every member, but we had made trial erections at our factory and subjected the structures to actual tests, far in excess of anything that a completed greenhouse would be subjected to.

In our first house, we strengthened the long stretch of purlins by a short truss, having a strut at the rafter.

But we now use a special purlin brace fitting, which is just as good, and looks better.

With this wide spacing, not only do you have a third less rafters, but the great advantage of a third less columns as well.

How can I benefit of that?

With a house 72 feet wide, for example, and 500 feet long, you have only two columns across the house and 39 lengthwise, or 78 in. all, as against 118 with the old 8 foot 4 inch spacing.

That's that!

If you want the columns placed in unusual locations, it is impossible with the usual flat rafter, we can substitute our lattice rafter, and put the columns where you want them.

With this Reconstructed Construction of ours, we can build a house to exactly suit your needs; instead of something that arbitrarily meets the old construction's limitations.

So practical in every way, has this wider rafter spacing of ours proven, after its three years' test, that unless we are greatly mistaken, you will see other builders following in our foot steps. It's going to be the construction of the future, there's not a bit of doubt of it. Send for our special circular about it.

Side view in one of our Reconstructed Constructions erected for L. B. Coddington, Murray Hill, N. J. Being only 78 feet wide the trussing is exceedingly simple and surprisingly light in effect.

Here are a few of our customers who were the first to see the advantages of Hitchings Reconstructed Construction.

Burpee's Seeds Grow

What Burpee-Quality Seeds Mean to the Market Grower.

At the Seventh Annual Convention of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America, held in Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, October, 1914, we had the pleasure of talking with and listening to the many earnest men who are doing so much for the advancement of the market growing industry. We were impressed with the importance and scope of the work of this splendid organization, and realized even more than before the market grower's absolute dependence for success upon selected "Seeds of Quality." The position occupied by the seedsman who undertakes to supply seed to the market grower is one of great trust. Surely his service is one based on confidence.

CONFIDENCE makes possible the commerce of the world. It is the greatest factor that enters into a purchase of seeds, because you are not buying a finished product, but only the means by which your garden will be either a pronounced success or a partial failure. Seeds—good or bad—may look the same, but how different their resulting crops! You cannot afford to risk a season's work with seeds of unknown quality.

When you buy BURPEE'S SEEDS the element of doubt is removed so far as is possible by human care. The confidence of many thousands of pleased and permanent customers is maintained by the Burpee Idea of Quality First,—“to give rather than to get all that is possible.” This confidence on the part of our customers, combined with the efficient Burpee-Service, has built the world's greatest mail-order seed business.

A careful examination of this “Blue List” should convince you of the excellence of our pedigree strains for market growers, and then a trial order—if you are not already a Burpee customer—will prove that your confidence has not been misplaced.

Burpee's Annual for 1915, our complete retail catalog of 182 pages, has already been mailed. If you have failed to receive it, kindly write at once and a duplicate copy will be forwarded.

For the utmost development of good seed service, we are,

Sincerely yours,

Good, Strong Well-Established Plants in 2½-Inch Pots of the Exceedingly

VALUABLE NEW ROSES

Opheelia, Francis Scott Key and Prince E. C. d'Arenberg

Growers will find all of these valuable additions to the list of standard varieties. They have been tested thoroughly, and have been found to have exceptional value.

OPHELIA. No fancy rose ever introduced possesses so many excellent qualities. It is a splendid grower, a very free bloomer, and has fine stems. It sells on sight. The demand undoubtedly will exceed the supply. Anticipating the large demand, we have propagated it extensively. Strong plants on own roots, 2½-in. pots, now ready—$15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY. This variety, raised by Mr. John Cook, is very distinct, being entirely different from any of the indoor roses grown today. Flowers are rosy red, and are unusually large and double, resembling very much a very full, double hardy garden rose. Coupled with its large size and double form, it is an exceedingly free bloomer. It promises to be exceedingly valuable, especially for spring, summer and fall flowering, when other less double roses are difficult to handle. Its keeping qualities are remarkable. Strong plants on own roots, 2½-in. pots, now ready—$15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

PRINCE E. C. D'ARENBERG. This variety might well have been termed Red Killarney, as it possesses so many of the good qualities of the Killarneys. In color, the flowers are similar to Richmond, but they are much more double, and it should prove a very much more profitable rose. Flowers have fine straight stems on all the grades—from the shortest to the longest. It has fine foliage, comes away quickly, and is even a freer bloomer than the Killarneys. We believe it is the best all-round red rose that we have today. Strong plants on own roots, 2½-in. pots, now ready—$12.00 per 100, $90.00 per 1000.

We will be glad to quote on application, prices on all the newer and standard varieties—strong grafted plants ready in March.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Care of Carnations

At this time of the year do not do too much stirring of the surface of the soil or of the old mulch either, as you will find them full of feeding roots and they don't want to be disturbed. Lots of young weeds will be starting up and, as soon as they are large enough to pull, they should be pulled. Most weeds are gross feeders and will rapidly impoverish the soil. Instead of leaning toward the dry side, step over and lean toward the moist side from now on, except of course, in case of a spell of cloudy weather. There are many reasons for this. In the first place, the plants are thoroughly established; then again, the soil is filled with plenty of working roots and will dry out quicker, thus eliminating the danger of souring. Look over the south edges of the beds carefully on the bright mornings and water wherever the soil is not quite moist. In fact, the whole beds will enjoy more liberal watering than during the past three months.

Early Asters

To have asters for Memorial Day they should be sown from the first to 15th of February. Sow in any light mixture and keep moist until they germinate. When they are up they will want a place well up to the glass, where they will grow into nice sturdy stock. When large enough they should be pricked out into other flats and grown on. They will need a temperature of from 50 to 55 degrees at night. When they are large enough they can be planted out in a bench and kept at the same temperature mentioned above. Give plenty of fresh air and on bright days a good syringing to keep down red spider. The best to grow is Queen of the Market.

Euphorbia Jacquinæflora

After the flowers are cut keep the plants somewhat drier, but do not dry off as severely as you would poinsettias. To secure really fine sprays for cutting, plants set out in a box or bench, where they can be rested, are the best, or old plants after blooming can be packed close together in boxes and kept on the dry side until the end of April. Do not place them in too cool a house; they should have a temperature of not less than about 55 degrees at night. By the end of April they can be potted and placed in a temperature of about 60 to 62 degrees and they will soon make some nice cuttings. Soft-wood cuttings rubbed off with a heel will root readily in May and June, treated similarly to poinsettias. Pot off singly when rooted and if salable plants are desired, put five to seven in a 6-inch pot or pan.

Next Week. Care of Sudax Beds; Cyclamen; Chrysanthemums; Jerusalem Cherries; Orchids; Watering.

They will want one or more—possibly three—pinchings. If wanted for cutting, of course no pinching is needed.

Geraniums

While increasing the stock of zonal bedding varieties, do not overlook the popular scented-leaved kinds. Every purchaser each year wants a few of these, and the old rose, apple, lemon, nutmeg and similar sorts are useful. Propagation of geraniums should now be pushed right ahead. The sand in the cutting bench is steadily warm at this season and the percentage of loss from damping off should be small. If the cuttings are inserted singly in 1½ and 2-inch pots, using sandy loam, and stood on a bench in the full sun where they can also have some bottom heat, they should be making roots within a month. It will be necessary now to keep a sharp watch on the plants in pots. It is easy to spoil them by neglecting needed potting. I do not believe in large shifts. A plant put into a 4-inch pot from a 2-inch or 2½-inch size may do well if carefully watered, but it would be more certain to thrive if first potted into 3-inch size. A common error is to give generous shifts of too large a nature. Give plenty of ventilation on all good days.

Sow Candytuft and Stocks

Both these plants are becoming great favorites for spring use as cut flowers and also as pot plants around Memorial Day. It is a good plan to make several sowings from now up to the middle of March. Sow in flats in a compost of leaf mold, soil and sand in equal parts. Place them where they can be shaded and kept moist, in a temperature of 60 degrees until they start to come up. When they are well up they should be placed in a house where the temperature does not stand over 55 degrees at night. Just as soon as they are big enough to handle they should be pricked out into other flats and out of these they can be potted into 2½-inch. Keep shifting until you have them in 4 or 5-inch pots, using a rich compost for the last shifts.

Pansies, Myosotis, Pinks, Etc.

Frames containing all this kind of stock, should be held in a frozen state for a while yet. If uncovered and started too early they will make some growth which is liable to perish by the next onrush of severe frost. It should be made a point in frame culture of all this kind of stock, not to expose hard frozen stock to prematurely warm weather too quick. Pansies for late sales sown now will make nice sturdy plants by the end of April.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur C. Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Care of Outside Roses

Every now and then during the winter months it is advisable to look over the beds of all outside roses and see that mice are not at work eating off the roots of the plants, and girdling them around the bottom. This is very unlikely to happen where the plants are mulched with well decayed manure. Should any mice be in evidence there are one or two ways to try and poison them. We find that there will be little damage done in this respect when there is only little snow. It is only when snow lies deep that these little rascals live on the bark of the various trees and shrubs.

Rooting Ramblers

If you are short of certain varieties time can be gained by taking a lot of cuttings now, cutting them carefully into pieces about 5 inches long, being careful to use a good sharp knife. If pruning shears were used, these would not cut smooth enough, and a good many cuttings would be ruined as a result. After these are made, put into flats filled with a mixture of half loam and half sand. With a little attention regarding watering, these cuttings will root easily, and then they will grow to a good size before next fall. If cuttings are not put in until spring, they will not grow into good size plants the first year, and where a little space in the greenhouse can be spared, this is one way to make the most of it.

Mulching

With no promise of clear weather for some time to come, we would not recommend mulching the plants very heavily. However they should not be allowed to suffer for want of a coarse protective mulch all along the benches. We generally apply this wherever it is needed, not mulching the whole house, but merely all the bare places. We find that an occasional dusting of bonemeal, and liquid manure as the plants need it will take care of the plants much better, and the houses are much easier to handle than when a heavy mulch is applied. Keep enough rough material on the surface of the benches so that all the water will stay "put" when it is applied.

Soot

A little of this applied every now and then will go a great ways in giving an additional color to the roses, and should be applied about the time the buds are beginning to show color, and then again when the plants are beginning to break forth. Do not apply too much of it at once, for not only would it be wasted, but harm to the plants may result. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the benches. If lime had been used only a short time before better delay the application of soot until the lime is fairly well gone. If lime and soot should come together while the lime is still active, the lime will free a large amount of the ammonia in the soot, and this is likely to damage the foliage, if not the blooms on the plants. If liquid manure is used the soot can be added to this, but as we generally have some houses that will take liquid but will not take soot, we prefer to apply it dry to the benches and then water it in.

Lime

Houses that have become quite soft because of the warm dull weather we have had in the vicinity of New York the last two or three weeks, will be helped if they get a light dusting of fresh air slacked lime. A little experience with this will soon enable the grower to tell just when to apply it. Do not use ground lime stone. This may be all right for outside or for sod-heaps when muck is used, but for general greenhouse and garden use, it is far too slow in action. In the rose house, more than anywhere, we need prompt action, and good fresh home slacked lime will be the best to use. We buy it locally by the barrel, and slack it by sprinkling a little water into it. After it cools it is ready to use. In sprinkling be very careful not to use too much water or the lime will be damp when you come to use it, and although this may be better for handling it when applying it to the benches, it will prove useless for dusting and blowing under the plants after watering or syringing. Do not get too much of it slacked at one time, for if the lime lays down in the cellar unused, it will get damp and lose some of its strength. It may also form into lumps, and it would then be quite useless.

Disbudding

There will be quite a crop coming on now in a great many houses, and this operation should not be neglected in the least, or the stock will be just a little bit off quality. Try and get all the energy of the plants into the flowers, and not waste any on useless buds. This should be done about twice a week. Go over the plants carefully, as doing these things by halves does not pay. While disbudding, keep an eye open for spider, and also for dry spots in benches, and for plants that may be all cut off. The latter should receive a handful of lime, and then look out for away when wintering, as these plants need it very bad.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY

Annual Meeting and Exhibition Held in Buffalo, January 27th and 28th—St. Louis Selected as Next Meeting Place—Officers Elected Unanimously.

The meeting and exhibition of the American Carnation Society at Buffalo was a pronounced success in every respect. The weather was propitious and all exhibits arrived on time and in excellent condition.

The exhibition was certainly the best in the history of the society as to quantity and quality. The attendance was very representative from all sections.

Opening Session.

The opening session on Wednesday evening at 8 P. M. in the Iroquois Hotel was well attended. After a few preliminary words of welcome, President Goddard read his annual address.

PRESIDENT GODDARD'S ADDRESS.

Gentlemen, Fellow Members: As the twenty-fourth President of the American Carnation Society it gives me pleasure to welcome you at this convention in the City of Buffalo.

Official Efficiency.

To Vice-President Anderson and the local Florists' Club are due the thanks of the Society for their untiring efforts in working to make our convention the success I am sure it will prove to be. To Secretary Baur are also due the same appreciation and confidence of the Society. No member except he be an officer can form any idea of the amount of work the secretary has to perform. The Carnation Register that Mr. Baur and Mr. Dörner are compiling will be of inestimable value to the society in years to come and I hope that some action will be taken at their completion looking toward the preservation of these records, to protect them from fire or other such destructive causes.

Silver Anniversary.

Next year our Society enters upon its quarter century of existence, a period showing achievements performed never dreamed of by its founders, and I would suggest that suitable recognition be taken of this event; something added to the premium list that would make it noteworthy could well be accomplished.

Inadequate Membership.

Previous presidents have called attention to the small membership in our society as compared to the hosts engaged in growing carnations, but no specific way has ever been devised or recommended whereby we have been enabled to increase our membership to any extent. Thousands are engaged in growing carnations commercially, either as a side line or specialty, and I am sure that we can get our due proportion if we have some influential members to personally present to these growers the benefits they and we jointly shall derive by their joining with the Carnation Society. Why not appoint one member in each state or section of the country, whose duty it shall be to induce all who are eligible, to become members? Let us all endeavor to help increase the membership to at least 500 on our Silver Anniversary.

SAMUEL A. GODDARD
President American Carnation Society

Guaranteed Stock.

The American Carnation Society is recognized as the best managed special floricultural society in this country; its influence is far reaching and I am of the opinion that some pressure should be brought to bear on disseminators of carnations whereby they will be induced to use greater care in selection of stock. I know they are obliged to handle thousands of cuttings when sending out a novelty as the demand for a winner is tremendous. Nowadays, on nearly every new variety we invest in, we get 25 per cent. of unhealthy stock which either throw semi-double, curly, or off-colored flowers. If the introducers cannot meet the demand at present prices, why not set a price whereby they can meet them and give us guaranteed stock? I believe we should demand guaranteed stock in carnations as we do on insecticides or fertilizers.

The Popularity of the Carnation.

The carnation has been under a very severe test this season, much more so than during any previous year. Some growers claim that it is losing its popularity with the flower-buying public. I cannot agree with this view. The carnation is as popular as ever if not more so. It is still "Everybody's Flower," and if it is put on the market or into the buyer's home as fresh as possible it will not be replaced by any other flower. It often happens that blooms are old when they are cut, and are ready for the ash barrel instead of the drawing room. It is in our own province to make or destroy the popularity of the carnation.

Honorary Membership.

Some few years ago the Society had an honorary membership list. For some reason or other this has been dropped and I would recommend that the names originally on the list be again added, or if this cannot be done under our present rules, that the by-laws be amended, incorporating a plan for honorary memberships.

Assistant Judges.

Another recommendation I would like to make is that assistant judges be appointed to serve with our regular judges. Oftentimes some regular judge is absent and an outsider has to be called in to take his place. If assistants were in attendance they could take the place of absent members or, in case of a dead-lock, as often happens, they could be relied upon to give sound judgment based upon practical knowledge gained while serving with experts. We all can judge by comparison, but it takes the expert to score on points, the new varieties that are entered for the American Carnation Society and other medals.

Affiliation.

You will be called upon at this meeting to consider the question of affiliation with the Society of American Florists, to accept or reject membership on the board of directors of that Society, and I earnestly hope that every member who has views on this vital subject will express them at this time.

In closing I wish to express my thanks to the trade press for the many courtesies extended to the officers of the Society during the past year. To the members of the Society who have shown such enthusiasm in our exhibition by setting up such a magnificent display of carnations, I extend my sincere thanks. Our Society cannot but prosper while the members continue to back up its officers the way they have done here at Buffalo.

Next came the reports of the secretary and treasurer.

SECRETARY BAUR'S REPORT.

We are pleased to report a substantial increase in the membership this year, there being now 318 annual members and 12 life members enrolled and in good standing. During the past year there have been added 38 new members in addition to 13 delinquents who have been reinstated under the plan adopted in 1912. After deducting those who are now delinquent for the year 1913, we have a net increase of 33 over last year.

We have collected money as follows:

Dues	$671.00
Advertising	145.44
Dorner Memorial Fund	5.00
Miscellaneous	44.23
Total	$865.67

All of which has been turned over to the treasurer and his receipt taken therefor, except $121.68, which came in while the audit was being taken. The $5.00 collected for the Dorner Memorial Fund, was transferred to the general fund, to replace a part of the amount taken out of that fund, to make up the even thousand needed to draw $40.00 interest per annum.

The books of the secretary and treasurer were audited by a professional accountant, as has been customary. The auditors' report will follow the reading of the treasurer's report and we are pleased to note that he found the books in first class order and the society's funds sound and in very good shape. All bills are being paid promptly and no accounts have been lost, except from delinquent members.

A. F. J. BAUR,

Secretary American Carnation Society

The annual report was issued and distributed on schedule time, and the same is true of the program and the schedule of premiums for this meeting. We secured 22 pages of advertising for this schedule, which we consider very good, considering that this advertising had to be solicited just when the worst of the present business depression was on.

Twelve seedling varieties and three sports have been registered since the last annual report was issued. Besides these, the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society of England reports sixteen registrations. A system of exchanging registrations at frequent intervals has been adopted by the secretaries of the two societies, with a view to prevent duplication of names, but there has as yet been no way found to prevent sports which are identical from being given different names in this country and Europe. In time, when the new varieties will be imported as well as exported, this problem will present itself for solution. At this time, what confusion there is, is all on the other side, as few European varieties have thus far found their way over here. Suggestions for handling this situation will be in order.

S. A. ANDERSON,

We are still working on the carnation register. We are pleased to report that while our present plan for gathering data entails considerable labor, it is bringing results. It will be only a question of time and the register will be as complete as it can be made at this time, and all the data will be authentic. We wish here to thank the trade press for assistance in this work, especially in locating parties who have moved away from the addresses from which the registrations were made.

The arrangements for this meeting were planned along the same lines as were followed last year at Cleveland, and with the same degree of success. The local committee took hold with a will and has done its part splendidly. To our worthy vice-president, Mr. Anderson, is due especial credit. To the growers who supplied the blooms used in the table displays, is due the society's thanks. The splendid success achieved, so far as we have gone with this department, should stimulate expansion and if the exhibits could be diversified in a practical manner, it would be well to do so. We would like our retail members to offer suggestions along this line.

The Board of Directors held its usual meeting immediately after the last convention; also the regular mid-summer meeting at the S. A. F. & O. H. meeting place, which took place at Boston, Mass., on August 22nd.

At the Boston meeting, the secretary was instructed to purchase whatever blooms might be needed for the table displays, in addition to those secured from the disseminators of new varieties. Blooms of three varieties were purchased, with the idea of having the retail displays cover about the same range of colors as is found in our Section A.

As per arrangements made with the New York Florists' Club, we took charge of the entries and the staging of the carnation section of the International Flower Show, held in New York, March 21-28, 1914. A splendid exhibit of carnation blooms was staged Invitations for next year were presented from the National Flower Show Committee, plotting a show for carnation premiums and from St. Louis by J. F. Ammann and from Indianapolis.

Nomination of Officers.

Joseph Hill of Richmond, Ind., was nominated for president, J. F. Ammann for vice president, A. F. J. Baer for secretary and E. E. Dörner for treasurer, all unanimously; C. S. Strout and Eugene Dailledouze for directors and R. Witterstaetter and W. J. Palmer for judges.

In the discussion as to the relative merits of cuttings taken from various parts of the flower stem, Messrs. Fisher, Dörner, Dailledouze, Johnson, W. R. Pierston, Hill, Herr and others participated.

Judges Report.

The judges made their report on the awards as follows:

The Hitchings cup was given to Cottage Gardens Company, with Matchless.

Section E, Class H, Certificates of merit to Ed. Winkler, Wakefield, Mass., for Morning Glow, and to Littlefield & Wyman, North Abington, Mass., for Miss Theo and for a seedling.

From the foregoing it will be seen that the New England carnation growers cleaned up the great majority of the premiums, and the varieties winning high honors were very largely those of New England origin.

The allied interests had some very attractive displays, among which were Buddleia asiatica from S. J. Goddard, ferns, orchids, etc. from W. A. Mandala, begonias and cyclamen from J. A. Peterson, sweet peas from A. J. Staehlin, Detroit and Jerry Brookings of Orchard Park, N. Y., new roses Opheila and Hoosier Beauty from E. G. Hill, Rose Opheila, d'Arenberg, Killarney Brilliant and Francis Scott Key from F. R. Pierson.

The retail dealers of Buffalo displayed nine decorated tables, showing exquisite taste in carnation arrangement. For the general good of the carnation interests, no names were given of prizes awarded. The vases of carnations generally were enclosed in Ever Ready Flower Pot Covers with good effects. Fred Lautenschlager was present with photographs and arguments in behalf of Kroeschell boilers.

THURSDAY MORNING'S SESSION.

At the Thursday morning session, the committee on recommendations on president's address reported, and action resulted in a vote to signalize the twenty-fifth anniversary of the society by special inducements to the retail trade to boost the interests of the carnation. Disseminators of new varieties were asked to use utmost care in the selection of cuttings.

St. Louis Next Meeting Place

A lively discussion took place regarding the next meeting place, resulting in the selection of St. Louis for the regular meeting in January and a vote of enthusiastic support for the National Flower Show in Philadelphia in March in addition. The recommendation of exchange registration with the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society of England was approved.

Election of Officers.

The nominees for various offices were elected unanimously. C. S. Strout was elected director, Mr. Dailledouze having declined, and all the other officers as recorded nominated were elected. The affiliation proposition with the S. A. F. was unanimously approved.

During the hours allotted to public admission, the exhibition halls were crowded to the limit. Thursday afternoon was devoted to a visit to W. J. Palmer's place at Lancaster, and Thursday evening was given over to the banquet, of which we shall publish a full report next week.

MODERN CARNATION PRACTICE.

Editor, HORTICULTURE:

Will you kindly answer through HORTICULTURE at your earliest convenience the following questions on carnation culture?

Is hard wood ashes the best thing to use for producing long, stiff stems, and what effect, if any, does it have on the flowers?

Wood ashes are not the best material for producing long, stiff stems. It has a tendency to help stiffen stems but not to lengthen them. I find wood ashes will hurt the color on colored varieties of carnation if not used with care.

I have one bed 85 ft. long and 5 ft. wide; what would be a fair dressing of the ashes, about the rows, across the bed this width?

One 3-inch pot should be sufficient, if spread evenly over the surface not oftener than every eight weeks.

What is the best preparation for improving size of blooms?

Half-rotted cow or pulverized sheep manure.

My plants have plenty of foliage, but few flower stems yet, so far, developing; how can I improve this condition?

What would be a fair weekly cut per 100 plants, at this time, from stock benched in October of September?

My plants were benched first two weeks in September, compost 1:3 rotten manure and 2:3 soil. My houses are lofty and the light is good. I give air on bright days at 60 degrees, but in cloudy, dull weather I let the houses go to 65 to 70 degrees. I spray each week with Fungine to protect with Aphid for aphids, spider, etc. About twice a month I dust plants freely with lime, at the same time giving 3-inch pot of ashes between 5 ft. rows, the presumption being that the ashes are mixed into the soil when I syringe off the lime next day.

Up to this date I have given a little sheep manure once, and a light dressing of bone meal twice, by way of feeding. My plants seem to grow well enough, but so far are not giving much of a crop; and while the flowers I get of Northport, White Wonder and Enchantress are of satisfactory size, the stems are not what I would like to own. Please tell me where I am at fault.

GROWER.

New York.

Plant in July instead of September. This will give better results than any other form of treatment. From September planted stock the cut naturally will be very light in January.

The proportion of manure you have used should be sufficient on your late planted stock without mulching until February. The temperature you must reverse and try 50 to 52 at night, 55 to 58 on cloudy, 65 to 68 on clear days. Regulate by the sun. Try to imitate nature by getting your night temperature as the sun goes down and in the morning the same. Through the winter months get it rising slowly as it grows light.

Discontinue using spraying mixtures for rust. You are spreading instead of preventing. Keep the foliage as free from moisture as possible. This you will find is the only preventive for rust. Only syringe when necessary, sufficient to keep spider and thrips in check. Do this early on bright days with plenty of ventilation on the roof, so as to help dry the foliage as soon as possible.

Don't dust your plants with lime after the middle of October. Don't use wood ashes more than three times during the winter. Discontinue using bone meal entirely. I don't believe carnations need it; it will make them split during dark weather.

S. J. GODDARD.

Framingham, Mass.

The monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held Wednesday evening, Jan. 20th. A large attendance of the old members was on hand to welcome the new president, Wm. Jamison, who presided. As the monthly prize was to be awarded for the best flowering plant a good many well grown plants were exhibited, A. Weeks capturing first prize with a fine specimen Chorizema coradatum splendens. Some very good primulas and cyclamens was shown by J. Elliott, T. Morris, G. McIntosh and W. Jamison. H. Nichols was awarded certificate of merit for seedling dracaena "Glenview," a cross between amabilis and terminalis. A very lively discussion followed the examination of exhibits by J. Bradley, J. Mooney, T. Morris, Wm. Scott and other members of the society.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF NEW YORK.

The January Exhibition of the Society was held on Wednesday, the 20th, at the American Museum of Natural History. The larger attendance of gardeners was very gratifying, this perhaps being due to holding the exhibition on Wednesday, instead of Saturday. There was a good display of flowers, especially of orchids. Two of the most attractive exhibits were made by Mrs. F. A. Constable, James Stuart, gard. One of these was a vase of cut blooms of Buddleia asiatica, tastefully arranged, and making a striking display; the other, near it, a vase of Plumbago coccinea. The pure white flowers of the Buddleia made a striking contrast with the bright red blooms of the Plumbago. The displays of cut orchid blooms by Lager & Hurrell and Mr. Clement Moore were exceptionally fine.

The next exhibition will be held at the same place on Wednesday, February 17th. Prizes are offered for cut orchid blooms, roses, sweet peas, schizanthus, antirrhinum, freesias and narcissus. Prizes may also be awarded for other interesting and worthy exhibits not provided for in the schedule. Schedules will be sent on application to the secretary, George V. Nash, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, N. Y. City.

A meeting of the Society was held at 3.45, followed by a lecture at 4 by William N. Craig, on "A Year's Vegetable Supply from the Home Garden." This was listened to by over a hundred people, and proved one of the most successful lectures ever given by the Society.

Following is a list of the awards made at the exhibition of January 20:

A vase of 100 fine carnation blooms gave the first prize to Scott Bros.

A new carnation, "Hyde Park," exhibited by Joseph Sakowich, was awarded a bronze medal.

In the class for 12 white carnations the first prize went to Mr. Geo. D. Barron, Jas. Linane, gard.; the second to Mr. P. G. Reid, A. W. Golding, supt. A fine vase of 12 Enchantress shade secured the first prize for Mr. Adolph Lewisohn, John Canling, supt.; the second going to Mr. D. G. Reid. In the class for Winsor shade, a vase of 12 exhibited by Mr. John I. Downey, Thos. Ryan, supt., won second, the first not being awarded. D. G. Reid also won first for a vase of 12 Mrs. C. W. Ward shade. For 12 dark pink carnations Mr. Lewisohn was awarded first; Mr. Reid, second. Vase of 12 scarlet brought the first to Mr. Lewisohn; the second to Mr. Reid. Mr. Reid also won first for a vase of 12 crimson. Vase of 12 blooms variegated, won first for Mr. Lewisohn. Vase of 50 blooms, one or more varieties, arranged for effect, D. G. Reid, first; Frederick Sturges, Thos. Bell, gard., second. 100 sweet peas, Mrs. F. A. Constable, first. Schizanthus, Adolph Lewisohn, first. Collection of orchid blooms, Lager & Hurrell, first; Clement Moore, J. P. Mossman, gard., second. Collection orchid blooms, Mrs. F. A. Constable, first.

Special prizes were awarded as follows: G. D. Barron, vase of mignonette, cash; H. Fred Byxbee, four vases Daphne odora, certificate; Frederick Sturges, vases of miscellaneous flowers, cash; T. D. Leonard, E. Yeandle, gard., vase of Freesias, cash; Mrs. F. A. Constable, vase of Buddleia asiatica, certificate and cash; and vase of Plumbago coccinea, cash; Mrs. H. Darlington, P. W. Popp, gard., for new variegated carnation "Mrs. Darlington," honorable mention; G. E. Baldwin & Co., for fine plant of Cattleya Trianae, silver medal; Clement Moore, for collection of orchid plants, silver medal and cash; R. & J. Farquhar & Co., for plant of Azalea Kaempferi, silver medal.

Of Interest to Retail FloristsTHE RETAILERS' BUSINESS CALCULATOR.

Jan. 30. Sat. Check up accounts for this first month of the new year and know just where your business stand. The talent for making money is just as much a talent as is the talent that turns every sentence to rhyme and every sound to music and close systematic accounting is one of its first principles.

Jan. 31. Sun. Hustle with those orders and get home. Take along some of your stock in trade—a few smiles, a little courtesy, a display of appreciation and a few flowers. The basis of a personality that attracts is a spirit that wins other men because it has a desire to add to their comfort and happiness.

Feb. 1. Mon. No captain can guide his ship from the shore. So it is with the merchant, who must be "right on deck" every day of the week, if he would conduct his business properly. When a business is said to run itself, it is generally the result of the force of gravitation. Gravity is always downwards. Advertise a specialty for the week. The general public knows so little about commercial varieties that if one particular variety of rose or carnation be advertised it will often attract attention as a novelty, even if it be old to the trade.

Feb. 2. Tues. When one expects little he is seldom disappointed. Enthusiasm is the fuel of success so supply plenty of fuel for your business. If these are dull times, all the more incentive for making one's establishment look like prosperity. If the demand is dull, remember also that the novelty of the supply often creates a new demand.

Feb. 3. Wed. Growers and wholesalers all over the country are finding cause for the formation of credit associations. It is time to get some more system into the trade. The good and efficient flower merchant will certainly have no reason to fear the results of a local credit association. The obliging man is popular, and he is also imposed upon. It works either way, wholesaler or retailer. Don't be in the same class with those people who have to be run down in order to make them pay up. Good intentions are poor collectors, so it usually takes energetic efforts to get the coin.

Feb. 4. Thur. Many florists act as though it was up to the public to find them. They have that hunt-me-if-you-want-me air that is gradually relegating them to the business junk heap. Modern florists are going after business—one way is to advertise. He who really wants to get ahead will quit criticising the bad things he sees in business and spend all his time creating good things. Build a backbone into your business.

Feb. 5. Fri. Follow up collections. The 10th is coming when the money will be needed to pay bills. Just because a man believes in the $ sign is no sign he is superstitious.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

Miss Zann, formerly located at 31 West street, has moved to 188 A Dartmouth street, in the Toy Theatre Building where more commodious quarters will be provided.

Harry Quint planted several thousand tulip bulbs last week in front of the Brunswick Hotel, where his new store is located. This action in mid-winter seems problematical, but Mr. Quint says he has done stunts of this kind before with success.

Some specialties noted this week were carnation Pink Delight from W. C. Stickel of Lexington, antirrhinums from Paul Richwagon of Needham, carnations Beacon and Yellow Prince from John Barr of Natick, and Spencer sweet peas from R. A. Wadsworth Co. of Northboro.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are perfecting a chemical process for preserving natural flowers, which they claim will eventually do away with the artificial blooms that so seriously injure the cut-flower trade. This process, they believe, ought to prove an outlet for glutted stock, instead of throwing it away as waste.

Alice Coombs carnation sells very well in the Boston market. At the present writing Mr. Roper, of Tewksbury, its originator, is optimistic regarding its reception at the carnation convention. Mr. Roper intends to hold back the dissemination of this variety until next year and is selling the flowers only just now.

Among those from Boston and vicinity who are at the Carnation convention in Buffalo are Joseph Margolis of H. M. Robinson & Co., Wm. Nicholson, Albert Roper, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Strout, E. A. Peirce, Peter Fisher, Wm. J. Stewart, M. A. Patten, W. D. Howard, W. A. Hastings, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Reuter, A. A. Pembroke, John Nelson and S. J. Goddard, president of the American Carnation Society.

WASHINGTON.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Company last week displayed a very handsome collection of the Mrs. C. Edward Akehurst rose. The flowers were large and very fragrant while the stems are long and stiff.

Another of the season's very few elaborate decorations was that at Rauscher's last week given by Rear Admiral and Mrs. Richardson Clover. The large ballroom at that place had been turned into a series of gardens, while the small ballroom was transformed into an orange grove, real oranges being attached to the trees by means of wires and ferns. A rustic fence followed the wall lines and behind this was a hedge of lilacs. The walls of the larger room were decorated with rambler roses and wall pockets were filled with red and white roses. The decoration was furnished by Gude Bros. Company.

CHICAGO.

Michael Lark, chairman of the Good of the Order Committee, announces an old fashioned smoker at the next meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club.

The coming convention of the S. A. F. in San Francisco is growing in interest as the time shortens. It is expected that the route will be decided upon and announced at the next meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club.

T. Waters, who presides over the supply department at Poehlmann Bros., is again suffering from blood poison, supposedly caused by contact with something in the dyeing room. This time his face was the place of attack and so badly swollen as to nearly close his eyes. Mr. Waters prefers the old location in his hand were he given the choice.

Wm. Allen of this city, had his first experience in this country with his uncle, Richard W. Allen, at Hudson, N. Y., whose death was recorded in last week's issue. Wm. Allen is one of the rising young men in the profession and doing credit to his training here and in England. At present he has charge of the private conservatories of Tilb, the shoe manufacturer, in Chicago.

A. L. Vaughan is distinctly not a two faced man but he looked it early in the week. A defective tooth caused one side to swell. Mr. Vaughan calls attention to an error in quoting from him last week. He said there had been no extra quantity of carnations this year and not extra quality as printed, for he believes the quality of the carnations quite up to that of former years. Instead of taking the chances on local cold storage of ferns, this firm receives daily shipments from the east, during the entire season.

Local growers are not giving the space to greens that they formerly did. Asparagus plumosa strings have dropped to a small fraction of their former demand, and a leading wholesaler says it is because the retailer does not want to pay the price. From the retailer's viewpoint it is now necessary to give sprays of green with the cut flower sales and that lessens the demand for the long strings. A fine quality of sprengeri from Florida is cutting into the demand for that also, from local growers.

Providence, R. I. Practically all of the florists of Providence and many others from surrounding towns paid a tribute to Michael Sweeney, whose funeral was held in Edgewood, Wednesday, Jan. 29. The church was filled with friends and former business associates. The massive floral tributes filled two rooms and testified to the high esteem in which the well-known florist was held.

It is the general verdict of the wholesalers and retailers in and about Providence that the business of the past year has been below that of recent years. This is especially true since the holiday season began.

PITTSBURGH.

The Blind Floral Company in the Erie Building, with greenhouses at West View, is anticipating some new buildings, the subject now being under discussion.

The E. C. Ludwig Floral Company are contemplating the addition of another greenhouse to their place near Mars, Butler County. The Ludwigs keep their store at 710 Welser street, North Side, open both day and night.

Professor Emil Kratt, of the Radium Chemical Company, will give a talk on "Radium" at the monthly meeting of the Pittsburgh Florists' Club on Monday evening, February 1, at the Fort Pitt Hotel. On this occasion the new, or rather the re-elected old officers, will begin another year's duties.

Anthony W. Smith, Jr., of the A. W. Smith Company, is much gratified by the success of his newly patented collapsible pot covers. The covers are fashioned of split bamboo, the natural wood, and dyed brown and green. This is Mr. Smith's second venture in the inventive field, the first being a mechanical patent on a brass vase. To meet the increasing demands of their trade the Smiths have ordered another large auto delivery truck.

Another young florist rapidly coming to the fore is Aloysius Anthony Leach, formerly of Mt. Clemens, Mich., who has recently taken charge of the private conservatory of H. J. Heinz. This is probably the largest and most pretentious private conservatory in the country. The conservatory, which was built six years ago, now embodies ten complete houses, one, "The Show House," having been added last year. Mr. Leach and his corps of men are unusually busy now in anticipation of the Easter exhibit. Forced strawberries, peaches and tomatoes have been supplying the home table since Thanksgiving.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Domoto Bros.' nursery at Piedmont has just received a large shipment of flowering shrubs and plants from Japan.

E. W. McLellan has just returned from a northern trip, calling on the trade in Portland, Seattle, etc. He reports business rather quiet in that part of the country.

S. W. Cunningham, professor of agriculture of the Fresno Normal School, is working on plans for the grounds, which will be laid out and planted as soon as the new building is finished.

Joseph's flower shop on Grant avenue has just installed a handsome fountain fixture in its window. It is making quite a feature of pansies in novelty boxes, and has on exhibition a lot of Polypodium Mandaiana, which are quite a novelty here.

Angelo J. Rossi, president of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., has been elected treasurer of the Down Town Association for 1915. This is an organization started by merchants of the shopping district after the 1906 fire for the up-building of the down-town streets, and it still finds a wide field of usefulness. L. L. Morse, head of C. C. Morse & Co., the local seed house, is a new director of the organization.

PHILADELPHIA.

Charles Sim and his wife and her sister will leave Feb. 2nd on a two months' vacation to the Pacific coast. Their itinerary includes San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, and Lompoc.

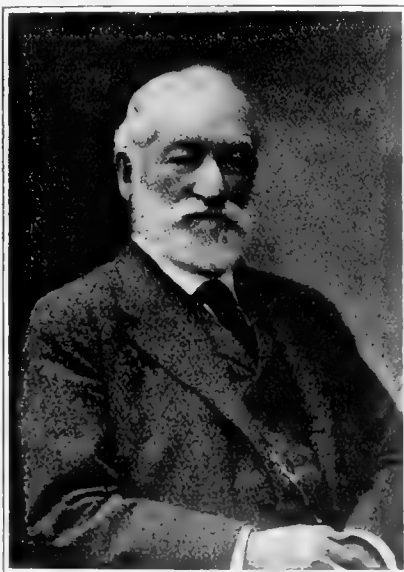

Dr. Peter H. Lane and Mrs. Lane sailed on the S. S. "Great Northern" on the 27th, via Panama for the Pacific coast. The doctor is one of Tom Roland's boys, and is an enthusiastic member of the Florists' Club and the S. A. F.

W. J. Kennedy, superintendent of the Chestnut Hill Reservoir reservation, Brookline, Mass., has been elected president of the Massachusetts State Employees Benefit Association which numbers over 1000 members.

Obituary

Charles W. Parker.

Charles W. Parker, one of Boston's oldest and most respected merchants, died on Sunday, January 24, aged 83 years. Death was due to heart failure and came very suddenly. Mr. Parker was an ex-president of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, having served in that capacity for two terms previous to the election of Mr. Farquhar. He was an ardent lover of horticulture and on many occasions received and entertained the garden committee of the Society and others in most hospitable manner at his beautiful summer estate on Marblehead Neck, which he had planted and developed from a rocky barren into a verdant paradise. He leaves a widow and two sons. The funeral on Wednesday, January 27, was attended by many of the horticultural fraternity of Boston.

Riverside, N. J.—The storm on Tuesday night, January 12, did great damage to the greenhouses of the local florist here, A. Hirschleber.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON The market is improving markedly, so that at the present writing the wholesalers are walking around with smiles and cheerfully optimistic about spring business. Conditions have taken a sudden turn in favor of the wholesale market. Stock has shortened considerably, better prices are being secured and at the same time cleaning up more easily. Roses have taken a sudden jump, 25 per cent. to 50 per cent., with a scarcity of white roses. Yellow and red roses are selling well. American Beauties are reaching prices that make the flower business look like prosperity. Carnations of all varieties are selling well at normal prices, especially the novelties. The fine quality of all kinds of flowers in the market is noticeable. The demand throughout the city has not increased to any great extent, but shipping trade has been better and the supply is much decreased, so there is hope for a good month's trade. The usual dullness following the holidays is passing and retailers are making collections easier for the rest of the trade.

BUFFALO Zero weather and plenty of snow has caused receipts to be light. There is just enough stock to keep every merchant supplied and also keep the wholesaler cleaned up. This applies to roses in particular in which the supply has shortened up and which has helped other sale of stock such as daffodils, tulips, carnations, lilies and peas. There are some choice Taft, Sunburst, white and pink Killarney and prices rule high on the top grade. Beauties are on the scarce list. There are not many coming to this market and there are not many needed, Richmonds being preferred in many cases. Carnations are about equal to the demand. Plenty of greens and smilax and still an over supply of narcissus which need a good deal of force to move.

CHICAGO High prices prevail and will so long as scarcity of stock continues. The market conditions are not far from normal for midwinter, when the early winter has been marked by a big crop along all lines. The prices quoted at Christmas are more adapted to the present time than during the holidays. So far bulbous stock is bringing good returns and spring flowers are still new enough to be in good demand. Knowing the enormous quantity of bulbs in this vicinity, large wholesale houses are looking for future buyers to contract for a definite amount for daily use at a later period. Violets are very unsatisfactory from the selling standpoint, and apparently for no reason, for the quality is good. American Beauties show no tendency to larger supply and these with all kinds of roses will be on the short side until sunshine comes to help out the buds. Carnations are now of good quality and supply is fair.

CINCINNATI The market generally is in a good condition as far as clearances are concerned. The supply of stock is only fair. Roses are meeting with a very good call and are running somewhat short of present needs.

Carnations are selling well and the good stock has been having no trouble in selling at fair prices. Lilies meet with an active demand. Narcissus are proving good property since the supply of roses and carnations has decreased. Lily of the valley, single violets and sweet peas sell pretty well. Double violets meet with a very weak market. Other offerings include callas, Rubrum lilies, orchids, Roman hyacinths, jonquils and baby primrose. The supply of greens is ample for present needs.

NEW YORK Business continues to be in much brighter condition and the spurt that started last week continues. The supply at present is not equal to the demand. Roses continue scarce and good prices are realized for all varieties. Carnations also have advanced considerably. Lily of the valley, lilies, violets and bulbous stock all demand good figures.

The improvement in business noted in our last week's report continues. The general tone of the market is very much better. Prices have stiffened considerably all along the line. In roses there has been a sharp advance. The only good roses now are the long stemmed grades and these are too high priced for ordinary trade. As a consequence the buyers are forced on to carnations which are plentiful and good and very moderate in price. Its an ill wind that blows nobody good. American Beauty roses are very scarce and in the short very poor quality. Specials jumped to nine and look as if they would go to ten in a day or two. Pink roses are also scarce. Orchids are still plentiful and more than the market can handle to advantage. This is most noticeable in the smaller sized cattleyas. These latter are hard to move and bring such small prices that even the department stores advertise them retail at twenty cents.

The cloudy weather of the past week has caused a slight tightening of the market in some instances although there has been ample stock to meet the demand. Roses have felt the effects of the bad weather and have been short at times. Daffodils and lilies of the valley have tightened considerably. Carnations have been coming good until the latter part of the week, and unless the sun comes to the rescue a scarcity is predicted.

Retail business is even less active than last week, but in the wholesale trade, however, conditions are fairly satisfactory. The volume of business is nothing extraordinary, but desirable offerings in many lines are a little lighter, and prices firmer. No real scarcity is observed in any line. Violets are plentiful and cheap, but really fine stock is scarce. Tulips have appeared at most of the downtown stores this week, and are much sought after. The first sweet peas have also been quite an attraction, very few being offered. Blossoming pansies in boxes also receive some attention. Formosa and Bermuda lilies figure prominently in store displays, but find only limited sale. A touch of frost is holding back the daffodils and freesias, and prices have held up unusually well, all offerings being readily taken. Lily of the valley continues plentiful, and it is reported that a carload of pips has just come in. There is just about enough phalaenopsis to meet requirements, while other orchids and gardenias are in rather heavy supply, and cyclamen flowers are quite plentiful. Roses are holding their own, but the demand runs mostly to the cheaper varieties. White Killarneys remain very popular, and the yellow varieties also find a large sale. A few bunches of chrysanthemums are still coming in. Carnations are not so firm as last week, but hold up fairly well, with none too plentiful supplies. It rather looks as if the trade would "mark time" until about Feb. 20, when the opening of the Exposition should bring lively times.

The outflower market here has been in good condition. There was plenty of stock in the early part of the week but later on became somewhat scarce owing to the cold and cloudy weather when prices began to stiffen somewhat on carnations and roses and the demand became larger. Fancy carnations are bringing good prices. Bulb stock is not as heavy as usual at this time of the year though paper whites are in plenty. Other bulb stock short of the demand which includes Roman hyacinths. In greens, as usual, the market is good.

It is stated that the present shortage of roses and carnations is greater than has been seen in this locality in many years. This shortage applies to all grades and varieties and difficulty has been experienced in getting sufficient to fill out dinner decorations. On the other hand, there is a plentiful supply of sweet peas and violets are coming in to the market in larger quantities daily, with the result that the price is now about 50 cents per hundred. No one seems to want narcissus and great amounts daily find their way to the refuse heap. Gardenias moved exceptionally well during the week with the result that many orders had to go unfilled. Lilies are in much better demand because of the shortage of carnations and a large quantity of funeral work. The sale of lily of the valley has been somewhat draggy. Orchids are very plentiful with little or no call. There has been a good demand for Fire Flame roses at from $6 to $8 per hundred.

CYCLAMENS

Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass.
For page see List of Advertisers.

A great bargain in blooming cyclamen, full of blooms and well set with buds, every plant a specimen, mostly light shades, 2½-in., $5.00; 4-in., $10.00 and $15.00; 5-in., $25.00 and $35.00; 6-in., $50.00 and $75.00 per 100. We have received a good many letters similar to this one: "Thank you very much for the beautiful cyclamen plants. It does not take a salesman to sell them."—Colonial Flower Shop, Goshen, Ind. This is what Mr. J. P. Newton, Sioux City, Iowa, says: "Ship 1000 transplanted cyclamen seedlings at your convenience. Last year's did beautifully."

Cyclamen seedlings, once transplanted, of our well-known strain, only the best sent out, with cultural directions; in separate colors, $3.50 per 100; $30.00 per 1000. These are strong, once transplanted stock, not to be compared with seedlings. 250,000 grown this season.

CHRIST WINTERICH,
Cyclamen Specialist, Defiance, Ohio.

LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS' CLUB.

Good weather was the result of a cold and foggy night, but by noon the sun shone brightly on two of the best of them, and we made the trip to Strasburg, stopping first at Ames Brothers, on an interesting walk of about a mile to Chas. B. Herr's, both of which places are so near to perfection in style, cleanliness and quality of bloom produced that one is compelled to believe that the Professor from India (I forget his name), who is now demonstrating by a machine test the fact that plants respond to their surroundings with feelings of joy or gloom as the case may be, is correct. One can positively see the gladness of living expressed by the plants with these two growers; in fact, White Perfection is so filled with joy that it bursts its calyx in the attempt to express it. Matchless has a record of having produced more blooms per square foot up to the present date than any other variety grown. Philadelphia as grown here, established a keeping record exactly opposite of its general reputation, and it is just possible that those who are going to discard it on account of its lack of keeping qualities may be making a mistake. Beacon—well, Chas. B. Herr's Beacon are simply head and shoulders over any other red grown by anybody or anywhere.

Getting back to Lancaster, a run was made to the houses of Enos Kohr. This is an ideal range of glass and a model heating plant; the carnations good, but not quite so good as the Strasburg ones, and Mr. Kohr says they are a lot better than the prices they are bringing.

The meeting was held in the Breneman Building at 6:30, with the usual full attendance. The annual election resulted in the choice of B. F. Barr for president, Harry Weaver for vice-president, Lemon Landis for secretary and Harry K. Rohrer for treasurer. The newly elected president appointed the following committees:

Visiting committee—Rudolph Nagle, Charles Weaver and E. S. Butt. Program committee—Albert M. Herr, E. P. Hostetter and M. J. Branton. Glad Hand and Sunshine committee—to welcome and introduce visitors—B. F. Herr, Chas. B. Herr, Wade Gabry and Rutter Hess. Exhibition committee for Lenten Exhibits—Harry K. Rohrer, Elmer Weaver, J. L. Lockard and Ames Rohrer. Membership committee—Harry A. Schrover, J. H. Linkey, John Schrover and Frank Kohr. Sports committee—George Goldbach, Wilbur G. Van der Roper, N. G.

An adjournment was then made to a very delightful dinner where we had with us our two greenhouse builders, Dennis T. Connor of Lord & Burnham Co., and T. J. Nolan of the King Construction Co., also our former townsman, Chas. Edgar, and the genial representative of the H. F. Mitchell Co., D. J. Keohane. After the dinner Mr. Barr made an address thanking the members for his re-election and asking their co-operation for the coming year. He spoke of the elimination of trade jealousies and the rivalry that existed in Lancaster before the club was organized, and the fact that we now call each other by our first names. He made a strong plea for the elimination of the advance in prices on cut-flowers for the holidays, remarking that he would like to see this club go on record recommending a uniform price for cut-flowers with no advance for the holidays. At the conclusion of the address the writer presented Mr. Barr with a box of cigars, real ones from Lancaster City, complimenting him on his administration and as an evidence of the club's good will toward him.

Sports were then indulged in until all the sports went home. Dennis Connor won first in the bowling contest, T. J. Nolan second, George Goldbach the third, and Frank Kohr the thirty-third.

The next meeting, Feb. 18th, will be carnation night. Novelty men will get busy and advertise their stock by showing it.

ALBERT M. HERR.

CONNECTICUT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

This Society held a most interesting meeting on Friday evening, January 22nd, in the County Building, Hartford. President Mason exhibited a fine collection of evergreens comprising some fifty varieties. He explained the good points of each variety and the best methods of propagation and protection during the winter months. Nathaniel Slocombe, of Farmington, displayed Cypripedium insigne, and John F. Huss showed Platyclinis Cobbiana from the Philippine Islands. The judges awarded each a first-class certificate. J. M. Adams was appointed a committee of one, with full power, to confer with the managers of the Connecticut Fair Association as to enlarging the exhibit of gladioli at the coming fair in September. C. H. Sierman presented in appropriate terms to John F. Huss, in behalf of the Society, a very handsome loving cup, neatly inscribed:

"Presented to John F. Huss in recognition of long and faithful service as President, Conn. Horticultural Society, 1915."

The next meeting will be held February 12th and will be primrose and cyclamen night.

ALFRED DIXON, Sec'y.

GARDENERS' & FLORISTS' CLUB OF BALTIMORE.

Ladies' night was observed Monday evening, January 25th. A very large audience turned out to hear Richard Vincent, Jr., lecture on "The Land of Burns and Scottish Scenes." The lecture was preceded by Scotch songs and recitations, and at the conclusion, the audience sang "Auld Lang Syne." It was the best evening's entertainment the club ever had. Refreshments were served.

COVER ILLUSTRATION.

Our cover picture this week shows an interior view of the great conservatories and swimming pool recently completed on the DeLamar estate at Glen Cove, New York, by the Lord & Burnham Co. This sumptuous structure with the plants included is said to have cost over one million dollars.

The entire establishment is heated by five L. & B. steam boilers, No. S-36-11. Two of the boilers are intended for heating the water in the pool, two more for the conservatory proper, and the third, for use in an emergency, should anything happen to the other boilers. The water in the swimming pool can be taken out, and the pool refilled with filtered water, in eight hours. All the water for the pool passes through two sets of filters.

Under the conservatory there is a large storage room for bay trees, etc., mushroom cellar; squash court, dressing rooms; shower baths; shooting gallery, and a ball room. In addition there is a cellar, partitioned off, for the boiler cellar, coal cellar, filters, etc. There is an electric elevator running from the basement to the ground floor, for taking plants to the conservatory.

All the heating pipes in the conservatory are concealed under the benches by bronze grilles and all the ventilating apparatus is concealed in the walls of the conservatory. The architect is C. P. H. Gilbert. The gardener in charge is Robert Marshall.

The members of the State Florists' Association of Indianapolis, Ind., will be the guests of F. Dörner & Sons Co., at Lafayette, Tuesday, February 2d.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

The annual banquet of the Southampton Horticultural Society was held in the Commercial Hotel, Southampton, N. Y., on Jan. 20th, when there was a large attendance of members and their wives who sat down to a very tastefully served dinner, there being some 60 diners present.

President Martin McLaughlin presided at the tables in his usual able manner, introducing the many speakers, including Wm. G. Gomersall of Nyack, who was listened to with interest. Walter J. Jagger of Southampton, who gave an interesting paper on "The Value of Education to the Farmer," and was heartily applauded, and W. D. Van Brunt, who gave a very pleasing address on Southampton and the Horticultural Society. The spirit among the members present gave only one impression: that the Southampton Horticultural Society is united and intends to carry on the good work of the past with greater vigor in the future.

At the regular meeting on Jan. 21st it was decided to hold the annual show in July, particulars of which will be published later. The next meeting will be held in Odd Fellows' hall on Feb. 4th at 8 P. M., when any horticulturalist in Southampton will be welcomed.

Mastica is elastic and tenacious, admits of expansion and contraction. Putty becomes hard and brittle. Broken glass more easily removed without breaking of other glass as occurs with hard putty. Lasts longer than putty. Easy to apply.

This simple little Chinese puzzle has to do with the load of the roof exerted on the rafter at a certain point.

No, this is not a kite, but a diagram of the capers the wind cuts up when it starts pushing on the roof.

How We Make Sure Our Roofs Are Safe and Sure

IT'S easy enough to say that if a piece of iron, of a certain size and strength, will support a load of so many pounds, that one twice the size, would support twice the load. That's good enough as far as it goes—but it doesn't go far enough when it comes to greenhouse construction. It doesn't, because every foot in width that you add to a house, you shift the load. It may increase the load by three, at some points, and decrease it by a half, at others. You absolutely must know to a pound—almost to an ounce just

- (1) How much the weight of the frame itself will be;
- (2) How much the wind pressure will be;
- (3) How much the snow pressure of an estimated given amount will be;
- (4) How and where the pressure will be shifted from one member to another.
- (5) How much margin should be figured in for a "safety factor" or the allowing of a surplus of strength for extraordinary conditions of snow and blow.
- (6) You must know not only the weight and pressure exerted on the entire structure, but exactly what the weight and strain will be at any point.

These are things that can't be figured out on the back of an envelope "while you wait."

It takes days, sometimes even weeks, to do it. But we never materially increase the width of our houses or make any radical change in our construction, without first having our engineering department figure out stress and strain diagrams, like these shown here. These particular ones were worked out to prove to ourselves that we could safely build a house 83 feet wide and use only two columns.

These diagrams proved beyond all doubt that it was a safe and sure proposition; but also showed to us that it was possible to greatly simplify our first construction diagram, making the house more desirable in every way and reducing its cost considerably. It took our engineering department over two weeks, working steadily, to reach these conclusions. How then, any ordinary mechanical draughtsman can be depended on to figure safe on the engineering problems involved in big greenhouse building, is more than we can understand. Or how even a skilled engineer can handle it without the aid of information and data, only such as can possibly be found in the possession of a greenhouse concern of years and years of experience like Lord & Burnham.

When you want to build a safe and sure house, be it big or little, let's talk it over together. Say when and where and we'll be there.

while not advertised as extensively as some of the new ones, is sure to make just about as good a place for itself as any of them. The store men like little roses — most of them will tell you so. They like Cecile Brunner, the little pink one, and they will like Geo. Elgar better, because of better foliage and stem, and its wonderful clear yellow color. The grower will like it because it will pay him to grow it. It's so easy to grow — so free from disease — and brings so many salable flowers that sell so easily. It's good for the small grower, too, the grower that has a small retail business, for he can always, with a couple of hundred plants, cut enough to make one or more bouquets, on short notice. Good own root or grafted. State how many you would like to grow — write us about it, and let us quote you.

MATCHLESS IS STILL UNBEATEN

At the Buffalo Show, MATCHLESS came through in the usual manner and swept the boards. In the Sweepstakes in Class A, it defeated thirty-eight vases of all varieties. In the white, the only two vases of MATCHLESS were placed first and second. Thus it is again conclusively proved that in quality, size and fragrance, MATCHLESS tops them all.

AND BESIDES THIS

MATCHLESS will produce more than any carnation of its color, will bloom more continuously and keep better. It is absolutely non-bursting and the easiest carnation to grow in existence.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Care of Smilax Beds

Smilax beds that were cut down for the early winter trade will need some cleaning up and working over. Keep these beds on the dry side until they show signs of new life. They can have a good syringing on all good days which will just provide enough moisture to suit their resting condition. Give them a steady night temperature of about 60 degrees. When new growth shows nicely all over the surface, a coat of bone meal, followed by a half-inch mulch of old manure and loam in equal parts can be put on. This mulch can be renewed about once a month. As the plants show a tendency to run, give them silkline to climb on. Do not keep the atmosphere too humid as it always makes the strings soft; give ventilation on all possible occasions.

Cyclamens

The young plants for next winter's crop should have every encouragement. If elevated on shelves or in a house kept at 55 degrees at night, they will be all right. When ready for their first potting, use a compost of three parts loam and one-half part each of well decayed dried manure and leaf-mold with some sand added. Continue to give the potted plants the same temperature as when in flats. So long as they remain in flats go over them once a week and scratch over the surface soil. Avoid a close atmosphere, as this will cause the plants to become leggy. You cannot keep the plants too near the light if you want them stocky. To grow cyclamen well, these points should be considered, viz.: Constant heat, a moist atmosphere, free drainage and an ample water supply. Insect pests should never be given any quarter. A spraying once a week with a reliable nicotine solution will keep the plants clean. Air should be given but not in the nature of a draft, but in such quantities as to keep a sweet atmosphere in the house.

Chrysanthemums

Each one must decide for himself the best time to propagate, but these dates I have found most satisfactory: February for fine specimen bloom in pots; March and up to April 15 for bench culture; end of April and up to May for 6-inch pots. Some varieties rooted in May seem to do as well as when rooted earlier. Secure, if possible, a house with a northern aspect for the propagating with no heat under the benches. Use a good gritty sand. Water well and pound as hard as possible. Insert the cuttings firmly, leaving no air space under the cuttings. Two and one-half or three inches is the right length. Trim the bottom leaves with a sharp knife, if the foliage is heavy; this will help the cutting and prevent damping. Spray lightly once or twice a day, but have the house dry at night. Allow no wilting; protect with papers, for if once wilted they become hard and it takes some time to get over it. In from 15 to 20 days they will be rooted if kept in a temperature of 45 or 50 degrees nights; day, 55 or 60 degrees with sun heat. As soon as the roots are one-half inch long, transplant from the sand at once; sand having no nutriment, they will draw up badly if neglected.

Jerusalem Cherries

These make very fine plants for Christmas. Where you intend to grow this stock from seed, lose no time in sowing it now and they will produce nice bushy plants for next Christmas. From 60 to 65 degrees will be right. For the starting of the seed any good sandy soil that is fairly open will do. Keep the flats or pans covered with a piece of glass until the seeds have pushed forth their growth. When they have attained sufficient size to handle, pot into small pots and grow on and shift as they may require it. Give them plenty of light and a good syringing on all bright days. After they are potted, do not keep them too warm. Fifty to 55 degrees at night will suffice. Continue this treatment until the end of May when they can go outside. Where you have saved some stock plants you can start and propagate and in a couple of weeks these will make fine plants also. Fumigate often for greenfly as these often become troublesome.

Orchids

From now on all orchids will be showing more active growth that always comes with the stronger sun and the increased length of the days. There will be quite a few cattleyas that have had a nice rest and just before they begin to grow is the best time to repot or top-dress them. The material most used is either fern fiber or sphagnum moss and fibrous peat. When potting orchids always be sure that they have an abundance of drainage of crocks and charcoal. See that all are potted firmly and staked if necessary until they become well established. These newly potted orchids will want frequent syringings, and plenty of moisture in their surroundings. Give strict care as to watering, but never overdo it. Ventilate on all possible occasions and keep the plants clean by frequent sponging.

Watering

Now that the days are becoming longer and the sun stronger remember that all plants will require more water, so use water freely on all crops and pot plants that have plenty of roots.

cation, being carefully avoided. Nobody can question the advantage accruing to the flower trade of Buffalo from the education thus freely given the public of the city, or the great special value to the carnation and those who grow it commercially, of this demonstration of its decorative uses and its claims for popular favor. In this innovation and in the splendid originality of the banquet hall decoration the Buffalo florists set a standard which no future carnation convention can dare to ignore. It marks a permanent progressive step.

Harmony without incum- brance

We are much pleased with the attitude taken by the American Carnation Society in its action at Buffalo as regards participation in the National Flower Show at Philadelphia next year. When it is shown, as the secretary of the organization demonstrated from his records, that the shifting of the date of the annual meeting from January until March means loss of membership and partial disintegration no fair-minded person can upbraid the Society for conserving its vital interests and holding on to the only course which will keep it from disaster. The unanimity and sincere enthusiasm with which the proposition was adopted to participate to the fullest extent in the Philadelphia event in addition to the annual convention in St. Louis two months previous, is the best sort of assurance to the S. A. F. that it has no more harmonious ally among its various special auxiliaries than the devotees of the divine flower, and whatever misgiving might possibly have arisen in some past years in this particular can no longer be entertained.

Build now

The slogan which Boston business boosters have adopted, "build now," seems to have met with a reception even more enthusiastic than its originators looked for. It is pointed out that action on the line suggested by the motto will have broadly a double effect, in that it will give practical help to the unemployed and at the same time will benefit the inventor on account of the low prices at which materials may now be bought. Why should not this suggestion have a pertinent bearing also on the matter of greenhouse building? Notwithstanding the opinion prevalent with some classes of the florist business that greenhouse building has been carried to the limit of the need for such property, there is really no foundation for expectation that the construction of modern greenhouses will be curtailed, but rather, on the contrary, it is bound to increase and extend beyond comparison with the record of past years. The only element of doubt is as to whether it is to proceed uninterruptedly now or is to be restricted temporarily until general business commences to hum and values on all building material, labor and capital, are advanced by the impetus of revived activity. We believe that the greenhouse builders will be able to show any intending investor that the present is a most favorable opportunity, while the well-informed grower needs no argument to convince him that the only road to sure success under the conditions of today lies in first-class modern building, heating and equipment and the longer one holds on to outclassed, obsolete and worn out structures the harder it will be for him eventually to recover lost ground or even hold his own. Build now, if you are ever going to make an effort to "get there." The moral effect of an optimistic, self-reliant movement now would do much to further establish the flower growing industry in the estimation of the financial world. "Build now."

The march of progress

The retail florists of Buffalo showed a most praise-worthy spirit in their action in contributing examples of carnation dinner table decoration, simply for the common good and without any competitive or advertising character. There were nine of these tables prepared by nine leading retailers, all marks of identi-

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Drainage

The recent very rainy weather shows that it is necessary to make provision for draining off the water that has no chance to sink into the frozen earth, and would run into the cellars at the very first chance. In the summer when all things are high and dry, is a poor time to figure out just where the water will run to, or where it will come from. At this time of the year, however, it does not take a man long to see just where it is necessary to locate catch-basins, and cesspools to keep the water from flooding the place. We know of an instance where this came near ruining the whole place for several men, and it was only the mild weather that saved the grower's crops. With all that could be done, water rose and rose in the cellars until the fires were put out, and then the whole place was cold. During a rain storm go over the place and see where the water collects. The ground is frozen now so that it cannot be done at once, but mark the places where it will be necessary to fill or to dig out. This work can easily be done next summer when it will be too warm to work inside. The men will enjoy a little work outside and the money expended will be well invested. It is a good plan to have several Kinney pumps on hand. These are very inexpensive, and will take out water in very little time. They work with city water pressure, and can be used in watering with liquid manure. They are a very good investment on any place where there is the slightest danger of water running into the cellar.

The Novelties

There are, as usual, a number of new roses that will be sent out this season. Many promise to be very good. Try them out in small quantities and see what they will do. Some growers will have a knack of handling any variety that comes along, and get it to respond to their treatment, while others can only grow certain varieties real well. We find that almost every variety has certain peculiarities of its own, and if these are complied with when growing, the variety will do twice as well as when it is given just ordinary culture. To find these out it is impossible to write just how to do it, as conditions are different at nearly every place. But a good grower will "see things" as soon as he enters a house, and this will enable him to give these little touches that certain varieties require to do real good.

Clean Pots for Young Stock

If the pots that were used last season have not been washed up during the summer months, do not use them if the plants are to remain in them for any length of time. We never use dirty pots at all, even washing the pots that have been used and from which plants have been shifted to the larger sizes. It is very little trouble to do this, for if it is done at once as soon as the plants are taken out and while the pots are still moist, they can be washed very rapidly, especially where a pot-washing machine is used for this work. These machines are such time-savers that we do not see why they are not installed on more places. A small electric motor will run these to perfection, and the work that they will turn out is surprising when compared to the old way of washing all the pots by hand.

Croaking the Pots

This seems so unimportant that it is done at times without any consideration whether it is done well or not. When the plants are to be shifted into larger sizes, it is well to see that the pots are well croaked to insure perfect drainage. There is nothing that will hamper plants more in growing than poor drainage, especially when accompanied with dirty pots. The plants will always have a sickly look when these are together. Charcoal makes ideal drainage material, and there are places where it can be made without any extra cost. Where this is so, there is nothing better. However, it is not absolutely necessary and any clean, coarse materials will do very nicely, such as screened gravel, broken pots, cinders and so on. Do not use fresh cinders unless it has to be. These have a certain amount of foul gases in them, that will not do the plants any good.

RAISING HOLLY FROM SEED.

HORTICULTURE, Boston:

Can you advise me as to how, when and where to sow holly seeds and raise the young plants? C. A. Virginia.

In reference to the holly seed sowing, I wish to state that the seed should be treated the same as Berberis Thunbergii, hawthorn and many similar seeds of stony nature. When collected good and ripe in the fall, the seed should be buried in sand or "stratified"—until the following spring, and then sown in drills in a well pulverized bed and covered with an inch of soil and some pine or spruce branches to protect them from the hot sun when they begin to sprout; or into a frame as nurserymen usually do, with some lattice work for shading. Plants should remain two years in the seed bed, and afterwards can be transplanted into nursery rows with ample distance, to remain as much time again, when they should have become fine specimen plants. J. F. Hess.

FUMIGATING ANTIRRHINUM.

Dear Sirs:
Kindly state what is the best fumigator for Antirrhinum.

Yours very truly,

S. A.

Some tobacco preparation is generally the best and safest fumigant to use for antirrhinums. All fumigation should be done moderately and often—heavy smoking will burn the foliage. There are several commercial preparations put up in liquid, paper or dust form that are advertised in HORTICULTURE that can be used with good results on green fly or other insect pests of the snapdragon.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

The carnation was known in Greece 2,000 years ago as the Gilliflower.

About 98 per cent. plant food is secured from the air.

Leaves are the special organs of plants for throwing off water taken in by the roots.

Too much nitrogen weakens stems and causes rank growth.

Sulphate of ammonia will impart a very rich, dark color to the foliage of plants.

All boilers should be provided with a blow-off pipe at the bottom, which should be opened once or twice a week to clean out any sediment which may accumulate.

IRIS TINGITANA Boss and Reut

Collected by the Dutch
IRIS TINGITANA

Iris tingitana is one of the Mediterranean type of bulbous Iris, and in spite of the fact that it was discovered many years ago, it is still somewhat rare under cultivation. It was first flowered in cultivation somewhere around 1884 in several gardens in Europe. I have not seen the bulbs offered in any of the American bulb catalogues, but they can be obtained from several of the Dutch growers.

It is an extremely handsome plant as may be seen from the photograph of specimens growing in the Brooklyn Botanic Garden. The stems attain a height of about 2 feet, each bearing from one to three flowers. The flowers are from four to five inches across and have extremely delicate coloring. The standards are slaty blue with dark blue veins, the style arms are dark blue tinged with reddish purple having a metallic sheen. The falls have a broad lip, with a golden yellow blotch, on a white ground, which merges gradually into a bluish edging similar in color to that of the standards.

The fact that it grows wild round about Tangiers, in Morocco, gives some indication of the kind of treatment it requires under cultivation. It will grow out-of-doors in sections where the temperature does not fall below 20° Fahr. A sunbaked situation, with well drained, porous, rich soil is required in order to produce bulbs that will give flowers the following spring. As growth takes place in early spring a position should be chosen where it will be possible to give protection in case of late spring frosts.

It is, however, as a plant for forcing that this Iris is likely to be most valuable. For connoisseurs, desiring a plant which is somewhat different from the ordinary run of forced stock, and one that will come into flower early, Iris tingitana is likely to be eminently desirable.

Collected by the Dutch

The plants from which the photograph was made were potted up in the fall in a 6-inch pot and plunged in ashes out-of-doors. After the first light frosts they were brought indoors, and grown along gradually in a cool house, in which a night temperature of about 50° was maintained. Under this treatment the plants came into flower on January 18. By giving a slightly warmer temperature, it should be possible to have them in flower much earlier than this. I am hoping that, as a result of generous feeding with concentrated fertilizers, it will be possible to produce bulbs in pots that will bloom the following year.

BEAUTIFYING HOME GROUNDS.

Valuable hints on the planning and planting of gardens and numerous other ways for improving grounds around the home were told by members of the teaching staff of the Massachusetts Agricultural College under the auspices of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in Horticultural Hall, last Saturday.

A. S. Thurston, who spoke in the afternoon on "Herbaceous Annuals and Perennials," said, "The golden rod should be in every garden, but a great many people think it too common because they see it growing by the roadside and in the fields.

"Yet in most conservatories where they go and buy there are plants that are just as common in foreign countries as golden rod is here. If we go abroad, we see golden rod from America grown in the finest private gardens."

Fine stereopticon views of gardens with the different varieties of plants growing in them were shown and their beauties described by Mr. Thurston.

Professor A. H. Nehrling also gave an instructive address on "Practical Management of the Home Garden."

During the morning there were talks on trees and shrubs by Professor A. K. Harrison; garden planning by P. H. Elwood, Jr., and garden furnishings by Professor F. A. Waugh. Professor Harrison urged the advantage of further study of the adaptation of trees and shrubs to landscape effects on the home grounds.

It was the intention of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of R. I. to install the officers and hold a banquet at their January meeting, but because of the inclement weather many were unable to attend and it was voted that the event be postponed until the February meeting.

OBITUARY.

William R. Keay.

William R. Keay, florist, of Lowville, N. Y., died on January 22 of congestion of the brain. Mr. Keay was born in Scotland 51 years ago, and came to this country 26 years ago. He had been a resident of Lowville 16 years and was highly respected by all who knew him. He is survived by his wife, three sons, David, who is in the United States navy, and John and William, four daughters, Mrs. Jerry Roland, Herkimer, and the Misses Anna, Genie and Agnes.

It has been announced by the Department of Special Events, of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, that June 4, 1915, has been officially designated as American Sweet Pea Society Day.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY The Trip to Lancaster.

Thursday afternoon was very profitably spent by the visitors in a ride by train as guests of W. J. Palmer to the Palmer greenhouses at Lancaster, some ten or twelve miles from Buffalo. Mr. Palmer has a fine establishment of about 200,000 sq. ft. and the houses are devoted to a general line of plants and flowers required in a city floral store, but largely to carnations and to forced bulb stock. Among the carnations the varieties Scarlet Glow, Philadelphia Pink and Sunbeam—the latter a particularly soft and lustrous pink—were the objects of especial admiration. On entering the office the first thing to catch the visitor's eye is the motto, "No home is complete without flowers." Pass it along.

The Banquet.

The banquet hall of the Iroquois Hotel on Thursday evening, January 28, was an object lesson and inspiration in floral decoration. Arches of smilax terminated at the capitals of the columns in rich outbursts of carnations in brilliant variety of color. There were artistic touches in plenty and the toastmaster's reviewing stand was a unique and impressive success as a frame work for the sturdy form and expansive smile of Buffalo's eminent citizen, Wm. F. Kasting, post master and past-master toastmaster, the shining light of this memorable occasion.

The banquet was a success in every way. After the savory viands had been annihilated, Toastmaster Kasting began the business of the second section with a few opening words and introduced the president of the Buffalo Florists' Club, Wallace H. Eliss, who voiced a welcome to the visitors. J. A. Valentine next responded for the "subsidiary societies." S. J. Goddard followed, thanking the members for their loyal support during his presidency. W. R. Pierson said some good words for the American Rose Society, George Asmus for the National Flower Show and C. S. Strout for the State of Maine. F. R. Pierson extended a cordial invitation to the International Flower Show in New York City and was followed by President-elect Jos. H. Hill, W. J. Palmer, S. A. Anderson, Fred Brown, George B. Urban, J. H. Dunlop, F. E. Dorner, A. F. J. Baur, W. A. Manda, J. F. Ammann, who spoke for St. Louis, the next meeting place, W. J. Stewart, and Unser Louis Neubeck, all of whom had something merry or otherwise appropriate to say. Then came the reading of the final resolutions by J. A. Valentine and "Auld Lang Syne" as a fitting finish to an occasion that will be long remembered by those who participated.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS AND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURISTS.

Board of Directors' Meeting.

President Patrick Welch has issued a call for the meeting of the Board of Directors at the La Salle Hotel, Chicago, Ill., Monday, March 1, at 10 A. M. JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

FLORISTS' CLUB OF PHILADELPHIA.

The regular monthly meeting was held on the 2nd inst. After routine the essayist of the evening Adolph Farenwald spoke about the S. A. F. So far as your scribe could gather, his idea seemed to be that the reserve fund of the S. A. F. should be used for advertising the business—for the benefit not only of the growers but the retailers. Finally, a motion, something to that effect, was carried. What business the Philadelphia local club had to presume to dictate to an entirely distinct and different organization did not appear. But Mr. Farenwald made it quite clear in another discussion when he told them that last month's vote about the exhibition hall at Allegheny Ave. didn't amount to anything; that the matter was entirely up to the S. A. F. committee and the Florists' Club had nothing to do with it—which is quite true. That's the funny part of it. Why should we worry?

The essay committee of which Mr. Farenwald is chairman, announced that the March meeting will be devoted to carnations. The speakers have not yet been selected. Leo Niessen spoke in favor of co-operative advertising, also condemned strongly selling through department stores. Any outlet seems good to the growers, but evidently Leo was thinking more of his retail clients while he spoke thusly. It's a kittle question. We do not pretend to answer it. But with all due deference it seems to us that the commission man is the growers' man. The retailers so far as we have observed are abundantly able to take care of themselves. It, therefore, looks as if it were up to the commission man to try to get the best results.

An Institute meeting will be held March 5th and 6th and a committee was appointed representing the club. This is the old Farmers' meetings of which our good friend Ed. Lonsdale made such a success some eight years ago. David Rush has now taken the matter up as county representative and we are to have a good old revival. Ed. in his sick bed in California will rejoice and say that a man's good work does really bear fruit after all. Fred Michell, Jr., Thomas B. Meehan and others will represent the Florists' Club. The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society is also a co-partner and will be well represented.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF NEW YORK.

The Annual Fall Exhibition of this society will be held on November 4th to 7th, inclusive, at the American Museum of Natural History. The schedule of premiums is now being prepared, and as soon as ready announcement will be made in these columns. This is the big autumn show around New York, and it is hoped that other societies in this vicinity in fixing the dates of their shows will avoid this period in so far as possible. Such action will accrue to the best interests of all.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Message From the Secretary.

Seven years ago this Association held its annual meeting in Detroit, Michigan. At the Cleveland convention of 1914 Detroit was again practically unanimously chosen for the meeting of 1915. So much enthusiasm was evinced in the discussion as to the city in which our fortieth anniversary should be celebrated that we consider ourselves warranted in boosting "the City Beautiful" in anticipation of June 23-25, next. It is such fun to be a "booster," because, after your energy has been spent, such a delightful satisfaction gets up under a man's vest as he congratulates himself on his success, always, of course, presuming that he has boosted in a good cause. So let us all assume the role of the booster in one united effort to make this fortieth anniversary the most notable in the Association's history—notable in the size of membership, notable in attendance and notable in all other ways that shall build up the business of the legitimate nurseryman.

To this end let every man look after the fellow who is "not on the list." President Chase is on the war path. He has appointed a committee of seven live men to boost the membership, with Brother Will Munson, of Texas, as chairman. Somethin' doin'.

As already announced, Hotel Cadillac will be headquarters. Mr. T. I. Ilgenfritz (some call him "Tom") is chairman of the committee on arrangements and entertainment. He has made the personal acquaintance of the manager of the hotel, who has promised not only to do his best to give satisfaction equal to that felt seven years ago, but to surpass it as far as his capabilities will permit.

The entertainment mill is working and we will shortly be able to take members more fully into the committee's confidence. The program mill is also grinding, and we suggest that members write to Brother C. R. Burr, Manchester, Conn., any thought they may have that will be helpful to him.

I shall be glad to give prompt attention to all inquiries regarding membership, etc.

Yours for a 1915 boom,

JOHN HALL, Secretary.

NEW ENGLAND NURSERYMEN'S ASSOCIATION.

Charles H. Greaton of Providence, R. I., who served last year as vice-president was elected president of the New England Nurserymen's Association at the annual convention held in the Narragansett Hotel, Providence, Jan. 27. The convention was well attended and spirited debates arose over the sale of surplus stock and methods of management. Nursery experts from many sections of New England addressed the convention on matters of import. Prior to closing, Springfield, Mass., was selected as the place for the convention next year.

Other officers elected were as follows: vice-president, G. C. Thurlow, West Newbury, Mass.; secretary, D. A. Clark, Fiskeville, R. I.; treasurer, V. A. Vantock, Newport, R. I.; C. R. Fiske, Worcester, Mass.; A. P. Horn, Manchester, N. H.; and J. R. Barnes, Yalesville, Conn., were elected executive committee together with the officers.

Harlan P. Kelsey of Salem, Mass., created a sensation in the convention at the morning session when he made a bitter attack upon the principle of "brush pile theory" of burning surplus stock, which was advocated by W. W. MacCartney, treasurer of the Elm City Nursery Company. Mr. MacCartney urged the burning of surplus stock in his address on "Effects of the European War on Nursery Business," for the purpose of maintaining steady prices. In condemning the theory, Mr. Kelsey said "that is the worst economic blunder that has ever been made in this world. In every other line of wholesale and retail business, with the single exception of the collar industry, there are sales of surplus stock at cheap rates. There are too many persons going around in the soup line to burn anything that is produced. Create a market for the stock. You can sell shrubby stock to poor people at low prices—people to whom you would not sell otherwise, and, consequently, you do not curtail your market."

There was a wide diversity of opinion expressed on this subject. Mr. MacCartney maintained that nursery stock was more staple than most other stocks, and the market was thus less elastic than in many other lines. Others expressed the opinion that a love for plants ought to be created and intensified and that when this is done the surplus stock would be taken care of.

Other speakers were Geo. N. Barrie of the Skinner Irrigation Co., A. E. Robinson of Brick-Robinson Co., E. W. Breed, G. C. Thurlow, J. W. Manning, Prof. H. J. Wheeler, Daniel A. Clarke and F. S. Baker. The members were entertained at a theater party on Tuesday evening.

RHODE ISLAND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Dr. Harlan H. York of Brown University, was elected President of the R. I. Horticultural Society at the annual meeting held Wednesday evening, Jan. 20. The reports of the outgoing officers showed the society to be in a healthy condition, and the treasurer stated that the financial condition was much stronger than in many years.

Other officers were elected as follows: First vice-president, Dr. H. W. Heaton; second vice-president, Prof. John E. Hill; secretary, E. K. Thomas; treasurer, Harold L. Madison; trustee, five years, Prof. A. E. Stene; lecture committee, Prof. J. Franklin Collins and Thomas Hope; botanist, Prof. J. Franklin Collins; entomologist, Prof. A. E. Stene; exhibition committee, Eugene A. Appleton, Joshua Vose, Arthur Sellow, Cornelius Hartstra and Dr. H. W. Heaton.

Following the meeting, Assistant State Entomologist Clifton W. Loveland gave a stereopticon lecture on "The Relation of Birds to Horticulture."

NEBRASKA STATE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The following notes are in part excerpts from a most delightful personal letter written by Nebraska's "grand old man," Rev. C. S. Harrison. We publish them without asking his consent and only wish we had room for the entire letter.

The annual meeting was held January 19 to 21. There was a good attendance and many interesting topics were discussed. The display of fruit was very fine. The chief topic of discussion was the adaptability of Nebraska for raising the very best class of apples the world can produce. It has been found out that there is a belt of land lying on both sides of the Missouri River which produces the very best quality. Particular attention was given to flowers, especially the iris, which so heroically endures the heat and drouth which sometimes prevails, and which proves to be so well adapted to the semi-arid regions, succeeding well on the dry plains in Arizona.

A Delightful Ovation.

Wednesday evening of the 20th the great banquet was held. The attendance embraced the members of some 20 divisions of organized agriculture, about 400 being present. And much to his surprise, your correspondent was the guest of the evening, and a most delightful ovation was given. Prof. Chas. E. Bessey gave his brief history and told what he had accomplished along various lines, especially in proclaiming the gospel of beauty, reading with splendid effect extracts from his writings. He was followed by the

Mr. Harrison was called on for a response. He said: "I have always been a busy man, so much so that if I should die I don't see how it would be possible to spend time to attend my own funeral. But you have very kindly arranged it so I can attend my funeral while I am very much alive. I can enjoy it now so much better than when I am dead. I would not have missed this beautiful eulogy of Dr. Bessey for anything, nor the remarks of Judge Hainer, which they have pronounced here over my remains—the remains of 82 years of hard service."

"Words cannot express the delight this splendid ovation gives me. Instead of being lost over cold clay, it will be an abiding joy while I live." He then dwelt on some of the joys of old age which he did not dream were in store for us. He related some anecdotes of men well along in years who refused to grow old, and these stories convulsed the audience. They seemed to break loose in riotous applause.

He then continued in more sober vein: "We are nearing the verge; we sometimes have a view of both worlds. Soon I must bid good-bye to these hands which have ministered to my wants; these feet which have borne me thus far on life's journey; these eyes which have brought to my soul the beauties of earth, and I am to go to a new country. Are you not afraid? I answer, 'No.'"

"You men of action, you sometimes get a wrong idea of heaven. The poet sings of a place 'where congregations never break up and Sabbaths never end,' and the thought of it gives you the shivers. 'My Father worketh hitherto, and I work.' Up there 'His servants serve him day and night.' We are just apprentices down here, fitting ourselves for royal service up there."

Taken altogether, the banquet is a delightful memory.

AMERICAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

The American Gladiolus Society will hold two shows next August—one at Atlantic City, which will be a mammoth trade exhibit, not for competition, the idea being to stimulate greater interest in the gladiolus. Maurice Fuld, Madison Ave., N. Y. City, has charge and would be glad to correspond with any wishing to take part.

The annual meeting and show will be held at Newport, R. I. The preliminary schedule of prizes will be issued shortly. Sect'y Youell who has charge of the show predicts it will be a record breaker, as the premium list is the largest and best the Society has ever had. The dates for holding the shows will be announced shortly.

The Nomenclature Committee of the American Gladiolus Society has approved the application of Herman H. Baer, New Hyde Park, N. Y., to register the variety "Hyde Park," and the application of Dr. C. Hoeg, Decorah, Iowa, to register "Jack Frost," "Pocahontas" and "Zingari."

Hyde Park (Baer). Color rosy white, becoming rose Neyron red at the outer edges of the petals. Throat lemon yellow, slightly shaded deep rose pink, petals feathered same color which is especially noticeable when grown under glass. Stamen filaments white with pink tips. Anthers white with lilac sutures. Bloom medium size; tube curved, slender, long. Segments unequal, connivent, the upper horizontal and broad, the lower reflexed and narrower. Mid-season. Spike tall, erect, branched, often two spikes per corm. A fair number of flowers per spike. Growth vigorous and well furnished with medium broad leaves. Corms medium large. Cormels prolific. Originated with H. Baer, New Hyde Park, Long Island, N. Y.

Jack Frost (Hoeg's No. 175). Color pure white, pencilled Tyrian rose upon an amber white throat. Bloom medium large; tube nearly straight, stout, short. Segments unequal, connivent, the upper horizontal and broad, the lower reflexed and narrower. Mid-season. Spike medium tall and erect. A fair number of flowers per spike. Growth vigorous and well furnished with very broad leaves. Corms medium large. An excellent compact, white, of good substance. Originated with Dr. C. Hoeg, Decorah, Iowa.

Pocahontas (Hoeg). Color amaranth red with a lemon yellow throat, blotched plum violet. Stamen filaments creamy white. Anthers violet. Bloom large, tube curved, moderately slender and of medium length. Segments unequal, connivent, the upper horizontal and very broad, the lower reflexed and narrower. Season early September. Spike medium tall, erect, not branched, frequently two spikes per corm. A fair number of flowers per spike. Growth good, well furnished with medium broad leaves. Corms medium large. Originated with Dr. C. Hoeg, Decorah, Iowa.

Zingari (Hoeg's No. 96). Color rose Neyron red with the edges of the petals lighter, blotch carmine purple with a dash of lemon yellow at the tip of the blotch. Stamen filaments white. Anthers lilac. Bloom medium size, tube curved, slender, long. Segments unequal, connivent, the upper horizontal and broad, the lower reflexed and narrower. Mid to late season. Spike medium short, erect, not branched, often two spikes per corm. A fair number of flowers per spike. Growth vigorous and well furnished with broad leaves. Corms medium size. Originated with Dr. C. Hoeg, Decorah, Iowa.

A. C. BEAL, Chairman.

OYSTER BAY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The monthly meeting of the Oyster Bay (N. Y.) Horticultural Society, was held in Fire Hall, on Wednesday, Jan. 27th. A large attendance welcomed our new president, Mr. Robinson. Chas. Mills showed a fine plant of cineraria and F. Kyle some very well grown sweet peas, each capturing the society's monthly prize. Considerable discussion was given Mr. Duthie's suggestion that a member in good standing moving into a new territory be accepted in the nearest local society without the usual formalities. Geo. C. Woolson gave a very interesting talk on hardy perennials, calling special attention to some of our native plants and trees.

Four new members were elected and reports read show the society to be in flourishing condition.

ANDREW R. KENNEDY, Sec'y.

NEW JERSEY FLORICULTURAL SOCIETY.

A regular monthly meeting of this society was held on Feb. 1, 1915. The exhibits were of fine quality and added to the pleasure of the evening. Awards were as follows:

Sweet Peas, Mrs. A. J. Moulton, gard. Arthur Jackson, 63 points; Primula malacoides, Mrs. A. J. Moulton, 65 points; Euphyllium truncatum, Mrs. Wm. Barr, gard. Emil Panuska, 75 points; Carnations, Peter Hauck, Jr., gard. Max Schneider, 80 points; Begonia Cincinnati, Peter Hauck, Jr., 70 points; Roman hyacinths, Peter Hauck, Jr., 55 points; Violets, Peter Hauck, Jr., 65 points; Cattleya Trianae Virginalis, Joseph A. Manda, 90 points.

Not for Competition: Cattleya Trianae, Joseph A. Manda, cultural certificate; Primula malacoides, Freesia, Mushrooms, Mrs. A. J. Moulton, cultural certificate.

ST. LOUIS FLORIST CLUB.

A telegram to Secretary Beneke, of the Florist Club announcing the selection of St. Louis for the American Carnation Society's next meeting was hailed with joy by the members of the club and the local trade at large, also the election of Brother Ammann as vice-president was well received.

The Florist Club will hold an important meeting next week Thursday afternoon in Odd Fellows Hall. President Bourdet says he hopes that the members will turn out in full force as quite a lot of important matters will come up for final discussion.

The bad weather on the night of Jan. 27 kept many away from the Florist Club dance and it was not a success in a financial way, but socially it was fine.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

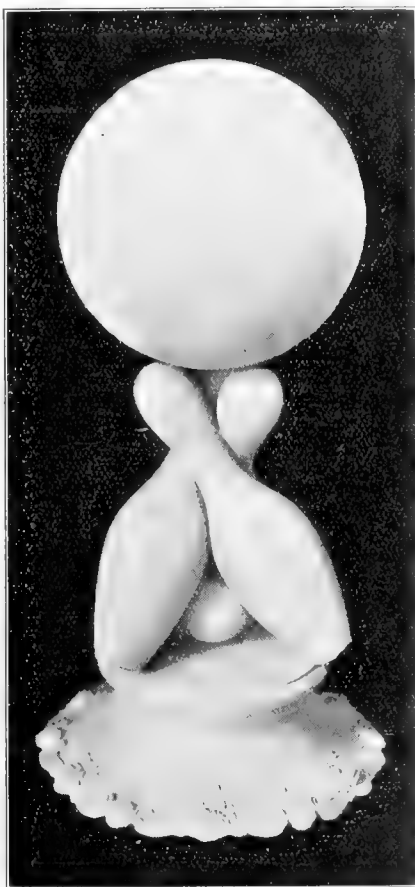

The Cincinnati Florist Society's February meeting will be held at Hotel Gibson on Monday, February 8th.

The preliminary schedule of the Seventh Annual Exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society is out and copies may be had on application to the secretary, Harry A. Bunyard, 342 W. 14th street, New York. The show will be held under the auspices of the Newport Horticultural Society and the Newport Garden Association, and both these organizations, as well as the Newport Garden Club, are represented in the list of prizes. The dates are July 8 and 9, 1915.

During Recess

Buffalo-Rochester Bowling Contest.

One of the very interesting side features of the American Carnation Society meeting at Buffalo, January 27th, was the bowling match between the Buffalo Florists' Club and the Rochester Florists' Association, this being the third game for the Lord & Burnham Trophy. The Buffalo boys had taken two straight games in 1914, and were cock-sure that they had the trophy nailed down in Buffalo. It being the last chance of the Rochester boys to get their hands on the trophy, they went to Buffalo full of enthusiasm and good bowling advice. Some thirty leather-lunged rooters from the Rochester Association accompanied the team.

THE LORD & BURNHAM TROPHY

Now in Possession of the Rochester Florists' Association.

The first game had not progressed far, before the Buffalo boys realized they had a man-sized team pitted against them, and they settled down to business. There was some mighty pretty bowling done on both sides in this game, and the generalship exhibited by the two captains, Streit and Salter, showed that each was taking the measure of his opponents. Chief Rooter Mike Keller certainly had his men well in hand, and dropped bomb after bomb into the Buffalo trenches, with telling effect, both in their firing line and supporters. The first game ended amid wild enthusiasm and 39 pins to the good for Rochester.

The second game started off fine for Buffalo, Louis Neubeck leading his team-mates. Into him Mike Keller poured shot after shot, with little effect, however. Joe Streit suffered slightly from a nervous attack brought on by the disconcerting, blood-curdling yells of Keller and his rooters. Charlie Sandiford showed tendencies of weakening under the strain of the excitement, but Spiegel ran true to form, and Scott rallied at times from the onslaught of the Rochester rooters. Ally Salter was sailing close-hauled, with his eye on the turning stake. Roland was working under a tremendous handicap, suffering a severe attack of neuralgic headache. The Glenn Brothers were experiencing some bad splits and crossed fingers seemed to have no effect on the little jinks that was following them. Thomann was putting more speed into his ball than ever, but the combined efforts of the Rochester team and rooters could not overcome the lead that Buffalo had gotten in the forepart of the game, and it went to Buffalo to the tune of 30 pins.

The third game opened with strike after strike on both sides. Will Glenn knew what he could do, and he was going to do it. Harry Glenn had gotten his orders from Charlie Vick the night before, that if Rochester did not bring the trophy back, he need not show up for work in the morning. Boland had taken another headache-powder. Al Salter tightened up his belt another notch, and Thomann threw in his high speed for the supreme effort. Mike Keller eased up on the Buffalo boys somewhat, and showed his genuine feeling and compassion for Joe Streit and Louis Neubeck in frequent short consultations on the side lines. Sandiford, Spiegel and Scott had read the hand writing on the wall in the two previous games, but were there with the fighting spirit and stuck by their guns with good effect. But there was nothing seemingly from the beginning of the game that could stem the tide, and Buffalo was taken into Rochester camp at the end of this game, by 150 pins. The true sportsmen's spirit of the Buffalo bunch was shown that evening, and the royal hospitality to the Rochester team and their contingent was put through in a manner befitting the occasion.

The trophy is now in Rochester, and will be contested for in the near future again, as the terms of the contest call for the best three out of five meets.

Following is a list of the bowlers and their totals:

Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston.

A very enjoyable evening was spent at the meeting of this club, Thursday, Jan. 28. "Ladies' Night" and the installation of officers were the features. Over four hundred ladies and gentlemen were present, the younger element predominating. Wm. J. Kennedy presided over the inauguration, inducting into office the following named gentlemen: Herman H. Bartsch of Waverly, president; James Methven, Readville, vice-president; Wm. N. Craig, Brookline, secretary; Peter Fisher, Ellis, treasurer.

The following committees were appointed: Exhibition committee, Jas. Wheeler, chairman; Robt. Cameron, Wm. Sim, T. H. Westwood, F. E. Palmer, Donald McKenzie, Chas. Sander, S. J. Goddard, Eber Holmes, Jules Huerlin, W. H. Elliott, Alex. Montgomery, Henry Penn, K. Finlayson, A. A. Pembroke, Duncan Finlayson. Entertainment committee, Geo. W. Hamer, chairman; J. W. Collins, John McIntyre, Wm. Mix, H. M. Robinson, Joshua Lawson, W. R. Thornhill, Geo. Noyes, Jas. McCarthy, Harold Edgar, W. H. Judd.

The order of proceedings was cut short to allow as much time as possible for entertainment and dancing. There were songs, piano solos and recitations by several talented performers, followed by ice cream, cake and coffee and then the dancing, which lasted until midnight. When the Highland Fling was called the floor was filled with nimble dancers, the most graceful steppers being Peter M. Miller and his partner Mrs. W. W. Edgar.

North Westchester Horticultural and Agricultural Society.

Thursday evening, January 21st, was a red letter social night for this society when they held their 13th annual dinner at Newcastle Inn, Mt. Kisco, N. Y. with about sixty members and guests and J. Austin Shaw as toast-master, to whose admirable tact, wit and humor was largely due the success of this affair.

Preceding the dinner was a short business meeting at which a vote of condolence was passed for Mrs. McTaggart of Kearney, N. J. on the loss she has sustained in the tragic death of her dear son and our brother member, the generous hearted and much regretted Charles McTaggart. Following are some of the features of the evening. Opening address by Mr. Shaw who felicitated the society on its prosperous position, its hospitality and the work being done for the uplift of the gardening profession. The toast: "Our Society" was responded to by President John Hall, and past president James Andrews. A toast to the memory of Chas. McTaggart was drunk in silence. "The Seed Trade" was responded to by Wm. C. Rickards and Al. Rickards of New York and Wm. J. Collins of Boston. Mr. Shaw responded for the Horticultural Press, in Mr. Ebel's absence. For the "Town of Bedford" Judge Robt. Clark, Town Clerk Merriam and Commissioner O'Brien responded. The "Town of Newcastle" was spoken for by Supervisor Washburn, Town Clerk Geo. Haight, Jr. and Tax Collector Heller. The toast "Our Out of Town Guests" was responded to by Mr. Van Melee of Bobink & Atkins, expressing appreciation of the hospitality shown them. "The Lay Members of Society" by Dr. Plageman. "The Ladies and Our Host" responded to by the joint host of the Kisco House, D. M. Farlee, who by the way being a most desirable bachelor had the subject in hand to which he gave a full measure of good will towards the ladies, amidst cheers. "The Plain Gardener" was responded to by Secretary M. J. O'Brien and with reminiscences of the growth and success of the society since its organization, January 7th, 1897, making a favorable commentary of the part taken in its organization by Alex. Marshall of Portchester who was present and responded with a few well chosen words.

The foregoing program was interspersed with songs and recitations as the night proceeded and a fine musical program was rendered by Prof. Eggleston on the piano. The festivities broke up about 1 A. M. A standing vote of thanks was passed with three cheers and a tiger for the admirable manner in which the toast-master conducted the festivities.

North Shore Horticultural Society.

The North Shore Horticultural Society held its sixteenth annual banquet at the Town Hall, Manchester, Mass., on Jan. 27th. The hall was decorated for the occasion with evergreen, flowering plants and cut flowers. Vice-President E. H. Wetterlow, in the absence of the president, extended a cordial welcome and the greetings of the society to those present.

Thomas J. Grey responded to a toast to the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, and was pleased to say that he brought with him not only the good wishes of the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club but also of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

An entertainment followed the banquet. Edward A. Rand in piano selections, Miss Area Farron in recitations, Prof. Brignati in sleight of hand, all contributed to the enjoyment, and Rev. W. H. Rider, D. D., gave one of his characteristic after dinner speeches and closed by leading the audience in singing "America." Dancing followed till 12 o'clock.

The committee in charge were William Till, chairman; Herbert Shaw, Axel Magnuson, Paul Maillard, Murdo MacKay, James Morton and Patrick J. Gilmore, floor director. James McGregor of Dublin, N. H., T. J. Grey, Alex. Dewar, J. P. A. Guerinneau and Mr. Hailles of Boston were among the visitors.

W. T.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The ninth annual dinner of this society was held at the Oriental Hotel, Glen Cove, N. Y., Monday evening, Jan. 25th. Seventy-five members and guests were present and did justice to an ample repast. President Ernest Westlake, delivered a short address of welcome and introduced as toastmaster for the evening, J. Austin Shaw, who conducted the proceedings in his usual able manner.

Gentlemen responding to the toasts of the evening were Charles H. Totty for the Society of American Florists; J. W. Everitt, the National Association of Gardeners; Frank Traendly, the National Rose Society; F. R. Bowne and W. R. Kinnear, the village of Glen Cove; William Duckham, Morris County Horticultural Society; William Turner, Bernardsville Horticultural Society; E. W. Neubrand, W. Scott and J. W. Smith, Tarrytown Horticultural Society. J. Duthie and J. Robinson, Oyster Bay Horticultural Society.

JAMES GLADSTONE, Cor. Sec'y.

Lenox Horticultural Society.

The twenty-first annual ball of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held in the Town Hall, Lenox, Mass., on Jan. 22nd. The hall was prettily decorated, and Clarke's orchestra of Pittsfield was engaged for the evening. The concert which they rendered at the opening was of a high order. President G. Breed led the grand march, closely followed by the other officers. A good and representative crowd was present, and supper was served at 12 o'clock. The success of the evening reflected much credit on the committee of arrangements, Messrs. J. Clifford, G. Ferguson, F. H. Butler, G. Thompson and H. Peters.

The next monthly meeting will be held on Wednesday evening, Feb. 10th, and the speaker will be Professor J. O. Poord, head of division of agriculture, Mass. Agricultural College, on "Some Principles of Farm Management."

J. CARMAN, Ass't Sec'y.

Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society.

The annual entertainment and dance of this Society will be held on Tuesday evening, Feb. 16th, in Mechanic's Hall, Stamford, Conn. Admission will be by card which may be obtained from the secretary. Members and their friends are cordially invited. A pleasing program will be rendered, followed by a buffet lunch and dancing. A pleasant evening is assured to all who attend.

The Horticultural Society of Chicago held an adjourned meeting at the Art Institute, January 26, and adjourned again, without transacting any business. Plans are under way for putting new life into the organization, which has done good work in the past, but has not been given the support it should of late. The various North Shore horticultural organizations will be asked to co-operate with DISEASED SWEET PEAS.

A correspondent in Morristown, N. J., sent to this office two diseased sweet pea shoots and asking for information and advice concerning same. The shoots were submitted to Prof. Osmun of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, who diagnosed the trouble as probably the "mosaic" disease, but asked for further details as to the history of the trouble and the surrounding conditions. As the case seems to involve much of direct interest for the numerous growers of sweet peas we give space to the resultant correspondence in full. Following is the statement of the grower:

Sirs,
Referring to your request for a fuller description of sweet pea shoots, I beg to say that I sent perfectly healthy shoots along with diseased for contrast. They were sown outside in boxes on Sept. 9th in a depth of 5 inches 2 of soil. No disease was noticeable when we looked them about the middle of November. They are in clumps of nine plants one foot between each clump. The disease seems to be confined to certain parts, three perfectly healthy plants or clumps growing beside those diseased in the same box. The foliage does not develop or expand, although the plants continue to grow, but have a curled up appearance as if affected by caterpillars, but no sign of vermin is to be seen. The leaves have yellow streaks running down them and look as if overwatered, but I don't think they are. I have applied lime to no purpose. The seed was bought at a reliable store. Night temperature is 50 degrees, with 15 to 20 degrees higher in daytime.

Sincerely yours,

J. B.

The foregoing letter was forwarded by advice of Prof. Osmun to Prof. J. J. Taubenhaus, associate pathologist of Delaware College Agricultural Experiment Station for further confirmation of his conclusions. Prof. Taubenhaus' reply follows:

HORTICULTURE Publishing Co:

I received your letter as well as the communication from Mr. B. and the correspondence of Prof. Osmun of the Massachusetts Agricultural College. I have also received today, the specimen of diseased sweet pea plants which came to us in good shape. Prof. Osmun was correct in diagnosing the trouble as mosaic. Although very little is known of the cause of this disease, much is known in the way of prevention. This disease is carried with the green aphids. It is also very contagious; that is, it may be produced to a healthy plant by the mere contact with a diseased one through aphid punctures. The very fact that your grower has planted the seeds out of doors explains its appearance in the greenhouse, as no doubt seedlings were infected out of doors which brought the disease indoors. The trouble does not make its appearance on very young seedlings but seems to break out all of a sudden when the plants obtain the height of about 6 inches. As these plants grow, the disease keeps pace, and becomes worse and worse.

Sweet pea plants which grow under greenhouse conditions and which are, therefore, more tender than those grown outdoors, show the disease in a more severe form than is shown on the same plants when planted outdoors. We do not know as yet whether the disease is communicated with the seed. It is probable that it is carried with the soil.

In the way of a remedy, spraying will be of no avail. However, since the disease is carried by green aphids, every effort should be made to keep down this pest as this really means complete suppression of the mosaic. There are some other biting insects, such as the cucumber leaf beetle and other insect feeders which prey on the sweet pea and these are also carriers of mosaic. It is, therefore, always advisable to keep these pests down by spraying with Paris green or any other standard insecticide.

In starting the seedlings outdoors, it seems almost impossible to prevent infection. If your correspondent has a cold house wherein he could start his plants, I think he would be making quite some steps towards the controlling of that trouble.

I am here enclosing several franked tags which you can use in sending to any of your subscribers, so that they may send us diseased specimens free of charge. This Department will be very glad to offer its services to any of your readers and cheerfully answer any question or give advice wherever possible.

Yours very truly,

J. J. TAUBENHAUS,
Associate Pathologist.

Newark, Del.

PACIFIC COAST NOTES.

Roy Endsley, who recently built a large hothouse at Colfax, Wash., has opened a retail store there with a nice line of cut flowers and potted goods.

The Kirkman Nursery of Fresno has just opened a branch at Madera with a large line of ornamental stock as well as fruit trees. B. H. Wood will have charge of the stock.

H. Plath of San Francisco is still delivering a great many palms to the Exposition grounds, and is now getting in additional orders for some of the buildings of foreign nations, which will require considerable material of this kind.

With the assessment of the first tree-planting district created in Oakland, Cal., under a new state law, the work of placing trees on both sides of various streets will start within a few days. The first work will be done along Grand avenue, from Perry street to the Piedmont boundary. Sycamores will be planted, and will be spaced 40 feet apart.

Arrangements have been made to have the S. A. F. Convention Garden in Golden Gate Park, a large plot of ground having been allotted for the purpose near the band stand, where the exhibits should attract a great deal of attention. The garden will be in the hands of competent men, with ample facilities, so that all exhibits will be assured proper care and attention. The Convention will be held in the new Auditorium in the Civic Center, plans of which are being forwarded to the S. A. F. officers in the East. The various local committees are getting actively to work on plans for the Convention, and the program committee, of which A. J. Rossi is chairman, is preparing a handsome souvenir program.

Holyoke, Mass.—The banquet of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club, planned for January 27 at the Marble Hall Hotel, was indefinitely postponed.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

E. J. Fancourt of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. has just returned from the carnation convention and reports the meeting a good success. The quality of the exhibits was the best he had ever seen at a similar occasion. A distinguishing feature was the splendid showing made by the New England growers. For form, size, substance and keeping qualities, their exhibits carried all before them. Pembroke, Goddard, Strout, and others deserve great credit. He thinks St. Louis a good selection for the next convention and predicts a fine meeting.

January trade among the leading houses like Dreer, Michell, Burpee and others—who had their catalogues out early and who do a nation-wide business—is reported to have been better than expected, and considerably ahead of the same month last year. This is good news, considering the heavy falling off in November and December. People seem to be getting over their scare, and getting back to normal again. Besides this, the farmers have money to spend! They have been getting better prices for several years back, and are now coming into their own!

BRITISH HORTICULTURE. The War Burden.

Horticulture, like fishing, has its share of the burden which the war has imposed on the nation. Most of the lines of seedsmen and nurserymen have concentrated their energies from the production of seeds of the "leads" and other necessities, and the contingent has collected the staff of the Royal Botanic Garden at Kew, the gardening staffs of private establishments have been depleted of workers. All are doing a patriotic share in this great struggle; those left behind have done their utmost to aid the many national funds, and also in helping the distressed Belgians, amongst whom are numbered many who have been associated with the nursery business in that unhappy country. Despite the gloomy time through which we have passed the horticultural trade generally has sought to bravely carry out the motto of "Business as usual."

The Seed Trade Outlook.

There is considerable speculation rife as to the position of the seed trade under the existing abnormal conditions. The editor of the "Fruit Trades Journal" has rendered timely service in obtaining the views of some of the leading British houses. Jas. Carter & Co. take a very optimistic view. They have no fear of any shortage owing to the German supplies being cut off. "In our opinion," they write, "among the many lessons which the war will bring home to our people one will be the fact that our English gardens need not suffer through the lack of German seeds. . . . We can do without them in the case of vegetable seeds, and every department can be supplied in unbroken succession from English supplies; and as regards flower seeds, well German stocks and German asters have served their uses in their time, but they need not be missed—English supplies can take their place. And we venture to repeat that in 1915 English flowers in English gardens will gladden English hearts as ever before." Watkins & Simpson, Ltd., report: "Taking everything into consideration the effect of the war on the supply of vegetable seeds is not great, as far as we ourselves are concerned, largely owing to the fact that we grow as much as possible in England. The supplies of flower seeds, as a rule, will be almost up to the average, and prices almost normal, even in the matter of asters and stocks, which were in the past largely imported and by many thought to be the only source for such. For some years we have been competing with the Germans in these. We grow them largely on our own grounds, as well as in other parts of the world. With regard to quality they are quite equal, if not better than most German strains. The crop of these this year, especially asters, is a good one, and the prices will be quite normal."

Some New Sweet Peas.

There is no waning in the interest being taken in sweet pea culture on this side. Amongst the novelties which will undoubtedly be sent out this season is Robert Sydenham which is a pleasing bright salmon, and will be sent out by R. Holmes, Royal

Good, Strong Well-Established Plants in 2½-Inch Pots of the Exceedingly

VALUABLE NEW ROSES

Ophelia, Francis Scott Key and Prince E. C. d'Arenberg

OPHELIA. No lady rose ever introduced possesses so many excellent qualities. It is a splendid grower, a very free bloomer, and has fine stems. It sells on sight. Anticipating the large demand, we have propagated it extensively. Strong plants on own roots, 2½-in. pots, now ready. $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY. This variety, named by Mr. John Cook, is very distinct, being entirely different from any of the modern roses grown today. Flowers are rosy red and immensely large and double, resembling very much a very full, double-headed garden rose. Its keeping qualities are remarkable. Strong plants on own roots, 2½-in. pots, now ready. $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

PRINCE E. C. D'ARENBERG. This variety might well have been termed Red Killarney, as it possesses so many of the good qualities of the Killarney's. In color, the flowers are similar to Redwood, but they are much more double. Flowers have fine straight stems of all the grades from the shortest to the longest. It has fine foliage, comes away quickly, and is even a freer bloomer than the Killarneys. Strong plants on own roots, 2½-in. pots, now ready. $12.00 per 100, $90.00 per 1000.

We will be glad to quote on application, prices on all the newer and standard varieties. Strong grafted plants ready in March.

F. R. PIERSON, Tarrytown, N. Y.

Purple (Dobbie & Co.) is a bright purple, somewhat similar to Menie Christie. The same firm have a delicate bloom of the tint its name indicates—Frilled Pink. Other new comers are: Marvel, cream pink; Fiery Cross, bright scarlet; Mrs. Wormald, bicolor. Seedsmen are looking forward to a satisfactory demand for sweet pea seeds, as amateur growers are taking up their culture in increasing numbers.

The Dahlia Trials.

Particulars have lately been published of the trials of the National Dahlia Society at Duffryn, near Cardiff, Wales, during the last two years. The intention was to decide which varieties are most suited to garden decoration, as distinct from the exhibition kinds. In 1914, 240 varieties were tested, 110 being of the paeony flowered section. Awards of merit were allotted to the following cactus varieties: Astree, rich deep pink; Beauty, pale pink; Honesty, white shading to pink; Sophocles terra-cotta; Louvain, pale yellow, with pinkish centre. Amongst the singles, honors were accorded to: Crawley Star, rosy pink; Oran, crimson scarlet; Stora, rosy crimson, yellow disc. The collarettes included: Avon, vermillion scarlet self, with a shaded lemon collar; Doon, bright scarlet, with a lemon collar. There are some good things amongst the paeony flowered list, such as: Amber Queen, amber shaded orange; Berlioz, old gold, tinged with salmon; Great Britain, mauve; Weber, rose pink; Mozart, deep crimson and Juliet, buff salmon.

RYE GRASS AND THE WAR.

We learn from our British exchanges that the exportation of grass seeds from Ulster has been prohibited.

According to official statistics a total of 5,245 tons of grass seed was exported from Belfast during the three months ending December 31 last, 183 tons being sent to foreign countries, chiefly Holland. It is clear, however, that the war has affected the trade, as during the last quarter of 1913 no fewer than 6,258 tons were exported from Belfast, 1,321 tons going to foreign ports.

Exports from Belfast are mostly Lolium perenne. A drop from over thirteen hundred tons to less than two hundred tons for continental consumption is some drop and must have hit some of our good friends over there pretty hard. Still we fancy most of the stock was moved before the embargo went on and we look for no great rise in price on the item here on this side as most of the big houses already have their supplies on hand.

Breed and Good Breeding.

"When your mother goes, there's not much left in this world for you—is there? You'll never see her again!" In these quaint and simple words Wm. Robertson imparted the news of his mother's passing away Dec. 30th at the old home in Scotland, where she had brought up twenty children. All her own brood; and all good. The twenty are scattered all over the world now. Asia Africa, America, Australia; but so far as we have heard to date, all of them are making good. Personally, we know of at least half a dozen of the Robertsons who are making good right now in America and Australia. Compared to that good lady what do all the Billy Sundays amount to? She gave the world good men. All Billy Sunday seems to do, is to make the crazy ones crazier. When we go to church we go to church to pray and to worship. When we go to a circus we go to a circus to laugh and cut up. All the boys we have talked to go to Billy Sunday for diversion—and circus—not for any good. Which is offensive to our sense of the sacredness of religion—even if we are not much of a church goer.

A Notable Chicago Seed House

The Leonard Seed Co., organized 31 years ago, with S. F. Leonard as president and Mr. Clarke as secretary, is now one of the largest wholesale seed houses in this country, and the two men to whose untiring efforts most of the success is due are still active in their respective offices. Their warehouses are many, but their down-town one, on Kinzie street, is one of the largest of its kind in this country. Its six floors are all devoted to the wholesale garden seed trade, and the cut shows the "picking" room, with its 100 machines in operation. These are fed from the grain in the reservoirs on the floor above, and after the sorting, fed again into bags on the floor below. Each floor is 75 x 165 feet, and all are filled. The office is on the main floor, where a corps of stenographers take care of the immense correspondence.

From the Wholesaler's Standpoint.

Mr. Clark says the season thus far has been all that could be desired. There is a fair supply of the standard varieties of vegetable seeds, excepting beans. Flower seeds are not so plentiful and the commonest kinds are the scarcest. This works no hardship, however, for there are many kinds available which are not so well known and will prove just as ornamental and satisfactory when tried out. The Leonard Seed Co. infer that a good season for the wholesaler means that a good one will follow for the retailer, and as that price are better, as a whole, than for several years back, and the general feeling is that the planter will call for more seed than ever when the time arrives. Produce in general has been moving at good price, and market gardeners and growers are talking expansion. There are exceptions, of course, but the "hard luckers" are in a minority. There is quite a stir among American growers to get into line to produce the varieties of seeds that have been coming from abroad and can and should be grown here. An optimistic feeling prevails all along the line. The California pilgrims returning by way of Chicago from the East seem cheerful and this great center gets the benefit of these pilgrims of trade both going and coming, which helps us to get the pulse beat of the situation.

Of Interest to Retail FloristsTHE ROAD TO SUCCESS

Quality, service, and economy are based on the fact that the selection of flowers and the early object of the florist is to be considered properly. Too many young men look at each day's sale as the end to be gained. The increase in sales from day to day in the early struggle of a business house is of less vital importance than the return of pleased and profitable patrons. Satisfied customers who will think of you and you only when they desire flowers are far more valuable to your business than the passersby who come and go, never to be seen again.

Build your business house upon the solid foundation of confidence, cemented with satisfaction, and you will surely possess the pleased patrons that are the ornament of any business house.

When I opened my first store on a capital of $300.00, no doubt I plodded along like the great majority of mediocre business men, and it was only through the chance remark of a friendly customer that I saw the light. This man came into my store and said: "Mr. Penn, what are you going to soak me for a dozen of carnations?" Do you see the point? I realized then and there, that that man, and the general public as well did not know that my prices and the quality of my stock were right. It was up to me to educate the public. I realized that the newspaper was the medium through which my message might be delivered to everybody. I also realized that it must be told constantly and convincingly so that in the end the great majority of flower buyers would unconsciously think of me when they thought of flowers.

To my mind advertising is an essential feature of the flower business. Flowers must be sold quickly, or into the waste box they must go. When men in other lines of business consider themselves fortunate if they can secure five or six turnovers during the year, in the flower business a turnover is necessary almost every day, especially if you are to give your customers the best of quality and service. So if you would have quick sales and a large volume of business—ADVERTISE. Some florists advertise through the mails, picking out a selected list; others use the newspapers, cars, bill-posters, theatre programs, telephones, etc. We employ all of these agencies and several others too complicated to relate here.

The Telegraph Delivery System, really still in its infancy, has been one of my hobbies, and the young florist who does not take advantage of this channel of getting business is asleep. My cards in the trade papers, small as they are, have repaid me many times over. It is my purpose to make the trade think of me when they think of sending telegraph orders to Boston.

The trade must be educated to the facts of your facilities as well as the general public, and the methods are the same in both cases. I believe in our florists' trade papers and appreciate all that they have done for us through the medium of our cards. Advertising in the trade papers must be done in the same way as that used in the newspapers. Spasmodic publicity is money wasted. The inexperienced advertiser expects immediate results and this is where he stops off. A publicity campaign must be planned several months or years ahead. In my case it was planned for a lifetime.

Every flower merchant ought to treat his trade papers with consideration. They are the greatest friends of the trade and should be used accordingly. Every live florist will read his trade paper as the devotee reads his bible. It is the medium between the grower, wholesaler and retailer that gets closer to the people who read it than any other class of publication.

Again, let me repeat in closing—ADVERTISE. Keep your business constantly in the people's minds, so that the mention of buying flowers suggests to them the mental picture of your individual ads., so that your firm and your ads. are welded for all time with the thought of flower buying.

Therefore—ADVERTISE.Henry PennNEW FLOWER STORES.

PITTSBURGH NOTES.

Fred Burki, Marian Morgan, T. P. Langhans and Edward H. Blind formed a congenial party of Pittsburghers at the Buffalo meeting of the American Carnation Society.

Julius W. Ludwig, president of the Ludwig Floral Co., 502 Federal street, North Side, is convalescing after a severe attack of la grippe, confining him to the house during the past week. Notwithstanding, however, he supervised the elaborate decorations for the McKinley anniversary dinner, which called into requisition a large quantity of flowers and plants.

February 8 will be Carnation Night at the New York Florists' Club. A big showing of "the divine flower" is hoped for. Some of the growers who lacked the necessary courage to display their skill at the Buffalo convention may decide to take a chance on this occasion.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

A. A. Pembroke is receiving congratulations on his record at Buffalo—out of 21 vases of carnations, thirteen 1st and eight 2nd prizes.

William Penn, of the firm of Penn the Florist, is now in Atlantic City with his wife, where they intend to spend a two weeks vacation.

The local seed houses report good prospects for spring business. Catalogs have been mailed and returns are beginning to come in from all parts of the country.

Take note that HORTICULTURE has moved its offices from 11 Hamilton Place to 147 Summer St. The new headquarters are much nearer to the wholesale flower markets and South Station.

All action concerning the credit association seems to have ceased. It is to be regretted that keener interest and a livelier spirit of co-operation are lacking among the local growers concerning so important a matter.

Over five hundred persons at the Inaugural and Ladies' Night of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston and not more than ten wore flowers! Nevertheless florists persist in complaining about the scarcity of flowers at the social gatherings of laymen.

Moses Penn, formerly located in the Hotel Brewster building on Washington street, has opened up a new florist shop at 3 Bromfield street. Confusion is bound to arise with two florists of the same name on the same street, but—the name "Penn the Florist" is registered.

J. A. Nelson of Framingham, Mass. made his first try at competing in the Carnation Show at Buffalo, aided and abetted by his sagacious friend and salesman, "Bill" Hastings. He made six entries which netted him three 1sts and one 2nd prize. Pretty clever for a first attempt.

The contingent from Boston and vicinity came home feeling pretty well pleased with their near-sweep at Buffalo. The seven exhibitors in the party captured twenty-nine 1st prizes, twenty-one 2nd prizes and three medals. Mighty little left for the balance of the country.

Some specialties noted this week are carnation Morning Glow from Ed. Winkler of Wakefield, tulips from Mann Bros. of Randolph, Freesia Purity from Thos. A. Cox of Dorchester, Dutch Golden Spur narcissi from John J. Fee of Jamaica Plain and mignonette from Wm. R. Nicholson of Framingham.

Edward Winkler of Wakefield, who was one of the Boston party to the Buffalo carnation meeting is much pleased with the success of his new carnation Morning Glow in scoring 85 points and winning the coveted certificate of merit. This carnation which is a seedling of Winona crossed with Queen has already made a sterling reputation among the Boston retail trade.

Very little was done by local florists to stimulate interest in McKinley Day, Jan. 29. We need to take advantage of every possible occasion upon which to create a demand for flowers. Enough kicks and jolts are being suffered by the trade at the hands of thoughtless people who are publicly objecting to the use of flowers at social gatherings, inaugurals, etc., without this lethargy on the part of the trade itself.

The new store of Thos. F. Galvin, on Park Street will very soon be open for business. Its exterior is attracting much attention on account of the spacious show windows and the large circular showcase in the centre of the semi-circular entrance. The store is eighty-five feet long and forty-five feet wide, a combination of the two stores formerly located there. The architect's drawing of the new front is now on display in the window of the Tremont street shop.

CHICAGO.

T. Waters reports the Poehlmann Bros.' supply business for January, 1915, in excess of that of a year ago.

Chas. W. Vyhnanek who has a retail store at 4227 W. 22nd street, has opened another at 1146 W. 18th street.

John Michaelson regards the last two weeks in January as the best since Memorial Day, combining normal demand with good quality of stock and fair prices.

Freesias of delicate tints of pink, yellow and lavender are now received from local growers at E. C. Amling's. They are very beautiful and are quickly sold. The supply will soon be larger.

Phil Schupp says that nearly all of J. A. Budlong's lily of the valley has arrived and every pip was in fine condition. This house has an enviable reputation for the excellency of the quality of the stock it places on the market.

Geo. Wienhoeber has completed several changes in his store, greatly adding to its beauty and convenience and also placed a large stock refrigerator in the basement workroom. He says the old time corsage bouquet is of the past and lays it to modern dressing and modern dancing.

The hot frames on the lots opposite the greenhouses, at Frank Oechsli's, will be replaced this spring with a range of six houses of the latest models for plant growing. The present range is new and up to date and this addition will give much needed room for the high-class stock which has won such a good repute for this establishment.

Frank Beu has now one of the best equipped as well as most attractive places on the northwest side. His new brick building at 4445 N. Crawford avenue, containing a store and three flats, is now completed and later it will be joined on the south side by conservatories. The store is 22x35 ft. with an 18 ft. window and richly furnished. Mr. Beu and son Carl, operate the place together, Carl attending also to the wholesale part in the market. Mr. Beu leaves Friday for a visit to his old home in Philadelphia which he left 17 years ago for Chicago. During the past five years death has come into his family five times and a vacation will afford a much needed diversion and rest. The Kaiserine rose still has one faithful champion in Chicago. Frank Beu has always found it too profitable a summer rose to discard and grows about 3000 plants each year for his retail trade, planting them after the chrysanthemum houses are emptied.

ALBANY, N. Y.

tunity for a brief call on a few of the Albany flower establishments. The Albany Cut Flower Exchange has in its present quarters an ideal wholesale place, in location, size and equipment, and Manager Thos. Tracey said business was excellent. At The Rosery there was quite a hustle on with funeral work and some very attractive and useful floral baskets with tin containers charmingly filled with Farleyense ferns and sweet peas. At H. G. Eyres' there was also evidence of good seasonable trade and a handsome window attractively dressed. Gloeckner's cozy store close to the State Capitol wore its customary inviting attire and the proprietor was right on his job.

Business was hustling at F. Danker's and the window filled with a line of plants and flowers not usual in florists' windows. Accepting Mr. Danker's invitation we took a hurried run out to his nursery and greenhouse establishment where we found a place attractively adorned with groups of evergreens outside and well filled with varied stock inside. There are two fine rose houses, each 30 x 150, one filled with Killarney and in the other we noted beds of rested and cut-back Ward and Carnot roses which are showing the effect of generous feeding, in a vigorous break of young wood. There are some ten or twelve houses altogether conveniently grouped around a commodious workroom and also that most useful adjunct of such an establishment—a big cold house in which are stored bays, boxes, azaleas and bulbs. Carnations were fine.

We did intend to visit Fred Goldring's place at Slingerlands, but Sunday trains to that noted establishment are mighty scarce and Sundays at Goldring's are an undisturbed solitude in consequence, an inconvenience which is not without its compensating advantages.

LANCASTER, PA.

In walking through the one street of Strasburg, the most magnificent specimens of geraniums, coleus, primroses, cyclamen and a few other plants were noted in the windows of almost every house, Mr. Rohrer and Mr. Herr, both being wise enough to encourage this trade by having for sale a few extra good plants, not scrubby stock grown in an out-of-the-way corner. The writer believes that there are hundreds and thousands of just such homes as these Strasburg people have that are neglected by the florists, or their trade has been killed by selling them ordinary stock that did not give satisfaction.

If the trade papers had been wise enough to print the address given by Mr. Sheldon in Philadelphia in full instead of giving it a half-inch notice, or if the S. A. F. could for once be persuaded to get such a man to address their meeting, the trade might gradually wake up to its opportunities and to the fact that good goods, good service and honesty are the business builders of this day and generation and unless we do thus wake up we will not take our place in the world to which we are entitled.

While on this subject, at the recent inauguration in this State we had from Lancaster a Lieutenant-Governor in the person of our B. F. McClain, one of the most popular men in the city. The occasion should have been one of great benefit to the trade if it had been properly worked up, but instead there was not even a ripple and flowers going to waste by the thousands. If our retail florists would take up a course such as the Sheldon or one of the others offered, all of which are excellent, such opportunities would not be overlooked, and some of our producers in the cut flower line would be better enabled to count the costs before getting in too deep.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON With the thermometer registering below the freezing point and snow and sleet making conditions in the downtown districts uncomfortable, very little business has been done by the majority of retailers. Funeral work has been the mainstay of the trade during the last few days. But with this exception business is dull and necessarily the demand is small. Several weeks of cloudy weather have shortened up the supply, so that the wholesalers have been able to demand fairly good prices. Roses are now quite short in supply, especially Russells and Hadleys. Beauties are not being called for to any great extent this week and consequently have fallen off in price a bit. Carnations have taken a brace, the supply having dropped markedly. McKinley Day found few supporters among the trade and passed away with no noticeable increase in business. It has been difficult to secure concerted action upon this holiday, but few retailers have taken kindly to it and have decided to extend their efforts to the days that have already been widely exploited. All branches of the trade are looking forward to St. Valentine's Day for increased activity.

Very little change from BUFFALO previous report except that roses have come on a trifle more in quantity. The shortage were on the shorts and mediums and these are coming in more plentifully. A fine lot of sweet peas are had also lily of the valley, tulips, daffodils, mignonnette and a fair call for these. There are plenty of carnations of all grades and the poor quality has very little outlet. Business is not brisk, though some days a slight ripple is noticeable. Social gaieties are quiet and the weather too cold for any speculative buying.

It is hard to understand CHICAGO just why the wholesaler is so much more cheerful than the retailer these days, unless it is the advanced prices. There is no increase in the number of Beauties or roses coming into the market and the supply may be said to be decidedly short. Little sunshine has appeared to help out the buds, and zero weather has been recorded frequently during the past week. Some fine Mrs. Russell roses are now seen, carried on stems from 30 to 36 inches and they compete with American Beauty in price. Mrs. Ward is about through for the present. The violet situation is still unusual. Low prices are general, yet the market was sold out on Saturday and could have used more. Downtown retailers are selling violets for 25c. per bunch of 50, fresh stock. Cattleyas remain low also; one house retails regularly for 35c. each. Carnations are in good supply and are selling much better than earlier in the year. The season is marked by the lack of large social events and the chief use of flowers is for funeral work. For gifts and small events the spring flowers are very popular. Valentine's Day is looked forward to by the trade this year as an opportunity to make up a little of earlier losses.

Spencer Sweet Peas

Our growers are and will be cutting freely for some time to come Orchid Sweet Peas (Spencers) in light and dark pink, cerise, white, shaded white and a number of other shades, unusually choice quality, splendid long, well-flowered stems.

Most everything in CINCINNATI the market is cleaning up nicely. The cut is a little larger than a week ago, but the demand is active and the average quality of stock is very high. Roses are cleaning up as fast as they come in and at times more could easily be used. The same is true of carnations. Lilies are selling well. Both callas and Rubrum lilies have a fair market. The same applies to narcissus. Violets are in a large supply, the single ones selling much better than the double. Lily of the valley and orchids meet with a fair demand. Sweet pea offerings are excellent in quality. Other offerings include jonquils, freesia, tulips, Roman hyacinths and primroses.

The severe snow storm this week has affected business somewhat but with it all continues to be in a rather satisfactory condition. The supply of roses still being in a limited quantity prices prevail about the same as last week and carnations are moving better at $30 to $40 per 1000. Bulbous stock seems to be of exceptionally good quality and clears out nicely. Cattleyas are in oversupply and the average price by the hundred is anywhere from $10 to $15, a few special blooms bringing 25c. Cypripediums and Dendrobium formosum $15 to $20 per 100. Lily of the valley is moving slowly. The storm has been holding up shipments, especially those from long distances.

Among the new PHILADELPHIA items this week are tulips, yellow, pink and white; myosotis; Acacia pubescens and forsythia. Stevia is about over but there are larger supplies of sweet alyssum and candytuft, which will in a way take its place. Sweet peas continue in excellent demand and the quality is very good, so far as can be seen from market arrivals, but we hear of some growers having had trouble with dropping buds while cutting the crop. This is said to be especially the case with the Spencers. Some think this is caused by a defect in culture—probably too dry an atmosphere. Mignonette is moving very well and while the quality remains up to standard the cut is not quite so heavy. Enough lilies and callas for all demands—with a moderate hardening in prices. We see very few Roman hyacinths but there are plenty of paper whites and freesias. Violets are holding their own nicely, and are a very fair proposition at present. The supply of cattleyas is not quite so redundant and a healthy improvement is noticeable in prices—especially in the choicer grades. The smaller lower-priced flowers get the go-by for some reason. The daffodil procession is now being led by Golden Spur, followed by Trumpet Major and others of that type. On the whole we have experienced a very good week here since our last report. Prices generally have held firm, and in some items have shown a slight advance. The rose and carnation situation remains about as last reported. Ophelia and Hadley are conspicuous by their absence. Russell and American Beauty still very scarce.

Retail trade shows a little more life this week, despite the dark, drizzly weather, which has held some lines of stock back a little, so that prices, on the whole, are well maintained. The bulb stock, especially, has been retarded, offerings of tulips, hyacinths, freesias and daffodils being rather below expectations; and general offerings in the wholesale market have been well cleaned up. Tulips, however, are appearing in much greater variety, and they as well as hyacinths are exceptionally fine. Other bulb stock, including China lilies, is becoming a prominent feature. Lilium Formosum, however, is quite plentiful, and does not move off readily. Supplies of violets are excessive, especially as they consist mostly of poor stock; though anything of fair quality is well absorbed in the shipping trade. Several varieties of orchids are offered in profusion, and prices show a corresponding weakness; while the demand for gardenias has picked up nicely, most of the daily cuttings being readily disposed of. The cut of all roses has fallen off this week, red varieties being especially scarce. The demand is holding up, and prices have accordingly stiffened. Carnations continue to bring fair prices, with very moderate offerings. A good many primroses are coming in, and there is a good call for both the cut flowers and plants. Quite a lot of azaleas, which came in too late for the holidays, are still appearing, but there is always some call for them. There has been a big demand for the last month or two for kentias and other palms and ferns, and many large orders are to be filled within the next few weeks.

Business of late has been somewhat better than any week since the first of the year. Stock is of extra good quality with roses in all varieties scarce. Carnations, too, have been somewhat scarce, but about enough of them coming in daily to supply the local wants. In sweet peas this market always has a good supply and some really fancy ones are seen daily. Violets, too, are in plenty for all demands. There are good freesias, lily of the valley, paper whites, Roman hyacinths, von sions and lilies in reasonable quantities, but the cold and dark weather all the past week curtailed the production greatly with our local growers.

Roses are very much off crop at the present time and stock such as was thrown away during the previous six months is now bringing a fair price; anything that has the semblance of a rose has a market value and the probabilities are that this condition will continue during the next four weeks. From present indications there will be no large supply of locally grown American Beauty roses until some time after the first of March and consequently retailers must be on the lookout to see that they do not get caught in taking orders for any quantity for future delivery. There is plenty of good stock of other than roses and carnations to fill all demands, such as lilacs, mignonette, freesia, narcissus, jonquils, tulips, sweet peas and violets. Sweet peas are as fine as have ever been seen here at this season of the year. Gardenias are still scarce but there are fully enough to fill all demands. Cattleyas seem to have swamped the market and can be bought very low in quantities. Violets are coming in heavier quantities daily. Large quantities of cyclamen, primroses, azaleas and cinerarias are seen in the stores.

NEW YORK NOTES.

H. E. Froment will move in the near future to larger quarters at 156 W. 28th street.

The annual dinner of the New York Florists' Club will take place at the Hotel Astor on Saturday night, March 20.

The "clearing house" or distributing station is now at 103 W. 28th street in charge of Adam Trepel and John R. Weir.

L. B. Coddington, who has been very ill with typhoid fever, has passed the critical stage and it is hoped is on the way to complete recovery.

The guarantee list for the New York show is now almost $7,000; space sold is about the same amount; program ads. over $1,500. Not so bad!

There is a rumor which seems to be well founded that there will be a new seed house in the wholesale district in 28th street in the near future.

Messrs. Reed & Keller of New York City have applied for a patent on a Combination Flower Vase and Electric Standing Floor Lamp, so constructed that fresh cut flowers can be arranged in the metal containers of the vase.

Arthur Herrington has been appointed exhibition manager of the coming flower show. It is expected that the Retail Florists' Association will play an important part in this show, taking a large block of space over which they will have complete control.

South American Sheep and Goat Manure

simply because our customers call for it more and more and for more and more of it, ever since we put 1000 tons within their reach, less than one year ago. We have just landed the Third 1000 Ton Cargo in New England and it is certainly as good or even better than the last. If South American Goat and Sheep Manure had not come up to the expectations of the growers who bought the first, or if we could not guarantee to furnish the same high grade article, which has built up for itself and for us such a splendid reputation from the very first start, we would never have had to send a ship after another 1000 tons. That's plain. We have an abundant supply for New England and it is our aim to keep this right up to the high standard you know it to be. OUR SOUTH AMERICAN SHEEP AND GOAT MANURE is a complete fertilizer, with a high percentage of Potash, Ammonia and Phosphoric Acid in it, (the little "sheepes and goatses" put it there). It is ground fine and is clean to handle, makes an ideal liquid manure, which is safe. WE GUARANTEE OUR S. A. S. & G. M. TO BE ABSOLUTELY PURE. Spring is near and plants need feeding. For Roses, Carnations, Lilies, S. A. S. & G. M. will do just what a full meal will do for a hungry man. Write us now—Give us a trial order and you too will come again.

Ferns, Palms, or any other plants, our will do for a hungry man. Write us now—Give us a trial order and you too will come again.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:

$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

This is an excellent thing for the retail florist to have constantly at hand to indicate to customers the various styles of flower pieces and prices of same, and after being used a little while becomes almost indispensable. Mr. Long has been working on this and similar specialties for many years and has introduced from time to time many desirable and helpful features.

The Thirteenth Annual Report of the Commissioners of the State Reservation at Niagara. We are indebted to Superintendent Harry K. Eckert for a copy of this interesting pamphlet showing the good work which has been accomplished in the elimination of the many eyesores that once defaced the scenery about Niagara and the progress of restoration of original natural conditions and landscape. There are fourteen full-page views. We have also received a history in detail of the State Reservation at Niagara by Charles M. Dow. This is a 200-page book of much historical interest.

BROWN ANTS.

Editor of HORTICULTURE:
Dear Sir.—Will you please ask any of your kind readers of HORTICULTURE if they know of any remedy for eradicating the small brown ants? For the past year they have been very troublesome to me.

Yours truly,

W. D.

If you are troubled with ants outdoors they can be eradicated by means of carbon bisulphide poured into holes six inches deep and a foot apart, the holes being immediately filled up. A very good remedy for ants in the greenhouse is a mixture of Paris green and sugar, adding just enough of the poison to white granulated sugar to turn it a light green color. This should be dusted lightly among the pots on and under the benches. Be careful not to put any into the pots or on a bench containing soil, as the Paris green is liable to damage the plants.

POTASH

is food for thought as well as for crops this year.

When shipments were interrupted by the war, it was estimated that there was enough Potash on hand in the United States to provide two and three per cent Potash in mixed fertilizers for this spring's trade. Some manufacturers had more than enough for these percentages.

Since then minor sources of Potash have been fully utilized, and additional shipments from the usual source have been and are still being received.

The supply is below normal, but this need not prevent farmers securing some Potash in their fertilizers, nor should it lead farmers to decide not to use fertilizers.

There is no reason to return to the out-of-date goods without Potash, although some authorities may try to "wish" them on us.

We have not used enough Potash in the past. The largest annual import of Potash was only one-seventieth of the Potash taken from the soil by our 1914 corn crop and only one-fifteenth of the Potash lost every year in drainage water.

Spring crops use from two to ten times as much Potash as Phosphoric Acid. Get as much Potash in the fertilizer as possible. A few firms are offering to furnish from four to ten per cent.

There is no substitute for Potash. It may be harder to get just now, but POTASH PAYS.

this alone, it is ice-clearing and carries all the water of condensation from the inside, and it is so constructed that almost the entire end of the bar is exposed to the air, thereby preventing decay. Only one screw, about two inches from the end, is all that is necessary to secure the bars.
For side stationary glass, wood headers
are absolutely unnecessary, thereby causing no shade. Zinc glass stops are not necessary—the gave is made with a lug to prevent the glass from slipping. Let your next house be built

If Ever There Was a Good Time To Build a Greenhouse, That Time Is Now

The first of these is the fact that the majority of the population of the United States is now living in urban areas. This is a result of the process of urbanization, which has been going on since the beginning of the 20th century. The second factor is the fact that the majority of the population of the United States is now living in the South and West. This is a result of the process of migration, which has been going on since the beginning of the 20th century. The third factor is the fact that the majority of the population of the United States is now living in the middle class. This is a result of the process of social mobility, which has been going on since the beginning of the 20th century.

The concentration of the Agrobacterium suspension was 10⁶ cells/ml (A), 10⁷ cells/ml (B), 10⁸ cells/ml (C), and 10⁹ cells/ml (D). The transformation efficiency was determined by the number of transformants per 10⁶ cells of Agrobacterium suspension. The data are the mean \pm SD of three independent experiments.

to the fact that the "new" action will be taken by the "old" men, and the wisdom of that is being brought to the fore.

It is a pity that, in 10 years, there is going to be big bad work. Nothing can stop it. Fortunes are going to be made. The men who find let in on the ground floor are going to first see their share of this prosperity.

No other man's share will be as soon as possible. Contracted for it before prices go higher.

Good, Strong Well-Established Plants in 2½-Inch Pots of the Exceedingly

VALUABLE NEW ROSES

Ophelia, Francis Scott Key and Prince E. G. d'Arenberg

OPIHELIA. No fancy rose ever introduced possesses so many excellent qualities. It is a splendid grower, a very free bloomer, and has fine stems. It sells on sight. Anticipating the large demand, we have propagated it extensively. Strong plants on own roots, 2½-in. pots, now ready $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY. This variety, raised by Mr. John Cook, is very distinct, being entirely different from any of the indoor roses grown today. Flowers are rosy red, and are unusually large and double, resembling very much a very full, double hardy garden rose. Its keeping qualities are remarkable. Strong plants on own roots, 2½-in. pots, now ready $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

PRINCE E. G. DARLBERG. This variety might well have been termed Red Killarney, as it possesses so many of the good qualities of the Killarney's. In color, the flowers are similar to Richmond, but they are much more double. Flowers have fine straight stems on all the grades—from the shortest to the longest. It has fine foliage, comes away quickly, and is even a freer bloomer than the Killarneys. Strong plants on own roots, 2½-in. pots, now ready $12.00 per 100, $90.00 per 1000.

We will be glad to quote on application, prices on all the newer and standard varieties—strong grafted plants ready in March.

F. R. PIERSON, Tarrytown, N. Y.

MATCHLESS A GREAT SUCCESS

MATCHLESS is the best and most profitable white carnation to grow, having no equal in earliness, vigor of growth and production. It is superior in size, fragrance and keeping qualities and is non-bursting. It is a continuous bloomer and is handled with ease by any grower.

Horticultural advancement

The Board of the University of Illinois contains an appropriation of $68,000 for the extension of the glass houses. This is not something that the florists of the State have made any appeal for but is wholly voluntary on the part of the authorities, which although not yet endorsed by the powers that be, indicates a most commendable public sentiment and is very gratifying to the horticultural interests. We look to see this recognition of the esthetic side of horticulture grow steadily and extend to sections where heretofore it has secured but scant attention from State authorities or institutions.

A praiseworthy proposition

There appears no good reason why the New York Florists' Club should not possess a substantial building and permanent home for the organization. Its character and standing as an institution of dignity and usefulness has been firmly established in the more than quarter century of its existence. Its membership, now approaching the five hundred mark, is distinctively strong in men of wide business repute and financial stability, in this respect far exceeding any similar organization in this country. Its ability to secure and fit up a building which shall be a credit to the great and growing industry which it represents is beyond question. As a leader and as possessing every facility and opportunity the New York organization carries a peculiar responsibility, amounting almost to a duty, in regard to its sister clubs everywhere, to set an example of stability and progress which shall furnish inspiration and incentive for wise policies which involve something more substantial and far-reaching than a mere existence from year to year. The possibilities in a property investment in New York City, such as is now contemplated, have long been recognized but it has remained until now for the sentiment to take practical form. We hope to see it carried out to a successful finish.

"The 100 p. c. crop and 35 p. c. dollar"

Instruct our colleges and experiment stations to work on the selling end for a while, and give the producing end a rest, as that has been worked overtime.
 New York. GRANT G. HITCHINGS.

Mr. Hitchings is referring to the new apple law in New York. It will probably be admitted by all that any man who will, can have the latest advice about spraying, cultivating and fertilizing promptly put before him. The producing end has been "worked overtime" because a good share of that time should have been devoted to the marketing problem. Ask any farmer today what he needs most—information about producing or how to sell his goods to better advantage. The 100 per cent. crop and the 35-cent dollar are mighty poor companions.

We clip the foregoing from The Rural New-Yorker. Substitute the word flowers for apples and "florist" for "farmer" and the application to present conditions and tendencies in the florists' business is pertinent and complete. The situation in the cut flower business is, of course, much less perplexing just now than it has been and will be again before long, but the few weeks of respite from clogged wholesale markets and attendant evils, welcome as they are, are only a temporary relief. The National Farmers' Union, which is making a special study of marketing products, says that "The economic distribution of farm products is today the world's greatest problem." In a lesser volume but, in its way, an equal degree the marketing of flowers and plants is the greatest present question before the florist trade. As HORTICULTURE has repeatedly urged, it is time to quit fussing over the situation from narrow viewpoints and get busy with the problem which confronts the trade in a broad-gauge, comprehensive way. It will occupy all the best brain in the business before we get through with it.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communication should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Repotting

As soon as the plants in the small pots become rooted, they should be shifted to the next size, or three-inch, at this time. The reason for this is that the space is too scarce or too valuable to shift the plants into pots that are larger, or 4-inch, as we do later on. Do not let the plants get pot bound, as this would be a serious matter with the young stock at this stage, although it is well to allow them to become well rooted. They should not be allowed to suffer, however, and as soon as the roots work around in the soil so that they show any sign of crowding, they should be shifted into larger pots as stated above. The pots should be clean and crooked, as the plants will remain in these longer than in the smaller pots. See that the bench that they are set on is well covered with fine ashes, and that the pots are all set straight in nice rows. This does not cost any more, and it certainly makes the finished work look much nicer. It will also be a help in keeping track of all plants, making it easy to count them. The soil for this potting can be heavier, and, if the plants are well rooted, as heavy as it comes. It should be porous, containing a sufficient amount of humus, and should be enriched with a little bonemeal, say a pot full (4") for each wheelbarrow of soil. About half this amount of soot for the same amount of soil will do the plants a great deal of good. Do not use more than this, however, as the mixture of the two would prove harmful to the roots.

Blackspot

Watch for this disease on all the young stock, and try to keep the old plants clear of it. Should you think there is the slightest danger, then spray with the ammoniacal copper carbonate mixture. This is by no means a cure, but will be a great help in keeping the spot from spreading. Avoid watering the plants in the afternoon, especially when they will not dry off well before night. The same with syringing. As soon as the houses are warm enough in the morning, syringe all the plants that are to be done, thus giving them a chance to dry off well before night. In blowing lime, do not blow it among the young plants, as this would discolor the foliage a good deal, and would do little good. Blow the lime into the air above the walks. This will fill the air of the whole house with the fine dust, which will circulate all through, and when it settles it will bring a lot of the moisture with it. Once in a while a big black spot will be found here and there. These should be picked off as soon as they are found, for the disease is liable to spread from these when the plants are syringed.

Scraping the Top of the Soil in Pots

As soon as there are any traces of green scum, the plants should be given a cleaning, using an old knife or piece of old iron for this work. In scraping the scum off the surface of the soil, care should be taken not to go down into the soil too much, to disturb the little roots that may be working around the top of the pot. Leave the surface roughened, so that the soil will not be so apt to turn green again in a very short time. This scraping will do the plants a good deal of good, and will make them dry out better as well. With the dark weather that we have had, this item alone should be worth the cost of doing the work.

Liquid Manure

The days are already noticeably longer, and with more sun that we hope to get from now on, it will be safe to allow the plants a little more liquid manure. This should be made of good cow manure if it is possible to secure this, and if not, then a good substitute will have to be used. Places that are furnished with two lines of pipe, one for clear water and one for liquid manure, will be easier to handle than the places where only one line is in use. It seems like a good big expense at first to put pipes in, but once they are installed there are few men who would go back to the old way. The time to put them in is when the houses are being built as they can be put in much cheaper at this time than after the whole house is in use, and you have to crawl through all kinds of holes to get the pipes into the trenches. In using the liquid manure be careful not to have the plants too dry, or it will damage the roots. If the plants are inclined to be dry at all, better go over them with clear water at first.

Anthemis

In general appearance plain and simple, in regard to culture and soil unpretending and, last but not least, in bloom from June until nearly frost; these are the chief attributes of the hardy anthemis. It is the simplicity of the marguerite which appeals to us; graceful flowers of golden and canary yellow, or of creamy white, borne on long wiry stems attract our attention by their abundance. The aromatic scent of the finely-cut foliage represents another characteristic feature of the bushy erect-growing types of this hardy perennial. Particularly the long flowering period of the species Anthemis tinctoria as well as its fine leaved form A. Kelwayi proves of advantage. For this reason we have been employing them rather freely in our mixed borders. Equally satisfactory effects can be obtained by using the light sulphur-yellow variety A. tinctoria pallida, shown by this week's cover illustration. The flowers of all the above mentioned hardy marguerites are acceptable for filling vases.

As strikingly handsome subjects for the rock garden we cannot overlook the low-growing mountain-species. Best known in this class is undoubtedly Anthemis Aizoon, syn. Achillea ageratifolia, a creeping form with silvery-white foliage and white flowers. A. Bibersteiniana and A. argrophylla, similar in growth to the former, bloom yellow. Anthemis cinerea, the largest flowering low species and A. montana, syn. Santolina alpina, produce white daisy-like blossoms.

All the hardy marguerites prefer a high sunny location thriving best in a rather sandy but well drained soil. They require the customary covering in winter. Plants may be raised from seed, or propagated by cuttings, or division.

Wm. S. P. R. Richard Rolfe

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

PITTSBURGH FLORISTS' AND GARDENERS' CLUB.

The 10th meeting of February 2nd was held in the big English room of the Fort Pitt Hotel with a large attendance of members.

The election of officers for the year 1915 resulted in the retention without change of the officers for 1914, viz:

Pres. and Sec. McQuinn; Vice-president, E. C. Roper; Treasurer, J. P. Langhans; Secretary, H. P. Joslin; Assistant Secretary, W. A. Cooke.

Executive Council: H. P. S. Randolph, C. H. Sanger, A. L. H. Ke.

There was a remarkably fine exhibit of roses from the E. G. Hill Co. of Richmond, Ind., and of blooming begonias from J. A. Peterson & Sons, Cincinnati, together with a number of exhibits from home growers, all of which are mentioned in detail by the judging committee as follows:

Rose Hesse, Beauty, E. G. Hill Co. A magnificent rose with long, stiff stems and crimson scented flowers. The rose decidedly the best of the year, and has been unanimously elected with an excellent record of good judging. The following qualities, first class certificate.

Rose Lady Anne Stanley, E. G. Hill Co. A bright, Maryland pink rose, full heads, fine foliage. Good stems. Truly commendable.

Rose Ophele, E. G. Hill Co. A very lovely English pink rose. One of the best and most perfect roses ever exhibited by our florists. It has been widely tried, and the behavior has been excellent. The specimens submitted for our consideration are superb; highly commended.

Begonia Mrs. J. A. Peterson (J. A. Peterson & Sons). A very deep red, splendidly flowered and promising variety as one of the best of the type. As a Christmas begonia it surpasses everything else in the way of this class of begonias. First class certificate.

Begonia Melior (Peterson). One of the finest of all the pink begonias. Superior to Cincinnati, and has given great satisfaction wherever grown; highly commended.

Begonia Glory of Cincinnati (Peterson). Very finely growing small plants; exceedingly free-flowering; highly commended.

Cyclamen persicum giganteum (Peterson). A fine white flowered specimen; cultural certificate.

Coezyne cristata (Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co.). Finely flowered specimen; cultural certificate.

Dendrobium neone (Walter James). Two finely flowered plants in 4 in. pots; cultural certificate.

Primula malacoides (T. Tyler). Primula malacoides in good bloom, and showing double flowers.

Messrs. Langhans and Burke, who were present at the Carnation Convention in Buffalo spoke warmly of the business-like character of the convention and the successful manner in which all business was handled. The decoration of the banquet hall in which carnations were the only flowers used, was spoken of as artistic and beautiful, and attention was called in particular to the keeping qualities of the carnations exhibited as being in advance of former years. It was felt that breeders should work toward fragrance and keeping qualities in carnations in order to keep the flower in its place in the estimation of the public.

In the course of the discussion on carnations it was brought out that Yellow Prince was the best of the yellows, and that it brought top-notch prices in the Chicago market, although this might be owing in part to the small quantity of yellow carnations grown.

Emil Kratt of the Standard Chemical Co. of Pittsburgh then gave a talk on Radium, and especially the influence of radio-active earth in plant growth and crop production. Radium is not a plant food. Its effect seems to be on the order of time in bringing about conditions in the soil in making the plant food therein more available for plant use. It is evident that the experimentation with radio-active earth is only in its infancy, but enough has been demonstrated to attract universal interest, and to cause the liveliest attention from all interested in horticulture.

Profs. Garner and Rose of the University of Pittsburgh were present and promised to have something of great interest to bring before the club at the April meeting.

Mid-Winter Exhibition.

The mid-winter exhibition at Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Saturday and Sunday, February 6 and 7, was a very brilliant and pleasing show, particularly notable in carnations, orchids, primroses and Lorraine begonias. Prizes were awarded in the plant classes to Mrs. J. L. Gardner, W. W. Edgar Co., Mrs. Frederick Ayer, Wm. Whitman, Weld Garden, J. T. Butterworth, E. S. Draper, Miss Cornelia Warren and others. The carnation princes of New England, S. J. Goddard, A. A. Pembroke, Strout's, Patten & Co. and John A. Nelson sat down on the prizes in that section in short order and Esty Bros. and Wm. Sim did the same with the violet prizes. A. Roper won a silver medal with Alice Coombs and Patten & Co. got honorable mention for Sunbeam carnation. Certificates of merit were given to Mrs. J. L. Gardner for Jasminum primulinum and Weld Gardens for Cymbidium seedling (C. insigne x C. Wiganianum. N. T. Kidder received honorable mention for seedling amaryllis. The fruit and vegetable displays were very creditable.

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

The next regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston will be held at Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Tuesday evening, Feb. 16, 1915, at 8 P. M. It will be Carnation and Novelty Night, and the display of flowers promises to be one of the finest in the club's history. There will be short practical talks on various phases of carnation culture by several specialists. Practically all the novelties being introduced this season, and new additional seedlings, will be on exhibition, and the meeting promises to be one of the most important yet held.

The annual club banquet will be held at the New American House March 10. Tickets will be on sale at the next Club meeting and may be had on application to any of the Club's officers or executive committee.

ALBANY FLORIST CLUB.

The monthly meeting of the Albany Florist Club was held at the Albany Cut Flower Exchange on Thursday evening, Feb. 4, about 60 members present. A long discussion took place on the flower show to be given in the Albany Historical & Art Society Hall. The date has not been decided upon as yet, but there was some talk of having it between Nov. 11 and Nov. 20. F. A. Danker reported as chairman of the committee that the Historical & Art Society would give the hall free of charge and spoke of having a competitive flower show as usual with prizes for the best exhibits. E. P. Tracey advocated doing away with competition, his idea being to have each florist take a section of this beautiful hall and decorate it to

A. A. PEMBROKE

We wanted to see the man who captured the Carnation Convention, for that is practically what Aubrey A. Pembroke of North Beverly, Mass., did. So this week we visited the carnation factory where Mr. Pembroke turns out the blooms that took thirteen firsts and eight seconds on twenty-two entries at Buffalo.

A. A. Pembroke is a quiet and unassuming man and it was rather difficult to make him talk about himself, although he was quite willing and ready to tell what he knew about the culture of carnations. Five years ago he was a private gardener who had come from England about four years before. In 1909 he rented two small houses near his present range, possessing very little capital and he frankly confessed that the first year almost made him quit, as everything seemed to go wrong. But the second year found him still at it and since then Mr. Pembroke has been very successful. He only has two houses, but 15,000 to 20,000 carnations are cut each week, which invariably secure top-notch prices. The house we saw was a Lord & Burnham structure 60 feet by 450 feet.

In Mr. Pembroke's opinion Matchless is the best variety he has ever grown and the most promising of the newest carnations still not fully tested is one of the seedlings originated by A. Roper of Tewksbury, Mass. During the last two years this carnation wizard has put up ninety vases at various shows and has won eighty-six prizes, about $600 in prize money, and scores of certificates and medals.

Mr. Pembroke grows all the latest varieties and they all seemed to be in splendid condition. We noted a splendid crop of Rosette, Matchless and Gorgeous, most of the blooms on stems four and one-half feet tall. Most of the stock is grown in the field in the summer, although Mr. Pembroke Show at Grand Central Palace next month.

The committee on proposed permanent club house reported favorably through its chairman C. H. Totty. It was stated that already bonds to the amount of $5,500 had been subscribed for by club members and the subject was optimistically discussed by several speakers. M. C. Ebel read the resolutions of condolence on the death of Charles McTaggart. T. B. DeForest reported on the arrangements being made for the San Francisco trip next August and Chas. Schenck for the dinner committee. F. R. Pierson made a very interesting report on the International Flower Show progress and said he had assurances of the active help of the Retail Florists' Association as an organization to exploit the show and induce florists to make exhibits of decorative work. Special premiums were coming in quite encouragingly, but more are still needed. The Florists' Club will have a decorated booth in the exhibition where the president and members can receive their friends. There will be a "Brooklyn Day" when the Brooklyn contingent will try to outdo the big affair of last year. The new plan of sectional judges for the exhibits worked out well and committee reports were thorough and prompt. Cottage Maid, a new carnation from Cottage Gardens was given a preliminary certificate having scored 85 points. Vote of thanks was given to each of the following. White seedling, No. 12 by Frank Duida, Farmingdale; Beacon, White Wonder, Pink De-assured us that if he could afford the space he would start his plants in the houses as soon as possible before the middle of July and keep them inside through the summer. The earlier the start and the less disturbance through transplanting the greater are the chances for increased and better production throughout the winter.

Fumigants are tabooed in this establishment. The houses are so big that fumigation would have to be done very heavily and in that case there would be a tendency to send the blooms to sleep. In Mr. Pembroke's opinion a spray once a week, after the beds have been picked off close, is the best treatment for carnations. No chemical fertilizers are used either. Sheep manure is applied to the beds about once a month. He does not believe in raised benches for carnations. He uses beds with concrete sides about 15 inches high.

The Lord & Burnham house above mentioned is a magnificent structure, even-span, in every sense a fitting example of the modern greenhouse. It is in houses such as this that Mr. Pembroke, guided by the best things in the profession of floriculture and allied sciences, produced the flowers that won the unanimous admiration of the judges and the trade at the Carnation Convention. He says it is easy to grow good stock, no matter what kind of a house, iron frame or wood—but there you are! If we keep on we will only end up by saying that it depends finally upon the man and his methods. S. L. F.

the best of his ability and for the grower and retailer to donate a certain part of their stock, and the retailers to do all the work and to open the hall to the public, so as to create a local demand for flowers. This matter was left until a future date for discussion and a committee was appointed to call on the growers and retail florists to secure their support. E. P. Tracey and F. Henkes were appointed to represent the club at the meeting of the State Federation at Ithaca. J. Allison of Albany and J. Traudt of Canajoharie were elected to membership. A proposition that the Albany Cut Flower Exchange start an employment bureau for the benefit of the Albany florists or growers who are out of business was favored by the majority of those present.

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB

The Club meeting in the Grand Opera House hall, last Monday evening, was one of the best attended and most harmonious in the history of the organization. There was plenty of enthusiasm for the work of the coming year; a splendid carnation exhibition greeted the members: Phil Kessler signalized his assumption of the management of the commissary department by furnishing an elaborate complimentary feed, for which a spontaneous vote of thanks was recorded and altogether there was abundant evidence that the coming year in the club's history is to be a very wide-awake and busy one, not the least of which will be the "International"

Neipp of Floral Hill Gardens; Siren, a seedling, by H. C. G. Swortby; Victory and Enchantress, by C. L. Doerr; Enchantress and White Enchantress by A. L. Miller. Spencer sweet peas by G. T. Schunemann, freesias by Phil F. Kessler.

The committee on permanent home for the club is constituted as follows: Frank R. Pierson, chairman; Phil F. Kessler, A. T. De la Mare, Leonard Barron, J. H. Pepper, C. H. Totty, W. A. Manda, J. K. Allen, A. L. Miller, F. H. Traendly, W. R. Cobb, Wm. Duckham, H. E. Froment, Julius Roehrs and G. E. M. Stumpp. The booth committee are C. B. Weathered, chairman; John R. Kervan, Andrew Cova, A. T. by J. A. Peterson of Cincinnati. T. P. Langhans, Fred Burki and Edward H. Blind, delegates to the annual convention of the American Carnation Society, held in Buffalo last week, reported that Pittsburgh florists took many prizes at the convention and that the affair was a big success.

The Horticultural Club of Boston devoted its February meeting to a welcome to its honorary secretary E. H. Wilson, who had just returned from a year's collecting expedition in Japan. The dinner was held at Young's Hotel and in addition to the members there were present as guests, W. H. De Graaf of Leyden, Holland; Prof. Louis C. Elson of the New England Conservatory of Music, Dr. T. J. Leary, W. C. Stickel, president of the Flower Exchange; W. P. Rich, Secretary, Mass. Horticultural Society; Col. W. W. Castle and M. H. Norton. The tables were beautifully adorned with Buddleia asiatica, one of Mr. Wilson's Chinese novelties, and a handsome hybrid Buddleia (B. asiatica × B. officinalis) raised by R. & J. Farquhar & Co., and some superb carnations from M. A. Patten.

At the regular meeting of the North Shore Horticultural Society, held February 5, in Lee's Hall, Manchester, Mass., A. Leuthy, of Roslindale, gave a very interesting talk on "Palms and Their Insect Pests." He described palm growing and selling from a financial as well as a growers' standpoint, bringing out very strongly the fact that growing palms is one thing and selling them at a profit is another. Mr. Leuthy imparted some very valuable information as regards treatment of fungous and insect pest, care of various kinds, mealy bug, etc., and gave very definite directions for the safe use of hydrocyanic acid gas. A good general discussion followed the lecture. The show committee distributed the schedule of prizes for the exhibition which is to be held Aug. 4 and 5. The next meeting will be held Feb. 19.

The Southampton Horticultural Society held its regular meeting in the Odd Fellows' hall, Southampton, N. Y., on Feb. 4th. The visitor of the evening was Andrew Kennedy, who addressed the members to some length on interesting topics. One of the chief items was a discussion on the proposed scheme of the mutual cooperation between horticultural societies. The members decided in its favor and promised their support. J. Guilfoyle was given an award of merit for two extra fine vases of carnations. An essay was read by S. R. Candler on "Schizanthus and their Culture," and there was a good discussion. It was decided to hold the annual flower show in Southampton on July 28th and 29th, 1915, list of prizes to be issued later. The next meeting of the Society will be held on Feb. 18th, when all horticulturists in Southampton on that date are welcome. S. R. CANDLER, Cor. Sec.

WASTING SURPLUS NURSERY STOCK.

Criticism at the Providence convention of the New England Nurserymen's Association of the practice of burning surplus stock was justified. Why should anything, useful or ornamental, be destroyed? Shrubs, plants and trees which are not marketed in the usual channels should be disposed of in other ways—it is an economic blunder to throw valuable stock on the brush pile.

Storekeepers do not make bonfires of stock not sold during the regular season. Why should nursery products not be treated as the left-over goods of a retail merchandising house? Surely the nurserymen should be able to place their surplus shrubbery and trees where they will be appreciated without disturbing the regular trade. The retail merchants have proved that there is no need of destroying anything that remains on their hands at the season's close.—Providence Journal.

SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers—President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif.; First Vice-President, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Second Vice-President, E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa.; Secretary and Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary, S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O.

General Business.

The mail order houses report business as rather unsatisfactory, and place the blame largely on the weather, which is doubtless just. We have had a wretched brand of weather since the first of the year, with comparatively few bright, pleasant days interspersed; and if weather prophets are to be believed, we are destined to experience something worse than has yet happened. However, we will not borrow trouble, even though prophets are abroad in the land. The business of the general trade is rather slow. Growers are reporting a fair future business, but as a rule are somewhat disappointed because orders are smaller than for the past few years. General wholesale business is at pretty much of a standstill, but this is no exception at this season of the year. When the trade becomes really busy it is generally believed that many shorts will develop, and that there will be considerable activity in a wholesale way in spot goods.

Pea Shortage.

There are more or less authentic rumors of a great shortage in the pea crop of New Zealand. Also other rumors that the government there intends to lay an embargo on the export of legumes. The purpose evidently is to prevent the export of anything that will aid the foreign food supplies. If this statement proves to be correct, many Canadian and some American houses will be on the short side on peas. In this connection, it is known that an embargo on exports of seeds from France has been laid by the French government. It is not definitely known whether the embargo applies to all seeds, but a reasonable supposition would be that it does not apply to flower seeds, or such other seeds as can not be used as edibles. Advices by mail from the French seed houses are anxiously awaited by the trade in this country.

Seed Trade Convention.

The Convention of the American Seed Trade Association we are advised is to be held in San Francisco, June 22 next. Already many seedsmen are making plans to attend. One plan discussed now is for a number to meet in Chicago about a week prior to the Convention and go via the Santa Fe, which will enable them to visit the Grand Canyon. Others want to have their tickets read via San Diego. It is said that the people of San Diego have an exhibition of their own which, while not nearly as extensive as the Panama-Pacific Exhibition at San Francisco, has been described as quite as unique and beautiful. It is understood that President Lester

Morse will make arrangements at the hotels for all who contemplate attending the convention; although it will be necessary to advise him in advance of the reservations wanted, and the price the visitor is willing to pay.

Future Beans and Peas.

Most growers of peas and beans have found an eager and ready demand for future beans, but the orders for peas have been on the whole rather unsatisfactory both from seedsmen and canners. The prices at which the so-called canners' varieties are offered by the growers are little, if any, above cost, and it would seem to us an exceedingly unwise course for those who are going to require seed not to place their orders now. A new feature has developed which will probably make the seed growers more independent, and that is the export demand for dried peas. We are advised that more than one hundred thousand bushels of dried peas have been shipped from Wisconsin within the last three months, and the shipments continue. It is believed that before the new crop of pea seed is harvested, there will be nothing left in the way of dried peas in Wisconsin except such varieties as are being carried for seed purposes, and many varieties ordinarily grown for seed purposes will be disposed of.

At the present time growers can get more for their peas for export than the prices they are quoting to canners, and there is already some talk among the larger growers of cancelling all quotations on future canners' varieties because of the present and prospective demand for export. This would look like good business on the part of the growers, and thus canners who have not yet bought their future requirements may have to pay a heavy premium for their procrastination, although the lesson would be lost because the first year that seed can be bought at contract prices after harvest will make them forget any number of years they have had to pay heavy premiums.

Canners' Convention.

The Canners' Convention which has been held in New York the past week has drawn a very large attendance.

The exhibition of canning machinery at the Grand Central Palace was quite a revelation to thousands who visited the exhibition. The general public was not admitted. Only those receiving tickets which were issued to the wholesale grocers and by them distributed among their retail customers, who in turn later distributed them among their customers, were admitted. The local seed trade about New York received complimentary tickets from the president of the Canning Machinery & Supplies Association, W. C. Langbridge. The seed trade has been honored by his election to the presidency, which he has held for the past two years.

The novelty of the exhibits was generally appreciated by the trade, the chief novelty being an exhibition of moving pictures showing the canning of fruits, vegetables and tuna fish. The pictures started, in the case of the fruits, showing peaches on the trees; showing them being picked, and all the various processes up to the finished product ready to go on the shelves of the retail grocer. It was the same with the asparagus, the peas and the tuna. The latter is one of the most interesting pictures, showing the method of catching the fish which seemed to be very hungry for no sooner was a line thrown in the water than a fish was hooked. These pictures proved one of the most interesting features of the exhibition, and the room where they were shown was crowded every afternoon.

they just came, and usually I had no use for them. I would just as soon have bought corn, which I could use then. Do not blame the recipients of the seeds, blame the senders. It is not the clamor of the populace which keeps up the distribution.

I have, to be sure, secured from the Department of Agriculture seeds and samples, such as the dashoon, Tangier pea, and so forth, of new plants the Department was testing out for their value in various parts of the country, to try under my conditions here, and have reported in regard to them; but that, I take it, is a different matter.

Seeds With a Pedigree

For generations James Carter & Co. have used painstaking English methods in selecting and testing their seeds. The Carter trial and testing grounds at Raynes Park have become celebrated in Great Britain.

This explains the remarkable record of Carters seeds in American Gardens. These "Seeds with a Pedigree" can now be purchased in this country. A complete stock is carried in Boston and prompt service is guaranteed.

If you did not have the 1915 Carter Catalog, American Edition, write for it today.

Of Interest to Retail FloristsTHOS. F. GALVIN, INC., IN NEW QUARTERS.

The show place of Boston just now is the new downtown store of Thos. F. Galvin. This long established firm, for almost three score years and ten located on Tremont street, has found a new home on Park street, but a few steps from their former location. The new store has all of the best features of the most modern and up-to-date florists' shops in the country and in addition possesses several distinctive Galvin features, one of which, a circular enclosed fountain, will be in constant operation in the centre of the semi-circular entrance to the store. The base of the fountain is done in mosaics and vari-colored tiles, the whole surrounded by rare and beautiful flowering plants. The store itself is eighty-five feet long and forty-five feet wide, a combination of the two stores formerly located there. The increased space in the new shop has also permitted of the installation of one of the largest retail refrigerating outfits for flowers in the country.

The decorative scheme within the store is very pleasing; plants, Italian seats, vases and marble statuary arranged attractively throughout the shop make it a veritable indoor garden. The general color plan, a dull gray or ivory-white, is different from the conventional white or green of the ordinary flower store and is pleasing to the eye.

The selling force of the firm has been enlarged to take care of the increasing number of patrons attracted to the new shop. No pains have been spared to give its old and new customers the highest grade of service.

The designer of the fountain and store throughout was G. Henri Desmond.

NEWS NOTES.

Pittsfield, Mass.—The Flower Shop observed its fifth anniversary on February 6, by a special decoration of the store and the distribution of souvenirs to visitors, many of whom called to present congratulations to Manager Stanley Barnes.

Columbus, O.—One of the handsomest flower stores between New York and Chicago, is the claim made for the establishment of T. J. Ludwig. The building is wholly new, white stone front and concrete floors. The fixtures are somewhat on the mission order. For the display of cut flowers there is an inclosed case with a 14-foot ice box, which will hold 1,800 pounds of ice. A work table with glass casing at top for ribbon display, and two large cases, inclosed, for fancy baskets, are other features of the fixtures. The store contains 139 feet of casing, 90 feet of which are inclosed. A cozy corner with writing desk and other conveniences made to match the fixtures, will be at the service of the public. A formal opening will soon take place. Mr. Ludwig was formerly manager of the cut flower department of Livingston Seed Company, Columbus, and severs a connection of twenty-five years to embark in business on his own account. He is still quite a young man.

A USEFUL DEVICE FOR FLORISTS.

George Hart's patent staple which is advertised on another page of this paper is catching the attention of the florist trade as a serviceable flower-saving, time-saving device. The price is about one-third of what other contrivances for the same purpose have cost. Either cut flowers, plants or floral pieces may be safely fastened in cardboard boxes for transportation to any distance by the use of this clever little staple.

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery As-

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

J. F. Thomas is no longer connected with the Carter's Tested Seed Co.

John Lynch, formerly assistant manager of the Co-operative Market, is now assistant salesman for J. M. Cohen, who sells the products of several growers.

Wm. Finlay, at one time salesman for Thos. Roland at the Co-operative Market, is now salesman for several other growers and has resigned his position with the above firm.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston will hold its annual carnation and novelty night Feb. 16. Several specialists are expected to deliver short talks on the different phases of carnation culture, especially those pertaining to the business end of the industry.

Joseph Margolis, of H. M. Robinson & Co., was very well pleased with the Carnation Convention at Buffalo and is favorably impressed with the quality of the new varieties of carnations. Matchless, especially, appeals to him as the best carnation for the wholesaler who ships long distances.

Last Saturday held a very pleasant surprise for the salesmen in the markets. The day started out with cloudy, dull weather and poor prospects for business. Up to four o'clock it looked as if thousands of blooms were going to be left over Sunday. Then the retailers who had held off all day came in with a rush and within an hour the stalls were cleaned out. The trade anticipates lively buying for St. Valentine's Day.

Henry Penn is now writing a series of articles for HORTICULTURE bearing on the florist trade from a business standpoint. Mr. Penn is well qualified to give sound and wholesale advice on every part of the retail stage of the industry and coming from this keen business man, the articles ought to be of value to every young, (and old), florist in the country. His article on advertising in HORTICULTURE, Feb. 6, is well worth reading.

The coming exhibition of the American Rose Society promises to be one of the big events of the season. Many additional special prizes are being secured, which ought to make competition in the various classes lively and interesting. The mid-winter show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society last Saturday was a big success, much interest being taken in the exhibits by the general public. Primulas were the big feature of the show.

PITTSBURGH.

The florists' shops are a riot of gay colors this week in deference to St. Valentine. Randolph & McClements, who are notable for elegance of design rather than the ornate, have departed somewhat from the old order of things and their window display is outlined with a deep floral border. The recess behind is partially separated from the storeroom proper by graceful draperies of pink tulle. In the center a large dressing table, similarly festooned, and a large floral heart thereon shot with a gilded Cupid's dart. Surrounding it were dainty little Dresden boxes, while piled high carelessly here and there on the floor were large oblong boxes in all the ribbon bedecked colors of the rainbow.

On the contrary, the window of Mrs. A. E. Williams in downtown Penn avenue, was suggestive of daintiness only rather than gaiety. Here, too, boxes were a feature of the decorative scheme, but they were heart-shaped in the delicate pastel shades tied with broad satin ribbon caught with a single large flower of contrasting shade.

Ray J. Dasebach also had a most effective window. The centerpiece was formed of a large easel surmounted by a gorgeous red floral heart and surrounding were charming square-shaped novelty boxes. A Japanese effect was obtained by branches of peach blossoms in the background.

The A. W. Smith Company in the Keenan Building expect to equal, if not surpass their last year's sale of violets, 150,000 strong. W. J. Smith is introducing a new early-blooming original strain of snapdragon in pink and white. It is also very graceful, and is especially adapted for baskets. These flowers have been blooming since Christmas at their greenhouse at Canfield, Ohio.

Owing to the water-proofing system not being installed, work was somewhat delayed last week on the new building of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Company. Even so, however, the members are anticipating moving in time for the Easter trade, as, on the whole, the weather conditions have been favorable for their work.

The wholesale houses report a shortage of roses and carnations, the few naturally going at "stiff" prices. There is a plentiful supply of all bulb stock. The small demand for violets is marked this season.

ALBANY.

The Albany Cut Flower Exchange is receiving some extra fine Hadley, Double Killarney, Killarney Queen roses, as well as general cut flower stock which is being moved at satisfactory prices.

Frank Brearer, of Whittle Bros., who has been with that concern for the past twenty-five years, has been appointed by Governor Whitman to the position of gardener at the Governor's mansion. He will take up his duties about the first of March, at which time John Tracey, the present gardener, will retire.

The new begonia Mrs. J. A. Peterson attracted much attention in the section devoted to miscellaneous exhibits at the Buffalo carnation exhibition. This variety is the result of a cross between Begonias Glory of Cincinnati and Mellor.

CHICAGO.

The "loop" florists have used the local papers extensively for promoting business the past week and low prices are being quoted.

Geo. Weinhoeber had a very effective window display to attract valentine seekers. It was an immense red heart in outline, suspended from the ceiling and red cupids dangling in and about it.

Judging from the orders now on the books for St. Valentine's Day, O. W. Freese believes that it will rank fourth among the florists' holidays, having Christmas, Easter and Memorial Day only to surpass it.

In spite of rain and wind the smoker given by the Chicago Florists' Club last week drew a fair proportion of the membership from their homes. Another open meeting with another novelty show will take place on March 4th.

The financial affairs of the H. A. Fisher Co. of Kalamazoo have had an airing in the Chicago courts, but no definite conclusions have been arrived at as yet. George Fisher, a brother, acts as buyer here for the Kalamazoo store.

At one of the large mid-winter luncheons given at the La Salle Hotel, Feb. 8th, the tables were decorated with spring flowers from the Pochlmann conservatories. The center table had a large plaque of jonquils and pussy willows and all the others were strewn with flowers.

Florists often find occasion to quote the old saying that "It's an ill wind that does not blow somebody good." This time it is the growers of bulbous stock. The price is holding up well and quantities are being sold that might be left were not roses and carnations so scarce.

Gladioli from Florida came into the wholesale stores in fine condition a week ago and sold at once for $1.00 and $1.50 per doz. A following shipment appears to have been chilled and are not keeping well. This is the first time southern gladioli have been offered and the test is being made by a northern grower of that flower.

F. J. Benthey is now found at the Kennicott Bros.' wholesale store, where he is disposing of the stock of the Newcastle, Ind., plant. Mr. Benthey says that they are greatly pleased with the Ophelia rose and will plant it more extensively next year. At present they are using it more for cuttings than for blooming purposes.

Plant Notes.

Potted spring flowers are very popular at this time and the cold wintry weather has increased the demand for them. The early tulips such as Proserpine, are about through, as is also Montresor considered here the best early yellow. Le Mattalas, one of the earliest pink varieties for forcing has not been altogether satisfactory this season, seeming to lack substance. In preparation for Lincoln's birthday and St. Valentine's Day, a fine lot of bright colored tulips in pans were offered. Belle Alliance being the leading scarlet, Prosperity, one of the newer and promising pinks, Montresor in single yellow and Couronne d'Or in double yellow, making a good collection. Many new hyacinths have been tested each year by local growers, but so far few have proven valuable. Lady Derby is, perhaps, the most promising of the pink hyacinths, La Innocence is still the standby in early white and Queen of the Blues is still grown successfully for that color. Blue Hative, a comparatively new one is the earliest blue hyacinth grown here.

Waltham, Mass.—Henry J. Taubert, who opened a flower store in the Waltham Theatre building some months ago, has closed the store.

NEWS NOTES.

Silverdale, Pa.—George K. Kester has sold his greenhouse business to J. Frank Sherm.

Danvers, Mass.—Charles F. Hurlburt, of Beverly, has bought the greenhouse property of Ralph Wheelright on River street and takes possession at once.

Amherst.—The Amherst College department of botany has accepted a gift from Mrs. Addison Brown, of New York, of a collection of several thousand botanical specimens. The collection, made by her husband, is one of the largest private collections in the country.

Rochester, N. Y.—Charles H. Vick has been tendered the position of superintendent of the horticultural department of the Rochester Industrial Exposition, which it is proposed to give more than usual prominence to, this year. The exposition grounds are near the heart of Rochester and the affair is backed by the city. 20,000 sq. ft. of space has been placed at the disposal of the horticultural department.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON This last week has been one of many pleasant surprises for all branches of the local trade. Last Saturday ended with a thorough clean-up of all classes and kinds of stock and this week, up to the present writing has seen the most active business so far this season. This morning, Thursday, finds trade rather quiet, but wholesalers and salesmen are cheerfully optimistic and expect good buying for St. Valentine's Day. Stock is plentiful, thus allowing but little increase in prices. Up to this week cuts from the greenhouses have been small, the reason being very apparent when we state that there were only four days of sun during the whole month of January. The last few days have brought a decided change in the weather and stock is coming in in normal quantities, especially freesias, which are to be seen everywhere. Stevia, which ordinarily is cleaned out by the first of February, is still holding out in the houses of a number of local growers. Beauties are fetching better prices and the demand for good roses is on the increase, especially because of the coming holiday. Carnations of the kind that captured the prizes at Buffalo, are reaching very good figures, in some cases $6 and $7 per 100, but these figures are exceptional and represent only a select few of the choicest product. Gardenias and cattleyas are not so much in demand and only average prices are being realized for them. Foliage plants are selling very well, displacing in a measure in favor the flowering azaleas and begonias that are in such great demand in mid-winter.

CHICAGO Business continues steadily, though slowly to improve as the month advances. Less is heard of financial depression and buyers are more ready to buy now at a fair price than they were a few weeks ago when flowers were so cheap. The short supply of roses continues and will for some time, the growers say, but the counters are so filled with all kinds of bulbous stock that their scarcity is not felt keenly. Of course the buyer has to get his flowers at higher prices but the stock is of such a high quality that few complaints are heard. Orchids, rated as costly flowers are having a new experience this season, as week after week they are used as leaders and retailed at wholesale price. Carnations are more scarce this week, but it is quite possible that growers are holding back for extra demand later in the week. American Beauties are not only scarce but poor in quality, the color being decidedly off on most of the stock. Some fine smilax is coming into the stores and much of it is in bloom. Sweet peas and violets are selling well and there is a good supply of each.

CINCINNATI On Tuesday of this week Cincinnati had the first regular sunshine in a month's time. This state of the weather is to a very large extent probably the cause of the shortage of stock in the market. Practically all receipts are selling up quickly each day and of some flowers more could be used if they were available. The rose and carnation supplies, at the time of this writing, are short of actual requirements and a part of the usual demand for these is being satisfied by turning to bulbous stock and other lines. Lilies are selling as fast as they come in, while callas have a pretty fair market. Sweet peas are in a good supply and sell well. Lily of the valley and single violets are moving nicely while double violets and orchids sell rather slowly. Dutch hyacinths have been added to the list of bulbous stock. Other offerings are baby primrose, wallflower and forget-me-not.

NEW YORK The steady conditions which have prevailed in the flower trade for the past two weeks show signs of collapsing before long. Crops are again coming on under the influence of bright sunny weather and it will require a lively Valentine's Day demand to hold values up to the normal plane. Lily of the valley has been decidedly weak for some days past and all bulbous stock is tending downward although it is really very fine as to quality and tulips are seen in brilliant and tempting variety. Orchids are surprisingly low, not because of their abundance but for some unexplained reason. Violets are particularly good. Roses in all varieties, new and old are right up to sterling quality. Acacia pubescens is in now and among the interesting uncommon things, Daphne odorata is a taking specialty at John Young's.

PHILADELPHIA Taking into consideration what the trade has been up against all through this season, last week was on the whole one of the best we have had so far. While the prices were not as good as this time a year ago, still they held their own with the improvement noted the past few weeks, and in some cases firmed up considerably. Not nearly as many carnations. Crops seem to have let up a little with all the growers. But there were more roses—except American Beauty. The latter still continue as scarce as ever. A few more Russells were in evidence, and some nice Hadley and Ophelia are again to be seen. The recent dark weather seems to have affected the sweet pea crop a little. There are fewer of these arriving but the quality is fine. Lily of the valley is a little bit sluggish. Violets pretty good stock and moving all right. Not so many cattleyas and demand rather better. Plenty of daffodils, paper whites, freesia, tulips and other spring items—all going well at moderate prices. There does not seem to be much advance booking for St. Valentine's Day at this writing, but the trade seems quite hopeful and is putting its best foot forward. There are some fine retail window displays. That of Pennock Bros. is especially good.

SAN FRANCISCO There is some complaint among retailers, who say that decorative work for the pre-Lenten social affairs is of a less expensive nature than usual. A good deal of stock is being used, however, and with some lines rather scarce, prices are fairly maintained. Shipments of violets east for the Valentine trade are increasing rapidly but fall short of last year; while some very nice shipments of roses are going to Portland, Seattle, etc. Spring flowers have responded quickly to a few days of good weather, and prices are dropping, with liberal offerings of daffodils, freesias, China lilies, hyacinths and narcissus; though some of the stock shows the effect of too much rain. Tulips are still rather scarce, but there is a fine crop coming on. Lilies and lily of the valley are both abundant. Quite a lot of flowering peach, quince and almond blossoms have been offered. The first cinerarias of the season are shown this week and have received considerable attention. Sweet peas are still very scarce. A few early anemones have also appeared. Cattleyas are over-abundant, and a sharp break in prices is feared. Phalaenopsis also is in good supply, but very fine, and cleans up fairly well. There is still a good cut of gardenias, which are very well received. Roses are very scarce just now, though a week of clear weather would bring them out in abundance. It is hard to get enough Cecil Bruners, and Beauties also are much sought after. Carnations remain quite firm, with moderate offerings. Violets are much better in quality but the supply is excessive.

The cut flower market ST. LOUIS was short all of the last week and the commission men had little trouble in disposing of their stock at good prices. Trade among the retailers was good. All light colored stock cleaned up each morning. Lent and the coming on of large crops should change the situation greatly in about another week. Prices obtained for some of the stock was "sky high," especially so in carnations and roses. Of other flowers there were enough for the demand. Cattleyas are in slow demand. There is plenty of good smilax, asparagus and other greens.

WASHINGTON Although there is a plentiful supply of bulbous stock, sweet peas, violets and other flowers, it appears that the present serious shortage of roses and carnations is creating no little inconvenience in the stores. This, however, is declared to be largely a question of salesmanship; whether, when these flowers are demanded, an effort is made to sell other varieties instead. It is said that gardenias and lily of the valley are the only flowers holding their prices; the prices on the roses and carnations are but slightly higher than they have been, but those of other classes are very low. Some extra fine tulips are now to be had and these are in fair demand.

John M. Hunter of Englewood, N. J., is in Darlington, S. C., recuperating from a severe nervous attack. He is evidently enjoying himself, for Charlie Millang, who is one of his warm friends, has been eating quail from South Carolina of late. On his return Mr. Hunter will make a trip to California where his son-in-law, Chas. Rice is doing landscape work. In the meantime business is being pushed along by young Mr. Hunter at Englewood. J. M. Hunter is a past president of the Gardeners' Association and has many friends who wish him a speedy restoration to health.

WASHINGTON.

Adolphus Gude is recovering from a bad scalding received while endeavoring to blow out a section of a boiler at the Anacostia houses.

Bernard J. McCabe, brother of M. J. McCabe, of the Centre Market, passed away last week at the United States Soldiers' Home in this city.

William F. Gude has been appointed chairman of the membership committee of the Washington Chamber of Commerce. Adolph Gude has been chosen to serve on the retail trade committee as has Edward S. Schmid.

J. H. Small & Sons furnished one of the handsomest and most unique decorations of the season at the Hotel Willard on the occasion of the ball and bazaar for the benefit of French artists in the battle lines abroad. The whole scene was made up to represent a Parisian thoroughfare lined on either side with flower and other shops. During the evening flower girls sold boutonnieres for the benefit of the cause.

The first home garden club to be organized in the public schools of this city has been formed at the Brookland school. Back of this movement is the Parent-Teachers' Association of that school. The object of the club is to stimulate interest in both flower and vegetable gardens in the homes as well as the schools of the city and to increase the love for flowers. A show is to be held next fall and suitable prizes offered to the budding florists.

The National Lime Manufacturers' Association voted to exploit a substitute for potash essential to plant growth, at the closing session of their convention in this city. The substitute is lime treated with chlorine. J. J. Porter, of Hagerstown, Md., is the discoverer of this new process. He proposes to treat the soil with the preparation in such manner as to liberate properties necessary for plant growth, and so taken with the scheme are the manufacturers that they voted $18,000 to give it publicity.

New York—The Greek-American Florists' Association will hold their annual ball at Terrace Garden, on Thursday night, February 25. C. Sakdos is chairman of the committee of arrangements.

Anyone desiring to join the New York party to the S. A. F. Convention in San Francisco, next August can now book for the trip with T. B. DeForest, care Lord & Burnham Company, N. Y., who is chairman of the transportation committee. Other members of the committee are C. W. Scott, R. J. Irwin, Jos. Fenrich, John Donaldson, J. Miesem and Jos A. Manda.

PACIFIC COAST NOTES.

K. Tsubaki, a Japanese florist of Los Angeles, has sold out to T. Kawato.

Josephus Rural shop on Grant Avenue is making quite a hit with a wide line of very original Valentine novelties.

The State of Pennsylvania has increased the appropriation for its building at the Exposition, and is reconstructing its gardens.

Sebastian Simon, a florist of 1314 Third Avenue, Los Angeles, has just returned from the war zone where he has been since June. Mr. Simon is a native of Alsace, and was at Strasbourg when the war broke out, remaining in the district to aid in gathering the crops.

The third large shipment from Holland for the Panama-Pacific Exposition arrived this week, consisting of eleven carloads of rhododendrons, clipped conifers and bulbs, which will complete the most important horticultural exhibit ever made by Holland outside its own borders.

The Ways and Means Committee of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, met on the evening of Feb. 4 to look over designs for the souvenir program for the S. A. F. convention, but did not make any final selection. The regular monthly meeting of the Society will be held the coming Saturday.

The MacRorie-McLaren Company is still busy with Exposition work. A lot of mammoth tree ferns planted around the Australia building are coming out nicely since the rain, and a large amount of similar stock is being planted in the Hawaiian section. This company is carrying out a large planting of miscellaneous material around the Australia building, consisting entirely of plants native to Australasia.

Richard Groves, who for fourteen years was proprietor of the Park Floral Company, at 1438 Haight street, San Francisco, which he sold out recently, was struck and almost instantly killed by a Southern Pacific train at San Leandro on the night of Jan. 29. He was 43 years of age. At the time of his death he was engaged in horticultural experiments with his brother, F. R. Groves, of 5500 E. Fourteenth street, Oakland.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

Our good friend Thomas B. Meehan is a very busy man these days. Besides being the head of one of the oldest nurseries, he is also the guiding spirit in several important committees of the American Association of Nurserymen. He is also secretary of the Nurserymen's Protective Association, and on the executive committee and the legislative committee of the Pennsylvania Nurserymen's Association. In addition to all this the Florists' Club of Philadelphia has recently had the nerve to appoint him on the institute committee for the celebration March 5th and 6th, next.

Lord, we are both of us too old now to shoulder a musket. But just think of the insanity of it. Suppose you and I at opposite sides of a trench and told to shoot each other. There would be two good men wiped off the map — and the world that much worse off and without any reason." "No," says Paul, "you're wrong there. There would only be one less Scotsman." "Is that so! How do you make that out?" "Why, donner blitzen, I'd shoot first, of course!" Ouch. G. C. W.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

There are almost a thousand named varieties of sweet peas.

In 1854 there was not a single flower store in New York City.

The first greenhouse in America was built in New York in 1764.

Cypress wood has been known to endure for more than 1000 years.

Clean sand is one of the most important requisites for propagation.

The first American exhibition of the chrysanthemum was held in Boston.

Small and frequent shifts lead to freer growth in young rose plants than one shift to large pots.

Begonias were named after M. Begon, governor of San Domingo, about 200 years ago.

South American Sheep and Goat Manure

We have just landed the Third 1000 Ton Cargo in New England and it is certainly as good or even better than the last. If South American Goat and Sheep Manure had not come up to the expectations of the growers who bought the first, or if we could not guarantee to furnish the same high grade article, which has built up for itself and for us such a splendid reputation from the very first start, we would never have had to send a ship after another 1000 tons. That's plain. We have an abundant supply for New England and it is our aim to keep this right up to the high standard you know it to be. It is ground fine and is clean to handle, makes an ideal liquid manure, which is safe. WE GUARANTEE OUR S. A. S. & G. M. TO BE ABSOLUTELY PURE. Spring is near and plants need feeding. For Roses, Carnations, Lilies, Ferns, Palms, or any other plants, our S. A. S. & G. M. will do just what a full meal will do for a hungry man.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$1.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

During Farmers' Week at the College, two days, March 16 and 17, will be entirely devoted to floriculture. On these dates several prominent floricultural men will speak. In connection with this series of lectures a Spring Flower Show, occupying the entire first floor of French Hall, will be held.

The Short Course in floriculture has been in progress since the first week in January. Fifteen students are enrolled, the registration having been limited to this number in order that more personal supervision might be given and more efficient work done. Several observation trips to commercial greenhouses are included in the course.

Two seminars are being given this semester for the regular college students; one in Commercial Floriculture conducted by Prof. Nehrling and one in Plant Materials for Garden Work by Mr. Thurston.

NEWS NOTES.

Worcester, Mass.—The market gardeners of Worcester county have joined forces to fight the middlemen, wholesalers and commission merchants, and have started their attempt to place products directly in the hands of the retailer or the consumer. The gardeners have incorporated themselves into a co-operative organization with a capital of $10,000 for this purpose.

Rumson, N. J.—George R. Kohn, who for years had been employed in the Borden greenhouse, has taken a position with Bertram H. Borden and is now in charge of the Borden greenhouses on the B. H. Borden property, which was recently bought from the Cornelius N. Bliss estate. Many large ornamental plants that are owned by Bertram H. Borden are being moved from the large greenhouse on the Howard Borden property to Mr. Borden's greenhouses on the former Bliss property.

Paint Without Oil

Remarkable Discovery That Cuts Down the Cost of Paint Seventy-Five Per Cent

A Free Trial Package is Mailed to Everyone Who Writes.

A. L. Rice, a prominent manufacturer of Adams, N. Y., has discovered a process of making a new kind of paint without the use of oil. He calls it Powderpaint. It comes in the form of a dry powder and all that is required is cold water to make a paint weather proof, fire proof and is durable as oil paint. It adheres to any surface, wood, stone or brick, spreads and looks like oil paint and costs about one-fourth as much.

Write to Mr. A. L. Rice, Manufacturer, 288 North St., Adams, N. Y., and he will send you a free trial package, also color card and full information showing you how you can save a good many dollars. Write today.

Just think back and you will recall that year after year, the owners of Lord & Burnham houses, the country over, have repeatedly walked away with the show winnings.

It takes the best growers to win the prizes; so it certainly looks as if the best growers buy Lord & Burnham houses.

All of which would seem to back up all our claims for the superiority of our houses.

Think it over, and when you are ready to talk building, say when and where, and we'll be there. Our catalog you are welcome to.

Our New Rose Mrs. Moorfield Storey

Has a strong upright growth, the wood being very stout and smooth, with large handsome dark green foliage, practically mildew or black-spot proof. The flowers, which are freely produced, are of good size and substance with abundant petals, opening freely. The color is a shell pink deepening toward the centre with the large smooth petals tipped deep rose.

It will be a fine, yet distinct, companion for the Mrs. Charles Russell rose.

CYPRIPEDIUMS

Cypripediums constitute one of the most satisfactory genera among the great family of orchids. They are of comparatively easy culture, for the most part free flowering and the flowers have great lasting qualities either cut or left on the plant. For the commercial grower there is in my estimation no better variety than the old and reliable C. insigne in its various forms. C. villosum and C. Boxalli are other good free-flowering species. I have about two dozen plants of C. insigne which for over ten years have annually produced in the neighborhood of 400 flowers—this winter over 450; one plant alone once bore 37 flowers. There are few other cypripediums that will do that. C. villosum and C. Boxalli are occasionally very free flowering, but I find when a plant of these goes to extremes one season it will not flower nearly so good for several seasons thereafter. Once I had a plant of C. villosum in a 12 inch pot produce 65 flowers, the most I have ever had on one plant of any variety.

Cypripedium Spicerianum is good, but too short in stem, but united with the foregoing species it has given us hybrids of first-class quality in their various combinations. The many forms of C. Leeatum, C. Lathamianum, C. aurea, etc., are all good in color and free flowering. This last point is all-important to the commercial grower who grows for the wholesale market or his own retail trade. Most of the fancy, choice cypripediums one finds in private collections are too shy-blooming and slow-growing to be profitable, and, moreover, the difference in price between good free-flowering cypripediums and the fancy varieties is very great when one comes to buying plants and very small when one comes to sell the flowers.

The best time for repotting cypripediums is soon after they get through flowering. Small plants can be shifted into pots about two sizes larger, say from a 4 or 5 inch to 6 or 7 inch, etc. Specimens can go in pots as large as 12 inch. Cypripediums, like all other orchids, dislike root disturbance and should therefore not be molested more than is absolutely necessary. By giving them a pot at least two sizes larger and by using a good lasting compost, repotting will only be necessary at long intervals. A C. insigne will give a good crop of flowers annually for six and even eight years after being once potted. Where it is desired to increase the stock, the plants should be divided before repotting and each piece potted separately in not too large a pot. Careful potting is essential. While holding the plant in one hand, spread out the roots carefully with the other and fill in between them to within a few inches of the rim with broken potsherds, then fill up the remaining space with a compost consisting of osmunda fibre two parts, good fibrous loam one part and some old cow manure, about half as much as of loam. For very large pots the depth of compost can be accordingly more, but should never be more than one-third the depth of the pot. Too much compost will prove fatal, because it will hold the moisture too long.

The compost must be open enough to let the water run through quickly. This compost will suit all such free-growing varieties as C. insigne, C. villosum, etc. For the choicer varieties and especially those with mottled leaves more of the osmunda fibre is used and less loam; here the manure can be left out entirely or used only sparingly. After repotting the plants must be watered sparingly for several weeks, but may be syringed freely and the surroundings kept moist by frequent damping down of the floors and between the pots. Plants that have only been shifted into larger pots will re-establish themselves much quicker than those which were cut up. Choice varieties of which stock is scarce are best grown in shallow pans suspended from the roof of a warm house and the addition of a little live sphagnum moss to the compost recommended for the warm growing section will be of great benefit to them.

Cypripediums can be grown out-doors during summer to good advantage either in lath-covered frames or under tall trees, but one must be able to get at them with the hose easily as they will dry out much quicker out doors than they would in a greenhouse. Frequent syringing will keep away insect pests especially thrips, which sometimes become very troublesome out-doors. Established plants of cypripediums need a good supply of water at the roots at all seasons of the year and up to the time the flowers begin to open a weekly application of weak liquid manure will be of great benefit to them. For this purpose nothing beats the old cow manure if it can be had. Put a pailful into a 50 gal. barrel of water and of this stock solution use about one quart to ten quarts of clear water.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil." L. P.

Dahlias

Dahlias can now be started in deep boxes or in a bench where there is a night temperature of about 60 degrees. They may be placed close together and covered with soil, and if kept moderately moist they will soon throw up a fine growth. When the shoots have reached a height of about 4 inches they can be taken off and potted in a propagating bench with bottom heat of 60 degrees, and atmosphere about 5 degrees less. Give care in shading and necessary watering.

Lily of the Valley

For cut flower purposes a fresh batch of pups should be planted in the cases once a week. They should flower within three weeks now. It is too early yet to start plants for Easter unless they are brought along in a moderate cool house. Six weeks in a temperature of 50 degrees will flower lily of the valley now, or four weeks in 40 degrees more heat. This refers to plants in pots which do not now need to be drawn up in the dark, but can go to the light at once. Be very careful when watering not to wet the bells; the dryer they are kept the better. When the bells are fully out they can be cut for use with care, and then them.

Calanthes

Now is the proper time to start the bulbs for mid-winter flowering of calanthes. A good way is to place them in a flat with some moss on the bottom. On this they can be arranged close together. Fill in and cover with soil to the top of the bulb. Set in a propagating bench where there is a temperature of from 65 to 70 degrees at night and on a bench where they can have a vigorous bottom heat. Be very careful in watering until they are well started; they should only be kept moderately moist. When they have made a fair amount of roots they can be potted in a mixture of two parts coarse fibrous loam, one part well drained and decayed cow manure, and some gritty sand. They do well in moderately deep pans, but pots will also do. You can either use three strong bulbs to an 8-inch pan or pot, or one bulb in a 5-inch receptacle. Fill the pots one-third with broken crocks to insure good drainage and pot as firmly as possible.

Subtropical Bedding Stock

The out-of-town florist usually has customers who have extensive grounds and lawns where such plantings can be made use of to the best advantage. Nothing, perhaps is of more value for the center of a group than one or more specimens of Musa, or bananas, of which there are quite a number of splendid sorts. M. ensata is one of the best, M. superba is as beautiful but more compact and so is M. zebrina. Such beds are well adapted to the display of large flowering cannas, as well as those with beautiful foliage. The different eulalias, such as E. Japonica foliis striatis and E. Japonica zebrina, all fine ornamental grasses, are useful and so are the caladiums. Most all these subtropical plants like plenty of heat, so in order to keep them at top-speed in growth give them not less than 60 degrees at night.

Propagating Violets

When propagating violets it pays well to examine the plants that cuttings are taken from, and discard any that show the least trace of disease or spot. Conditions will be right from now and up to the first of April for the propagation of violets. When taking off cuttings see that they are not allowed to wilt at any time before or after they are inserted. They can be put in sand in a propagating bench in a cool house not any higher than 45 to 48 degrees. They also root well in boxes that are well-drained and filled with sand. Do not overwater the cuttings and on the other hand see that they do not become too dry. Give frequent sprinklings, but always see that they have a chance to dry off before night fall. When rooted they can be boxed off. Give plenty of ventilation whenever possible. When they become firmly established shading will only be necessary on very bright days.

Propagate Heliotropes

Cuttings can now be taken from the stock plants and with care and attention another batch will soon follow. When they are rooted pot into 2 1/2-inch pots and grow on.

PROPAGATING CALIFORNIA PRIVET.

Editor of HORTICULTURE:—I have a question to ask. Please advise me how to propagate California privet in quantity. I have a large quantity of cuttings from a tree in Floral Park, N. Y.

C.

The method pursued by those who propagate California privet in quantity is simply to cut the 1-year wood into lengths of three or four inches and line them out in drills. The cutting is done by a machine, similar to a stalk cutter and there is, we believe, also a machine for placing the cuttings in the furrows. They can be cut in fall and buried until spring, when they can be placed in the rows 2 to 4 inches apart and will grow readily. To make bushy plants pinch in the young growths frequently.

BOSTON FERNS TURNING BROWN.

Editor of HORTICULTURE:—Can you tell me the cause of the fronds of Boston ferns turning brown at the ends after making a growth of nearly two feet? Temperature of the house about 60 degrees, and 60 to 65 days, with constant moisture, on fine days always syringed in the morning. They are very young plants in tubs.

Sprague, Mass.

Your ferns are undoubtedly losing their energy because of their age. The temperature of your house is about right and the treatment seems correct, so we can place the cause of the fronds turning brown only to the age of your plants. It would be advisable to break up the plants into smaller plants repotting in fresh soil and thus rejuvenating them.

THE GREEN ROSE.

Editor of HORTICULTURE:—Kindly inform me through your valuable journal where I can buy the green rose, also the name of same, and oblige.

N. J.

The green rose is not very generally cultivated, but we believe you can procure it from W. A. Manda of South Orange, N. J.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Manure for the Late Mulches

Never allow the supply of manure to give out. To keep a continual supply of good manure on hand it will be necessary to get it in a good deal ahead of the time that it is needed, so that it will have a chance to decompose and become more serviceable to the plants. We have been compelled to use fresh cow manure several times, but there is nothing to gain by this method, and everything to lose. It takes a good deal more time, as the fresh manure cannot be applied to all the benches all at once, and this means stretching out the work. If there are no manure sheds on the place it will pay to have one built. This must not be put down as an expense, for a well built manure shed is a great asset on any place using any amount. We have tried several experiments to do without manure but find that it is best to use it, although sheep manure and bonemeal can be used at times to replace a part of the cow manure. As the manure comes from the car or the stables, it is best to have it piled up in heaps about three feet high, and with nice square corners and flat tops. It costs only a very little more to do this, and makes the manure pile look much more pleasing to the eye. Leave space on one side so that the heap can be turned over as soon as necessary, and this should be done about three times if the manure is fresh when heaped. Be sure to put a layer of good sod under the pile, at least six inches thick, and this will take up all the liquids that may leach out. It will not be necessary to mix this sod into the manure unless you wish to do so, as the manure can always be used off the top, and the sod used where it will bring in best results. Now is the time to get some in for the late mulches, as with the rush of spring work, this item is bound to be overlooked, and a good crop of roses lost because the plants are starving.

That Easter Crop

Although there are times when the prices around the holiday will be a little higher, we would not try to check the plants any to hold a crop for that day. There will be a great many plants, and other cut flowers grown especially for this day, and the prices that will be paid for roses may not be any larger than a little before. Plants that are held back too severely for a time will take quite some time to come back to their bearing again, and this loss of flowers will reduce the gain that was made when the plants were held for a holiday. Buds should now be well formed if they are to be on time, although with good clear weather even the small buds will be on time. Feed the plants carefully with the crop coming on, and leave this off as soon as the flowers show color well.

Blind Wood on Beauties

Now that we have promise of longer days, and let us hope more sunshine, some of the blind wood that the Beauties may carry can safely be removed. This should not be done unless the plants have flowering wood to keep them. As a rule there will not be blind wood on Beauties, but if there is, it will only be in the way when the plants are syringed, and will be a nuisance when the plants are being tied. It makes ideal roosts for spiders to start and it is hard to get them out when they become established. These will be all the more troublesome when the spring comes, so it will be well to do all possible to keep them out. In cutting this wood away, cut it the same as you would cut flowers, and the breaks that will follow may bear flowers themselves.

The Young Plants

These should be carefully watched all the time, taking one out of a pot every now and then to see how the roots are working, and how the plants are being treated in regard to watering. Often it will happen that the plants are not doing well, when on dumping one or two it will be found that they are too dry around the bottom of the pots. It will take several waterings to saturate all the soil if the plants get into this condition, and care should be taken not to let them get that way again. Another thing that must not be overlooked as the plants grow, is to keep the smaller ones to the front all the time, moving the taller plants to the rear of the bench—or the north side, if the houses run north and south. If the smaller plants were allowed to remain among the taller ones, they would become weaker and weaker, and would not amount to anything, whereas if they are moved to the front they will become nice sturdy plants, same as their taller brothers. It will make it easier to water too, as the taller plants will not dry out so fast in the rear, and they need more water, so they will not be hurt. The smaller plants in the front will not need so much water, and will dry out better, evening the whole lot pretty well, and making it possible to water the whole bench, except an occasional watering of the plants in the pots of the first row on the front and rear. To keep these even with the rest it will be necessary to water these first, and then water them again when the rest of the plants are watered.

GROWING SCHIZANTHUS AND MIGNONETTE

Editor HORTICULTURE:
Will you or some of your correspondents please give me full instructions as to the cultivation of Mignonette and Schizanthus for winter blooming?
New York

Schizanthus is grown from softwood cuttings. For winter blooming the cuttings should be taken in spring and kept at a cool temperature, about that used for violets, all the time. Ordinary friable, good loam will do; no chemical fertilizers and just a little rotted sheep or cow manure. The principal feature in growing this crop is the cool temperature.

A. LECHY

Mignonette seed should be sown in late July or early August and the house kept as cool as possible all summer, if the plants are wanted in bloom for Christmas. Use a well rotted heavy loam and add rotted manure at intervals.

ambitious display, none so distinctly offers a fair field to the sturdy old man, woman or child whose purchase, be it ever so trifling, acceptably fills its intent and is as treasured as that expressed by a million times as costly. The florists do well to feature this day and encourage its popular observance. Reports from all sides show that this season's publicity campaign has brought forth good fruit and there can be no question that it followed up each year on the same lines. St. Valentine's day may soon be classed as one of the four great floral holidays.

We hope that the admirable enterprise and courage of the New York horticultural interests, trade and professional, in putting up another gigantic Spring show this year will meet with the liberal public patronage which it so well deserves. The present year has much in it to dampen enthusiasm for ventures dependent upon the financial support of the public. We know that our New York friends have realized all this and are exerting every effort to cover in all contingencies so that a balance on the right side may be assured in advance. The horticultural fraternity far and near can do very much to assist to this end. A great deal depends upon how well they come forward to make the show what it must be to honestly command the attention of the public. When New York scores a great success the entire profession shares in the honor which follows. On the other hand, should it meet with discomfiture then the prestige of the flower industry all over the country must suffer to a greater or less extent.

And now comes abstemious Lent, that bugbear of the florists' existence. "Not so bad, nowadays, as it used to be," the retail dealers assert. Whether the people have relaxed the austerity of its observance or whether the abundance and cheapness of flowers at that period in recent years has so delighted the retail people that the world looks bright to them under any circumstances, or whether the modern publicity methods which some florists have been applying to their business is responsible for this more satisfactory condition we are unable to say. But we do believe that the sale of flowers may be increased to a still greater degree by a more general and persistent advertising to the public during that period. This is the time, in our humble opinion, when the florist should industriously push his publicity and not so much at Christmas and Easter, when he is already assured of all the business he can properly attend to and when sales beyond a certain limit mean high prices and dissatisfaction. The lenten season comes at a period when the market is loaded down with an exuberance of flowers, when prices are at the lowest point and quality is at its best and this fact should be hammered into the public apprehension. If advertising investment is ever advisable for the florist then Lent is preeminently that time.

St. Valentine's Day

"Hail to thy returning festival, old Bishop Valentine! Thou venerable arch flamen of Hymen. Like unto thee, assuredly, there is no other mitred father in the calendar." Here is one of the days that belong to the florist. No other day in the year carries more of sentiment, none where flowers can better express the conception of its meaning. The occasion is one that calls for small and dainty gifts rather than

F. J. DOLANSKY

Frank J. Dolansky has built up a remarkable business since 1904, when he erected his first greenhouse in Lynn, Mass. He is now the possessor of twenty-five houses and a splendid, well established retail store in the shopping district of the town. Ten years ago he bought three-fourths of an acre of land with a small greenhouse, which had been used for forcing vegetables. Today, a stock, principally of orchids and gardenias, is grown under 80,000 square feet of glass, cutting from 35,000 orchid plants and about 10,000 gardenia plants. Mr. Dolansky came from Bohemia to this country when he was 18 years old and started working in greenhouses around Lynn. He is still in his thirties, virile and active, and continually planning the development of his business.

The houses are built on the southern side of a hill on a moist gravelly soil which gives off sufficient moisture to keep the air in the best possible state for growing orchids and gardenias. What with this southern exposure, glass close to the plants, and heavy humidity, conditions are ideal for producing the large and finely colored cattleyas for which Mr. Dolansky is noted. There are also several houses devoted to roses and carnations, which are disposed of through the retail store.

Hundreds of plants are imported every spring and early summer, mostly cattleyas, which Mr. Dolansky grows extensively. His favorite variety is Cattleya Trianae, which in his opinion is the best commercial orchid grown. It is a rather slow producer of blooms, but it comes out in many and exquisite variations and blooms in mid-winter when the demand is greatest. C. labiata blooms more freely, but comes too early in the winter, in fact in the fall, to command the prices of the mid-winter. We noted a fine plant of the valuable Cattleya Trianae alba. There was also a plant of C. Trianae which produced freak blossoms, coming out with double parts, double lips, two pairs of petals, wings, etc. Some work in hybridizing is being done, but it has not been carried far enough as yet to show any definite results. We noted a germinating case in which were orchid seeds germinating on turkish towelling covering the damp moss underneath. Mr. Dolansky stated that this method was cleaner and safer than starting seed on the moss surface itself, as fungi were liable to injure the young seedlings. A plant of C. speciosissima was shown which had three blooms to every stem, where most growers feel lucky if they can get one or two.

Dolansky grows some splendid gardenias, which find but few competitors in either the Boston or New York markets. In fact, he practically controls the Boston market for gardenias, and finding the local market an insufficient outlet for his products, he sends much of his stock to New York. In his opinion the gardenia is not to be classed as a popular flower as it is rather frail and expensive and is used mostly by the very wealthy class of flower lovers, who go so far as to use them in finger bowls to scent the water—a very pretty custom. He grows them all the year around, continually keeping a batch of hardwood cuttings in the propagating bench.

Mr. Dolansky claims a rosy future for the orchid, which he finds is becoming more and more popular. Flower-buyers are getting educated to their use, realizing that they are long lasting and that just as much show can be secured from one or two cattleyas as from a bunch of 100 violets. And nowadays, what with the modern one-step and fox trot, the light spray of orchids and lily of the valley worn on the arm or shoulder are much more adaptable than the heavy bouquet of violets worn at the waist. S. L. F.

PACIFIC COAST NOTES.

C. J. Uhl and C. R. McBride are starting a nursery near Vacaville, Cal.

The California State Floral Society held a meeting, Feb. 12, at Red Men's Hall in this city. The principal feature was a lecture on "Annuals," by A. R. Gould.

The City Park Board of Spokane, Wash., at a recent meeting decided to invite park commissioners, florists, etc., to stop off at Spokane on their way to attend the conventions in San Francisco next August.

Richard Iwerson, landscape architect, formerly of Calgary, Alta., has become connected with the Washington Nursery Company of Toppenish, Wash. Mr. Iwerson changed his location on account of his German birth, which made things rather uncomfortable for him in Calgary after the beginning of the war.

The curbs of Chinatown, San Francisco, are now lined with vendors of China lilies and blossoming fruit tree cuttings, in preparation for the Chinese New Year celebration. The sale of the China lily plants is by no means confined to Oriental buyers, though the cut flowers are handled to a considerable extent by white florists.

At the meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, Feb. 6, an interesting exhibit was that brought by F. D. Pelicano, consisting of a half-dozen bunches of a new single pale lavender violet originated by him. It was rated at 90 points. The other exhibit, a fine lot of white phalaenopsis by the MacRorie-McLaren Company, was rated at 95 points. The attention of the meeting was largely occupied with preparations for the S. A. F. convention.

PERSONAL.

Otis L. Kent, the North Atkinson street florist, Newburyport, Mass., fell on Friday morning last and broke one of his legs. A physician was called and the fracture was reduced.

Alfred Demeusy of Brooklyn and Miss Marjorie Converse of Bensonhurst, L. I. were married in Brooklyn on the evening of Tuesday, February 2. The church was very prettily decorated.

James Scott, who has been in charge of Mrs. Charles R. Hayden's estate at Magnolia, Mass., for the past twenty-two years is now about to assume the position of superintendent of Mrs. C. A. Sinclair's estate, Cedarhurst, West Gloucester, Mass.

A recent letter from Robert Hunnick, of Newport, R. I., tells of his arrival at Santa Barbara, Cal., he having been ordered by his physician to make a change for a while owing to mental and nervous depression since the death of his wife. He writes enthusiastically of the scenery of the grand canyons and other picturesque sections passed through on the trip westward and proposes to return via the Panama Canal.

A noteworthy feature of the regular monthly meeting of this society was the remarkably fine display of cut flowers and plants. Also the very large and enthusiastic attendance. The meeting was held in Doran's Hall, Greenwich, Conn., Friday evening, Feb. 12. For the annual fall exhibition John Canning offers a sweep-stake prize of $20 in gold for the best chrysanthemum bush plant. A. N. Pierson Co. offer special prizes in four classes. Visitors present were Chas. H. Totty, M. C. Ebel and Arthur Herrington of Madison, N. J., A. L. Rickards of Stump & Walter Co., New York City, and W. J. Collins of Carter's, Boston, Mass. The visitors all favored us with a few remarks. Mr. Herrington as manager of the International Flower Show spoke at length outlining the plans and preparations.

Hon. John M. Brown, Mayor of Stamford, also addressed the members. The lecturer, Henry Kelly of New Caanan, Conn., interested the members to a marked degree in his paper on coniferous trees adapted to Westchester and Fairfield counties. Chas. Ryan, Portchester, N. Y., read an instructive essay on the culture of sweet peas for exhibition. New roses were exhibited by Chas. H. Totty. S. J. Reuter & Son of Westerly, R. I., staged two fine vases of Killarney Brilliant and Crimson Queen. The John Canning prizes for the best vase of roses was awarded to Jas. Stuart for a grand vase of Killarney Brilliant. The second prize was won by Robert Grunnert for a fine vase of the same variety. Other awards were as follows: Robert Allen, cultural certificate for mignonette; Jas. Linane, hon. mention for cyclamen; Robt. Allen for cinerarias; Wm. H. Fisher for carnations; Robt. Grunnert for carnations; A. Wynne for Primula malacoides; P. W. Popp for basket of miniature pink hyacinths and lily of the valley. Vote of thanks to Patrick Fairfield for sweet peas; A. Wynne for stocks; P. W. Popp for Erica codonoides. Next meeting March 12th. Prizes will be offered for the best exhibit. Get busy.

NEW YORK STATE FEDERATION OF FLORISTS' CLUBS

The convention of the State Federation at Ithaca was a great success although it was regretted that W. F. Kasting was unable to be present. Delegates from New York were, Leonard Barron, Max Schling, A. J. Guttman and John Young; from Rochester, C. B. Ogden, H. E. Bates; from Albany, Messrs. Tracey, Henkes and Shaw. There was a very creditable exhibit of all the newer carnations and roses. Prof. White took great care of all the delegates and they were delighted with the treatment and hospitality shown them.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle of St. Louis met at Mrs. Theo. Miller's home on Delmar avenue, Wednesday, Feb. 10, and spent a pleasant afternoon. Mrs. C. Bergestermann will entertain them on Wednesday, March 10, at her home on South Grand avenue.

The Rochester Florists' Association at its meeting February 8, appointed George B. Hart, F. L. Kelley, A. H. Salter, Harry E. Bates and Charles H. Vick to co-operate with the Industrial Exposition Committee in planning for a flower show to be held at Exposition Park in connection with the annual exposition. A return bowling match between the Florist Club of Buffalo and the Rochester Florists' Association will be held in this city soon.

News Items from Everywhere

BOSTON

B. J. Wall & Son have opened up a new florists' shop at 12 Birch street, Roslindale.

The new conservatories for the city of Boston have at last been decided upon and work will begin very shortly in the Fenway.

Henry Collins, formerly with Penn and several other local florists, is now manager of F. J. Dolansky's store in Lynn, which is being remodelled.

The annual banquet of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston will be held on Wednesday evening, March 10 at the New American House. Tickets will be limited to 300, $2.00 each.

Several prominent local growers, who make a specialty of plants, predict a scarcity of palms, araucarias, bay trees, etc., this year. They state that very little importing will be done, since in the short space of a week freight across the ocean has gone up 400 per cent., which will make the prices of these plants almost prohibitive. Plant trade has been rather poor around here, lately, and this bit of news is not very welcome.

St. Valentine's Day was a big event for Boston florists this last week. Violets in heart-shaped boxes were advertised extensively in the newspapers. The magnitude of the business done can be estimated by the fact that over 200,000 violets were sold by Penn, alone, fifteen men working six hours to fill orders for the early morning trains Saturday. All day Friday and Saturday the activity resembled that at Christmas time.

Another meeting of growers and wholesalers took place last Saturday for the purpose of forming a credit protective association. W. H. Elliott of Brighton acted as temporary chairman. An interesting discussion took place in which N. F. McCarthy, J. M. Cohen, W. C. Stickel, John Cummings and several others took active part. There were no retailers in attendance and those present allowed themselves a little freedom of expression in describing the evils of the present system. Finally the formation of an association on a collection and information basis was agreed upon. A charter was framed, which was signed by twelve of those present. N. F. McCarthy heading the list. The new society will start business under the name of The Flower Growers' Protective Association. Letters will be sent to the growers and wholesalers in Boston and vicinity and much publicity will be given to this to interest the several hundred florists finding their market in Boston.

WASHINGTON.

The most successful food show ever held in Washington is now in progress at the Center market. This place is crowded daily with throngs of people and the florists having stands there report doing an exceptionally good business. All of the florists have prepared special decorations and among those most worthy of mention is that of J. M. Hammer & Son. An excellent collection of primroses, cyclamen, geraniums, and other potted plants and ferns represent the salable stock. Robert Bowdler & Sons are distributing miniature flower pots to passersby while other stands offer bookmarks, blotters and other advertising matter. The florists making displays include M. J. McCabe, Fred H. Kramer, Garden & Robey, John Boyle, Robert A. Bowdler, J. M. Hammer & Son, P. Herrold, John R. Morgan, Constant Ponnert, Frank L. Schultz, Frank Slye, D. H. Von Bottger and G. Milton Thomas & Co.

PHILADELPHIA.

A postal from Charles Sim and party dated Chicago, Feb. 10, reports all well and leaving there on that date. Next stop—San Francisco.

The double blue cornflower has become of late years a staple article on the cut flower market and is very popular. This form was picked up in his trip through Europe in 1906 by George D. Clark of Dreer's and introduced in America by that firm in 1907. We are told on good authority that Dreer's have made enough on this one item in the past seven years to cover the cost of Mr. Clark's trip seven times over.

An exhibit of the new carnation "Debutante California" was seen at the Pennock-Meehan Co.'s. It is a splendid variety as to color, stem, size and substance. The color is of the same tint of pink as "Gorgeous"—a little brighter if anything, we think, but we did not have the two side by side. This is a new seedling raised by Deiner & Co., California. The flowers under review were grown by Chas. B. Herr, Strasburg, Pa. Mr. Herr is non-committal as to the variety, as the half dozen plants he tried were not in the best shape when planted. So far, it looks to be a late bloomer. To be fair, further tests are necessary.

Arrangements for the Farmers' Institute meeting on March 5 and 6 under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and the Florists' Club of Philadelphia are now well advanced and a complete program will be issued in a few days. In addition to the official speakers of the Department of Agriculture of the State of Pennsylvania there will be some local talent who will help to round off the entertainment. Among them will be George W. Kerr, the sweet pea enthusiast; Dr. Robert Huey, the Dean Hole of American rosarians; Theodore Roberts, champion cattle breeder of this locality, and Robert Pyle of canna time from West Grove.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

W. C. Beckert, seedsman, of 101 Federal street, North Side, has an interesting window-box display of French Endive, Asparagus palmetto and various other "growing things" of the vegetable kingdom flanked by an attractive border of narcissi.

The Brooks Flower Shop was opened last Monday simultaneously with the handsome new Davis Theatre on Smithfield street, being conveniently located in the Arcade thereof. Mrs. Rose Bradley Brooks, who was formerly with Ray J. Dasebach, is the proprietress. The A. W. Smith Company furnished the decorations for the "house-warming" of the theatre.

Randolph & McClements furnished the handsome flower decorations for the Thaw-Slade wedding Tuesday afternoon, which was the most notable event of its kind in years. Mrs. E. A. Williams contributed in her line to the bankers' banquet at the Hotel Schenley. Spring blossoms entered largely into the table decorations, while the white lattice screening the orchestra was overrun with Taft roses. Earlier in the week the Bank also at the Schenley. Mr. Daschbach contributing the decorations. His work was also conspicuous at the handsome Japanese ball of the Edgeworth Club last Friday evening.

CHICAGO.

Miss A. J. Pennock of Sumter, S. C., visited Chicago this week looking for peony hints. Miss Pennock is a niece of S. S. Pennock of Philadelphia and is making a beginning in the growing of peonies for commercial purposes.

Ernst Wienhoeber of the north side has found the social events since the holidays to have been fully up to former years in the amount of flowers used. The table decorations for the pre-nuptial dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus McCormick in honor of their son and his bride were furnished by this firm. The tables were set in the ball room of the home and thousands of spring flowers arranged in garlands upon the tables.

The McCormick-Linn wedding on Saturday, Feb. 13, was an event calling for the use of many flowers. The church decorations were confined to a background of Cibotium Schiedei at the altar, and at the front two tall moss-covered vases of lilies. The bride's bouquet was of orange blossoms cut from dozens of plants secured in the East and was lightly showered with ribbon. C. A. Samuelson had the order. In the decorations at the Linn home the tables were beautiful with the double flowering cherries, Prunus triloba, grown by F. Oechslein.

Fire in Wholesale District.

The most stirring event in the wholesale flower market in years was the burning, Sunday morning, of the five-story brick building at 66-70 East Randolph street in which were located the E. C. Amling Co. on the main floor and the A. L. Randall Co. on the four upper floors. The origin of the fire is unknown, the blaze having been discovered at 3.30 A. M., and was under such headway that the stock of florists' supplies was completely destroyed and only a small portion of the office furniture of the A. L. Randall Co. was saved. E. C. Amling, who lives at Oak Park and John Michaelson, manager, at River Forest, were notified and made a quick run in time to save the books and at 7 A. M. had such flowers as they had saved carried into the Harry Rowe building. The next day their furniture was moved into the Federal Life building, 166 North Michigan avenue where they will remain for the present. The A. L. Randall Co. are temporarily located at 177 North Michigan avenue, which, with the Chicago Flower Growers' Association gives Michigan avenue three of the large wholesale houses just now. The walls of the burned building are standing but the inside is a complete wreck. It was an old building and with the light, inflammable stock carried on the upper floors, burned quickly. Poehlmann Bros. occupy the next building east and their private office was damaged by the water coming through the broken front window. E. C. Amling and A. L. Randall are the two largest wholesale commission houses in Chicago. There is at present no lack of suitable places for renting, which in ordinary years would be a serious proposition.

No report is made by the insurance adjusters at this writing. Aside from its papers and books, the loss of the A. L. Randall Co. is practically total. One of the serious losses of the E. C. Amling Co.'s is their immense ice boxes which are water soaked and warped. The newest one cost $1,200.00 a short time ago.

St. Valentine's Day.

There was no disappointment in store for florists when they went over their books after St. Valentine's Day. Orders came in from outside and shipping trade was very good and after this was taken care of, home buyers began and everything was cleaned up at good prices. All kinds of flowers were used, for there were baskets and boxes both to fill and for a newer offering there were the Colonial bouquets, flat or high, made solid, with numerous colors in each and backed with the white lace paper. These are made in several sizes and they were very popular with buyers for this day.

Chas. A. Samuelson, who had a very large trade for St. Valentine's Day, says it is getting to be a bigger day each year, but that florists have to cater to it by having something new each time. This year violets and spring flowers, as usual, were preferred, but they were presented either in the form of Colonial bouquets or in gold baskets adorned with cupids. White boxes in heart shape with fluffy red bows were also popular.

Long Island City, N. Y.—Martin Jannewsky, a florist, living in Ravenswood, has been awarded $908 against Morris Goldfarb, a florist of East Thirty-fourth street, Manhattan, by a jury before Supreme Court Justice Benedict. The plaintiff was represented by Attorney Arvine C. Leach. Jannewsky worked for Goldfarb from

Our stock is in prime condition, retarded dormant plants from 6-inch pots, in fine shape to flower for Spring Sales or for Memorial Day; any of the varieties described below at $30.00 per 100

Avalanche. A splendid large white with a well established reputation; an easy variety to force.

Bouquet Rose. Large trusses of rosy amber turning to bright pink; a favorite with all growers.

Dentelle. Entirely distinct, deeply fringed flower of a creamy white color.

E. G. Hill. Trusses of immense size, color a most pleasing shade of pink which does not fade; growth vigorous, foliage of a pea green color, large and attractive.

General de Vibraye. A favorite wherever seen; very large heads of bright rose colored flowers. A splendid early forcing variety.

La Lorraine. Very large flowers, pale rose, turning to bright pink; has become a general favorite.

Mme. A. Riverain. Superb bright rose color; very vigorous and floriferous.

Mme. E. Mouillere. Probably the most popular white variety on the market today; an early easy variety to force.

Mme. Maurice Hamar. A delicate fresh-rose color, a vigorous grower, the individual flowers as well as the trusses being very large.

Mlle. Agnes Barillet. A splendid white; flowers large and very freely produced.

Mousseline. A beautiful mauve-rose with cream-colored center; the flower heads are large and held erect; a fine acquisition.

Mont Rose. Immense panicles of clear-flesh rose, entirely distinct, one of the best very early flowering varieties.

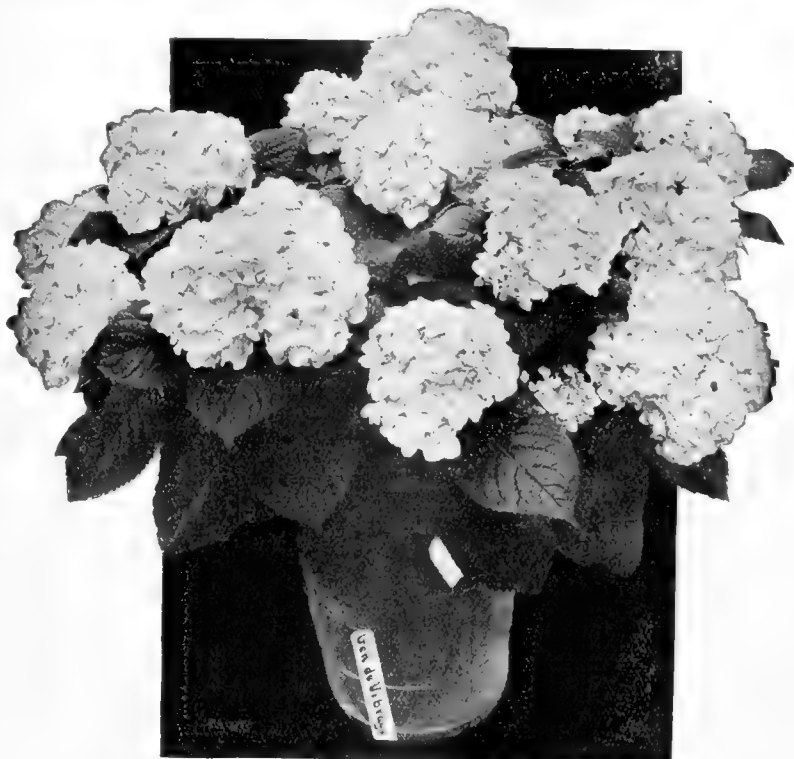

Ronsard. Flowers and trusses very large, of a beautiful rose-tint.

Souvenir de Mme. E. Chautard. One of the very best, of splendid erect habit, very robust, medium sized heads, of bright rose colored flowers; one of the very best of the Bouquet Rose type.

Senateur Henri David. Another splendid rose-colored variety, with red reflections; flowers produced in immense large heads; on the style of La Lorraine, but an earlier bloomer.

Vieux Chateau. Very large pure white, becoming suffused with delicate rosy carmine as they mature.

Hydrangeas Otaka. Dormant plants, 6-inch pots, $25.00 per 100; 10-inch tubs, $1.00 each; 12-inch tubs, $2.50 each.

The Cannerns.

Among the seedsmen and seed growers who had booths at the recent Cannerns' Convention may be mentioned, Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Leonard Seed Co., D. Landreth Seed Co., S. D. Woodruff & Sons, F. H. Woodruff & Sons, Everett B. Clark Co., D. M. Ferry & Co., J. Bolgiano & Sons, a very respectable showing as to numbers. The attendance this year was not so large as that of a year ago at Baltimore, and from a business point of view was much more disappointing. One of the reasons is the fact that the exhibits occupied two floors at the Grand Central Palace, and owing to the peculiar construction of the building each floor was practically shut off from the other. Most of the machinery was exhibited on the main floor, and the visitors to this floor were fairly numerous at all times while the exhibition was open, but probably not one in twenty took the trouble to go up stairs. So far as can be ascertained, the machinery men and can manufacturers did a fairly good business, but the supply men were very greatly disappointed and many serious complaints have been made against an exhibition on two floors.

No decision has as yet been reached as to where the next convention will be held, but it will undoubtedly be somewhere in the middle west, or possibly it may go as far as Denver. This city seems to suit a great many of the western people and even the eastern men regard it with favor. Among the other contenders for the convention are Rochester, Buffalo and Richmond, although the latter is not quite prepared to handle so large a crowd as the cannerns usually carry to their conventions.

Seed Potatoes.

Seed potatoes have experienced a sinking spell and we learn that they can be bought in Maine at the lowest figure in several years. This very naturally means a low price for eating potatoes which coming at the moment when flour and all cereals have reached the highest level in many years, should materially help in keeping down the family expenses. It will probably be a repetition of the experience of other years on the part of the dealers in seed potatoes, that those sold early at a higher price will cause discontent among the buyers and it will be necessary to reduce early prices to satisfy dissatisfied customers.

There are reports that onion sets are also on the decline but we have not been able to verify them as yet.

The Boddington Business.

At a meeting of the larger creditors of A. T. Boddington, 342 West 14th street, New York, held Thursday afternoon, Feb. 11, the consensus of opinion was shown to be unanimously in favor of continuing the business, looking to the best interests of all concerned. Accordingly, a Creditors' Protective Committee was appointed, the following gentlemen being elected to serve thereon: C. W. Scott of the Yokohama Nursery Co., Chas. Schwake of C. J. Schwake & Co., Inc., and Remson S. Mills. This committee will take full control of the business, Mr. Boddington giving his active co-operation. It was demonstrated that a forced sale at this time would leave creditors absolutely without any dividend whatsoever, whereas under the economies to be put in force by the Creditors' Protective Committee and with the co-operation of the creditors themselves, there is every possibility of the business being eventually restored to a profitable basis. The house of Arthur T. Boddington is well and favorably known to the purchasing public, it has expended large sums in advertising, therefore the value of the good-will of the house is incontestable. Two of the gentlemen selected on the Creditors' Protective Committee are well known New York seedsmen and their names should be sufficient guarantee that the interests of all creditors will be impartially safeguarded.

Notes.

New York, N. Y.—Knight & Struck Co. have opened a retail seed store at 302 West 22nd street.

The value of various horticultural materials imported into New York for the week ending February 6, 1915 is given as follows: Manure salt, $67,404; fertilizer, $10,395; guano, $1,671; grass seed, $6,553; trees and plants, $2,128.

The advent of Harry A. Bunyard in the seed business under his own name, is one of the interesting items to be chronicled, but we venture to say that he has started rather late in the season and will be under more or less of a handicap this year. However, he has our best wishes for his success, and as he is very capable and resourceful there is good reason to believe that he will succeed.

The following testimonials to the good qualities of "John Baer" tomato, were crowded out of the advertisement of J. Bolgiano & Son.

A Week to Ten Days Earlier Than Livingston's Globe.

Mr. H. E. Ruckert, Sec.-Treas. Terrell Land and Development Company, Florida, writes, May 22d, 1914: "After careful and exhaustive tests, 'John Baer' Tomatoes, planted on hammock land, rich soil, heavily fertilized, produced the best results of all. Produced a heavy vine, full of fruit and matured a week to ten days earlier than Livingston's Globe, planted at the same time under like conditions. The soil is naturally moist and fruit was only damaged slightly by the drought."

Never Tasted Such Nice Tomatoes as "John Baer."

Mr. G. P. Butler, Jr., Santa Cruz, Calif., Aug. 25th, 1914, writes: "John Baer" Tomato is all you claim for it. It is certainly a good one. All my customers say they have never tasted such nice Tomatoes before. I shall plant the same Tomato next year."

"John Baer" Best Tomato Ever Grown in Colorado.

The Colorado State Agricultural College, E. P. Sandsten, Horticulturist, Aug. 31st, 1914, writes: "John Baer" Tomato has shown to be the best Tomato we have ever grown. Not only is it as early as any Tomato we have tried, but the fruit is more uniform and the size and ripeness more uniform. 'John Baer' is undoubtedly an

"John Baer" Wins in Competition with "Triscon"

J. R. Robinson, Fall River, Mass., writes Oct. 31, 1914: "The 'John Baer' Tomato is by far the best I have ever grown, and I have grown the new varieties for years, including the new 'Largest' variety 'Triscon' but will have to say 'John Baer' has it on them all. The weather conditions have not been very good. We had a late Spring but for all that the 'John Baer' Tomato has done fine. I and several friends have planted and each one says 'John Baer' is the best Tomato they have ever grown." I sent to you 1 and to you and for a prize of $100.00 'Triscon' Tomato. The prize was for the best 8 seeds. I sowed 14 of them and raised ten plants. 'Triscon' is all right as a variety, as it will grow about fifty Tomatoes in a cluster, but they are not fit for market."

"JOHN BAER" TOMATO

The Earliest and Best Tomato on Earth in Canada—First to Ripen Fruit Out of 28 Varieties

Mr. C. L. Ireland, Colborne, Ontario, Canada, writes Aug. 10th, 1914: "The 'John Baer' Tomato turned out better for me than I expected it would. I have fourteen (14) acres in Tomatoes this year of twenty-eight (28) different kinds ordered from a good many different seedsmen in the United States and Canada, and of course several varieties of which the seed was sown at the same time as 'John Baer' and therefore at the same time, your 'John Baer' was the first to ripen early fruit. I sowed the seed on March 28th and about April 15th transplanted into flats 16 inches square, 100 plants to a flat. About May 15th, I transplanted some of them again into 16-inch flats, planting 2 in the flat, twenty-five (25) and fifty (50) plants to a flat. I grew them in cotton covered hotbeds and hardened them off by removing cotton coverings before setting plants to the field. All the plants grew most stately plants, as good as the best of any other variety and a lot harder than a great many others. I was very much interested in this and certainly pleased with the plants as they stood up to perfection. I set these 'John Baer' Tomato plants out by themselves in a piece of sandy loam on medium low flat ground which had been an old duck grass sod before and sowed to Oats next year. I kept them well cultivated before and after setting plants, and as there was quite a lot of humus from the duck grass roots worked through the soil, I did not use any manure but just a handful of bone meal, 6 per cent fertilizer and one cup of salt at time of setting.

The plants grew large in proportion to number of plants set in the flats (9, 25, 50 and 100); and continued to hold their same size in proportion to number of plants, their seeds and growth. I planted them out in rows 1 foot apart by 3 feet in the row. One row of the 9 plants to a flat, one row of the 25 plants to a flat, one row of the 50 plants to a flat and one row of the 100 plants to a flat.

The largest plants from the row of 9 plants to a flat, were the first picked of the fruit, because of the large size of the plants and the show color. This was on July 28, 1914. Aug. 3d, I picked some more from first row and Aug. 6th I had a picking from both first and second rows and again Aug. 9th I had some from first, second and third rows. On Aug. 30th, I had a row of 100 plants to a flat.

There is a very marked difference in the size, number and early maturity of the fruit on the four different rows and this was evidently governed by the size of the plants at setting time. We had a cold, backward Spring at setting time, with continued cold, dry weather. Throughout June and July there were practically only two good rains, one in June 29th, and the other on July 23d, and when the last rain of July 23d came, the soil was so baked the best effect of the rain was lost, because before the moisture had penetrated to any depth it had mostly evaporated.

I saw by Market Growers' Journal of Aug. 1st that W. F. Massey says that Earliana was ripening plentiful ten days before a sign of color appeared in 'John Baer' and he seems to think it is Chalk's Jewel renamed. As he says, if it is not Chalk's Jewel renamed, it is so much like it there is no reason to keep them separate. My experience with 'John Baer' Tomato has been just about the reverse of W. F. Massey's, and I am a practical Tomato Grower, for Chalk's Jewel is not the same shaped Tomato as 'John Baer.' Chalk's Jewel will crack badly at the stem end and will not ripen around the stem.

'John Baer' Tomato in comparison with Langdon's strain of Earliana and Philadelphia Crown Setting Earliana, 'John Baer' was six days earlier than Langdon's, and ten days earlier than Philadelphia Crown Setting. 'John Baer' ripens up better around the stem end than either of them, is much larger and smoother, with heavier vine and foliage. 'John Baer' is also solid and a good keeper after being picked when ripe—August 10th. I now have the first 'John Baer' Tomatoes, which I picked over two weeks ago, lying on the roof of the house in the hot sun, and they have only just started to wither up. 'John Baer' Tomatoes picked Aug. 6th appeared as quite solid yet. In weight 'John Baer' Tomatoes will average from 6 to 12 ounces each, and about seven Tomatoes to a cluster or first setting, which ripens right up to the stem, perfectly solid, and they do not crack, like Earliana and Chalk's Jewel around the stem.

The only difference in treatment given 'John Baer' and Earliana is that Earliana was given a good coat of manure, plowed in before planting, while 'John Baer' got none, and were considerably larger, more solid, smoother and a brighter deep red color. 'John Baer' Tomato suits me to perfection."

"John Baer" Bore Tomatoes Two Weeks Earlier Than Any Others

Mr. Richard Bowles, Niagara Co., N. Y., R. F. D. No. 30, Sept. 1st, 1914, writes: "The 'John Baer' Tomato proved to be a success. It bore Tomatoes two weeks earlier than any other seed and we had a very fine yield. We are thankful to have found a Tomato earlier than what we have ever had."

"John Baer" Is the Poor Man's Tomato—It Yields So Abundantly

Mr. Gustav Bartholme, Onondaga County, N. Y., writes Sept. 1st, 1914: "I am glad of the opportunity to say that 'John Baer' Tomato is highly satisfactory. It is the poor man's Tomato, for it can be bountifully raised on very little land. I planted seven rows 'John Baer' Tomato, 350 feet long, which so far yielded 110 bushels with promise of many more."

"I did not intend to raise Tomatoes to sell. I have always raised them solely for my own home use, but I found they bore so many I could not make use of them all, and so I am supplying my neighbors and friends, who are well pleased with them. 'John Baer' Tomatoes are firm and round, with very few crippled ones among them."

"John Baer" Earliest, Heavy Bearer, Smooth, Fine Flavor

Miss Carrie B. Bankard, Carroll Co., Md., Sept. 3d, 1914, writes: "'John Baer' Tomatoes are the earliest I have ever had. I have been very successful with them. I find the 'John Baer' a very heavy bearer, very smooth and round, and of a fine flavor."

Picking Two "John Baer" Tomatoes to One of Chalk's Jewel

Mr. Harry F. Hopkins, Baltimore, Md., writes July 29th, 1914: "'John Baer' Tomatoes have proved to be as you represented them. I planted them along with other early varieties. 'John Baer' made a very much larger growth than the others. I found them to be the best cropping as well as early Tomatoes as I have ever grown. I find 'John Baer' Tomato will stand the drought better than other Tomatoes on account of their large foliage, which protects the fine fruit from the hot sun. 'John Baer' is a good cropper. I am picking two 'John Baer' to one Chalk's Jewel in spite of the fact that we have the driest season on record. It is the worst growing season I have ever known in this section, and I have been here in the trucking business for forty years."

"John Baer" Is Earlier than Earliana, and Far Superior

Mr. William A. Bridle, Monmouth Co., N. J., Sept. 3d, 1914, writes: "'John Baer' Tomato is exceptionally early—earlier than 'Earliana,' and far superior to that variety. It ripens well up to the stem perfectly smooth, solid and of fine flavor, fine color and very prolific; altogether I would consider it the best early Tomato to date."

Earliest and best in 28 varieties.

Brilliant, deep red color, smoothest, no core, almost free from seed, delicious flavored, far more solid and meaty than any other; no culls. Ripens even up to the stem. Perfect beauties. Uniform in size and ripening. Picks two to one of any other variety—from 108 to 122 perfect fruit to the vine. A perfect shipper. Blight proof.

"JOHN BAER"

The Earliest and

- 1st—"John Baer" Tomato produces large, beautiful solid shipping Tomatoes in 30 days—large, strong, well matured plants grow Veneer or Paper bands, with roots undisturbed.
- 2nd—"John Baer" Tomatoes produces the perfect High Crown Tomatoes ever grown—tirely free from core.
- 3rd—"John Baer" Tomatoes produces an enormous crop of Tomatoes, 50 to 100 fruit to plant.
- 4th—Every "John Baer" Tomato ripens even right up to the stem.
- 5th—No cripples, no scalds, no blight, no cracks, no one sided, uneven, scarred. When dead ripe "John Baer" Tomato will burst.
- 6th—"John Baer" Tomato has a wonderful glowing, brilliant, bright red color.
- 7th—"John Baer" Tomato has a mild, delicious sweet flavor. The finest flavor you have tasted.
- 8th—"John Baer" Tomato is almost seedless—requires 6 to 8 bushels of "John Baer" Tomato to make one pound of seed. A marvelous Setter, often ten fruit in first cluster; and meaty.
- 9th—"John Baer" Tomato has just enough foliage—will stand plenty of manuring without injury to vine. Set plants 3x3 1/2 feet.
- 10th—"John Baer" Tomato is the most perfect

Planted six weeks later but come first in Texas. Three weeks ahead of any in Virginia. Three weeks ahead of any in New York. Three weeks ahead of any in Washington. Two weeks ahead of any in Maryland. Set out May 30th, picked ripe fruit June 15th in New York.

' TOMATO
omato on Earth

Shipping Tomato ever grown. 21 fruit exactly a six-carrier basket.

Each beautiful "John Baer" Tomato weighs out 6½ ounces.

"John Baer" Tomato Seed was saved only John Baer, the originator, who personally selected and picked every Tomato, from which he saved this seed, selecting only the most beautiful, perfect fruit of the Early Stem Set variety.

"John Baer" Tomato is the offspring of 20 marvelous Tomatoes, one great specialist having devoted ten years in selecting and improving one parent, and another expert devoted five years in selecting and improving the other parent. The "John Baer" Tomato is, therefore, the result of Fifteen Generations of Improvement and Selection for earliness, quality, shape, size, color and shipping quality.

As a Packing Tomato, "John Baer" is a miracle. They all pack fancy, no seconds and I pack whole. Peelers can prepare three bushels "John Baer" Tomatoes to one bushel of any other Tomato. Being such a tremendous yielder, a bushel of "John Baer" Tomatoes can be gathered in one-third the time of any other Tomato. A large Baltimore Tomato packer had all the "John Baer" Tomatoes he could secure packed separately, running them through a special process for his fanciest trade and his own private use.

"AS YE SOW SO

"John Baer" Earliest and Best Tomato in Texas. Mr. N. T. Wells, Caldwell Co., Texas, writes June 21st, 1914: "The 'John Baer' Tomatoes are the best Tomatoes I have ever raised. I planted them six weeks later than other early varieties and the 'John Baer' ripened first. They are well meated, fine flavor, perfect, round, ripen even up to the stem. They have done more than I expected them to do in spite of the weather conditions. We have had a continuous rain all year, had seven floods in six months. I don't want any other Tomato. Enclosed find my order for more 'John Baer' Tomato Seeds."

"John Baer" Tomato the Earliest of Six Different Kinds

James S. Casey, Middlesex Co., Mass., writes Sept. 11th, 1914: "John Baer" Tomatoes have done fine. They were the earliest of six different kinds I grew this year and now, the middle of September, are still full of ripe and green fruit, in spite of the season being cold and wet. Shall grow more of them another year."

"John Baer" Proved Earlier, Larger, Stronger, More Prolific, and Stands Extremes of Weather Better Than Bonny Best

Mr. E. G. Bell, Grower of Specialties in Vegetables, Pike County, Pa., writes Oct. 23d, 1914: "I tested 'John Baer' Tomato with Bonny Best Tomato. I took 100 'John Baer' Tomato plants and planted them on an inside row of a patch of 8,000 Bonny Best, and the 'John Baer' proved earlier, larger, stronger grower, more prolific, and will stand extremes of weather better than any other Tomato I have ever grown or seen. 'John Baer' Tomato is a tremendous cropper of large, smooth, solid Tomatoes of good quality."

"John Baer" Tomatoes Pay Him More Than $1.00 per Plant

Mr. N. S. Britt, Hancock Co., Ga., writes July 27th, 1914: "I can't say too many good things about 'John Baer' Tomato. I have a patch I planted very early, from which I have already realized $1.00 per plant, besides furnishing all that we needed for my twenty-eight room hotel, and these same plants are still bearing. My main crop of 'John Baer' Tomatoes are just beginning to bear and they promise well."

"John Baer" All Smooth and Fine—Chalk's Jewel Were No Good At All

Mr. Peter J. Loxson, Floyd Co., Ind., Aug. 16th, 1914, writes: "John Baer" Tomato is the smoothest and best all-round Tomato I have found in my experience of twenty years in Tomato growing. I have had the Chalk's Early Jewel as my best early Tomato for eight years. I planted half "John Baer" and half Chalk's Jewel this year. We had a bad Spring; first too cold, then extremely hot, then long drouth. The Chalk's Jewel were no good at all, but 'John Baer' were all smooth and fine all the way through."

Never Saw Such a Wonderful Grower or Prolific Fruiter as "John Baer" Tomato

L. L. Auld, Greene Co., Ohio, writes Sept. 25th, 1914: "Last Spring I bought of you some 'John Baer' Tomato seed, planted it carefully and gave it special attention, staked each plant, kept the suckers off of them. I treated the 'John Baer' as I do all my early sorts for early market. I have made a hobby of Tomatoes for twelve years, and have tried all sorts in almost every way of growing them. Yet I was not prepared for the great surprise I had in 'John Baer.' To say I was pleased was putting it mild. I never saw such a wonderful grower or prolific fruiter in my life. As to quality, it was simply fine. Beat all other sorts I ever tried, and I have tested seventy sorts in one year."

Hurrah for "John Baer"—He That Laughs Last—Laughs Best

Mr. Edward Faidley, Sullivan Co., Tenn., Aug. 7th, 1914, writes: "The 'John Baer' Tomatoes are the finest I ever had. I bought an ounce from you last Spring. Some other gardeners hoisted at me paying $4.00 an ounce for them. Now I am selling Tomatoes at fancy prices, while others are selling at any old price they can get. I have always found Bolgiano's seed A No. 1."

"John Baer" Very Good Tomato for Vermont. George H. Mass, Windsor Co., Vt., Sept. 13d, 1914, writes: "'John Baer' Tomato is quite early. We find it a very good Tomato for this climate. It is of good size, smooth, round fruit and a good yielder."

"John Baer" Three Weeks Earlier and Far Superior

Mr. William Peterson, Asotin Co., Wash., Aug. 13th, 1914, writes: "'John Baer' Tomatoes are far superior to two other well-known early varieties of Tomatoes. The 'John Baer' picked three weeks earlier and are far superior to the other two varieties in size, color and productiveness. Although we are having a long, hot, dry season, the 'John Baer' plants are holding up in fine shape."

"John Baer" Tomato Wins in Competition with Comet

Herman Bronschweig, Marlboro, Mass., writes Sept. 20th, 1914: "I bought some of your 'John Baer' Tomato last Winter and I must say it is far superior to any other Tomato. I grew 'John Baer' Tomato under glass and it produced more and better fruit than either the Comet or Dwarf Stone."

"John Baer"—3 Weeks Ahead of Any Other Tomato

Mr. E. T. Scott, Nottoway Co., Va., Aug. 24th, 1914, writes: "'John Baer' Tomatoes were ready for market three weeks before any other Tomato in our locality. I have been picking fine, large Tomatoes off of them for over two months. I had a very successful crop."

"John Baer" the Best Tomato in Kansas

Mr. H. W. Drake, Atchison, Kansas, Aug. 17th, 1914, writes: "The 'John Baer' Tomato was the earliest Tomato for its size of the five varieties I raised. It was much the best of all Tomatoes I have ever raised. 'John Baer' is early, large, smooth, good flavor, a good slicer, and a perfect canning Tomato. It is the best Tomato I know."

J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md. Gentlemen: Your Adv. of Feb. 6th in The Florist Exchange is some puff for "John Baer" Tomato, which is all true. I tried the "John Baer" last year and there was not one in your Adv. that had one on me.

From 620 plants I sold over 2½ tons of Tomatoes. Set 3 feet each way and trained to bamboo stakes trimmed to one shoot. When they become heavy with tomatoes, I tied the top of four stakes together as shown in the enclosed photo, and as the season was cold in the Spring could not set the plants until the last of May and commenced to market on the 17th of July. I raised Celery between the rows. Inclosed find check for 1 ounce of "John Baer" Tomato Seed.

Very truly,

J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md. Gentlemen: Glad to see your Adv. again, on "John Baer" Tomato Seed. I bought $1.00 worth of seed last year from you, all people gave me the laugh for paying such a price for Tomato Seed, but when they found me picking Big, Fine, Solid, Fine Tasting Fruit on the 3rd day of July, 1914, then all the neighbors came to see them. I could have sold all my fruit, but to please the "wise ones" I presented each with a nice basket of them. Out of 50 "John Baer" Plants I picked an average of 1½ bushels every other day. More on my other varieties, I did not average a small bushel a day. I saved 12 bushels of seed and best "John Baer" Tomatoes for seed, there wasn't a bushel seed in them to give you. I hope this will show you why I am not sorry to be sure I will have good old "John Baer." By me it is more than you claimed for it, in your last year's Adv. in The Florist Exchange.

Yours respectfully,
(Signed) W. J. MASS

Of Interest to Retail FloristsTHE SUCCESSFUL RETAIL STORE.

The florist business certainly needs the man who can create new and beautiful combinations with which to please the flower buyer, but more important than his to my mind, under present conditions is the man who possesses the qualities of a general, who is able to successfully conduct a retail establishment, calling to his aid all that the modern science of business can afford. The retailer today must be a good deal of a thinker, and if he is a big retailer, he must be more than a mere trader. But to tell how to conduct a successful retail store is indeed a complex problem, for if conditions were alike, the world over, then the same methods could be successfully applied the world over. No two stores are exactly the same in size or are operated under exactly the same conditions. There is a differentiation in every business; and store methods and store policies must be adapted to these varying conditions.

Advertising.

There are differences of opinion among retail florists as to the value of newspaper advertising. But whatever may be these differences, I feel assured that all men in business agree as to the value of publicity. Scientific publicity consists in pushing before the world's notice the things that the business man does better than others.

The newspaper is regarded as one of the best and by some as the very best medium of such publicity, but there are other mediums and many of them. Not least among the mediums of publicity is the customer himself, who, if well treated and well impressed, can be made to become an unconscious walking and talking advertisement, and one that is the most valuable. Some stores can profitably employ all mediums, but all stores can profitably employ as an advertising medium the pleased and satisfied customer.

Percentage of Profit.

Some of the reasons why the percentage of profit should be figured on the selling and not the cost price:

Because no profit is made until the sale is actually effected.

Because any allowance in percentage to customers are always from selling price.

Because the sales totals are always given in books of record. Cost totals are seldom, if ever, shown.

Because the percentage of expense of conducting business is based on the selling price. If you talk per cent. of profit on cost and per cent. of expense on the selling price, where do you arrive?

Because the remuneration of salesmen is figured on a certain percentage of the selling price.

Because, if you figure on the selling price, you can go to the cash drawer and say: "Five per cent. of that money is my profit." instead of saying "five per cent. of the goods which I sold for that money is my profit."

Enthusiasm.

The man who brings enthusiasm to his work has no need to fear failure.

Flower Market Reports

Business has been very BOSTON good, considering the times and general depression. Valentine's Day was a record-breaker with several retailers, one in particular disposing of at least 200,000 violets. Red roses went well, in fact all classes of stock found a favorable outlet. The wholesale houses were working overtime to fill the shipping orders. In short, the market is adjusting itself to conditions that are more satisfactory than has been the case since Christmas. American Beauties are now a bit short, the best stock bringing from $5.00 to $6.00 per dozen. The demand is not strong, there being enough to meet it in fancy and medium grades. The call for carnations took a jump at the beginning of this week and at this writing the sale for medium and fancy grades is very good. Some fine grades of orchids are being shipped to the market and are in fair demand by the retailers. Gardenias are not selling so well, although their quality is excellent. Sweet peas are coming in in increasing supply, especially the Spencer type. The call for violets has dropped considerably, but the demand is enough to maintain the price. Plant trade has fallen off considerably and prospects for increased business in this line seem rather poor. Freight charges for imported stock have jumped 400 per cent., making the importation of European stock extremely doubtful this spring. The demand for greens is steady, very little variation ever occurring for these goods.

Quite an active market BUFFALO was seen last week and the cause may be laid to the springlike weather and the near ending of weddings and other social gaieties. There was some shortage at the end of the week and good stock, especially colored, in carnations and roses for Valentine's day were on the short side. Roses had again shortened up considerably and there was a heavy demand for red and yellow, which at times could not be obtained. A fine lot of violets, also lily of the valley, freesia, mignonettes, daisies and other corsage flowers shared in the demand. Tulips have come on more heavily also Golden Spur and Von Sion daffodils and all had good sales. A few scattered weddings called for orchids and white Killarney and these were in fair supply. Saturday was a busy day for the trade and all were thankful for the little extra business obtained.

All the flowers coming CHICAGO into the Chicago market are selling now and at a good price. The supply cannot be said to be normal, however, for roses are still far below an average cut for February and American Beauties are very few. Red roses are especially scarce and an order for even a small number of them usually means a trip around the market to secure them. Carnations also are far from being the big product they were earlier in the season, and as with roses, the red ones are hardest to find. Freesia is a very popular flower this season and it is quite possible that the colonial bouquet, so much in vogue now is responsible for it, for it lends itself so gracefully to that form of arrangement. It is seen also in the florists' windows made up prettily with violets, in corsage bouquets. Bulbous flowers form a large part of the sales and the stock is excellent and prices are holding up well. Violet sales are quite satisfactory and the market is not overcrowded as in past seasons.

The market is in the CINCINNATI same firm condition as at the last writing. Supplies are still limited while the demand is steady and active. Valentine day business was very good, both locally and from out of town. The cuts of both roses and carnations are short of actual needs. Sweet peas, when good, meet with a splendid call.

Lilies and callas are selling well. Tulips, narcissus, Dutch hyacinths and freesia meet with their share of the popularity. Single violets may be enumerated among the best sellers. The lily of the valley market is only fair.

Market prices have NEW YORK held up nicely, but now that Valentine's day has passed along and Lent has come in prices have begun to decline all through the list. The fine spring-like weather of the past few days has contributed to that condition and if it continues an accumulation of stock seems inevitable. The quality generally is beyond criticism and on some lines of roses, carnations and violets it is nothing short of superb. A disquieting feature of the situation is the unprecedented low price on cattleyas. Never before at this season have these splendid flowers commanded so small a return or so little regard. We confess we are sorry to see them reduced to the position of common flowers and hope that the present conditions will quickly come to an end. We believe in "flowers for the multitude," but we draw the line at the cattleya in this respect and regret to see these aristocratic beauties of the floral world in the hands of the street fakir.

Valentine week

PHILADELPHIA here was probably as good as any we have experienced of late. It was fully up to the standard—as good as last year if not a little better, and both local and long-distance demand were better than the trade had dared to hope for. Red seemed to be the favorite color, and in that respect the occasion was a small echo of the Christmas time. Richmond roses were particularly in demand and there were hardly enough of these to go around. Some nice Hadleys came along and these also were quickly snapped up. There was a bit of a scramble, too, for good red carnations. Sweet peas went well especially in the pinks, lavenders and whites. There was one red but it was a dull color and had a touch of purple in it. The public did not want that shade even if they were a little crazy after red. So the growers will have to find us something brighter in red for next year. Lily of the valley was in better demand than it has been for some time. Violets were too plentiful—especially towards the end of the week. Early in the week they were scarce—a sure sign that growers were holding back. Violets are a sure-enough Valentine proposition but the "hold-back" has never paid and never will. It always has proved a boom-erang and hits the innocent as well as the guilty. Daffodils sold fairly well but they were very plentiful and a good many were left over at the wind up. White lilac was a favorite as was also Acacia pubescens. There was a good call for gardenias but not much doing in orchids. Cattleyas went fairly well but at low prices.

PITTSBURGH

It seems almost incongruous that this year of (dis) grace, 1915, which will probably go down as the worst of carnage and financial depression in the world's history, should be marked in at least local florists' circles as by far "the best Valentine Day of any." Such it was in Pittsburgh, however, the supply of flowers being unequal to the demand. With its own supply exhausted and nothing to draw on from the wholesale houses, the Blind Floral Company was obliged to stop work at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon; the A. W. Smith Company report that they exceeded their expected sale of violets, "150,000 strong," similar experiences being the rule rather than the exception with the other firms, both downtown, in the East End and on the North Side. Harvey C. Sheaff, manager for Mrs. E. A. Williams, attributes this unprecedented condition largely to the mild, balmy weather, so unusual in mid-February, added to the fact of St. Valentine's Day falling on Sunday (men of the younger generation following the example of their sires and grand-sires in devoting special week-end attention to their sweethearts). Apropos of this latter observation, however, it is a curious fact noted by all the retail people that each year finds fewer men purchasers, their ranks, fortunately, being more than filled by women. The psychology of this, so far, no one ventures to explain.

The wholesale houses reported a continued shortage of carnations and roses, American Beauties being practically "out of sight." Fortunately, however, for the latter, there is small demand. Lilies, too, are scarce, but there are plenty of cattleyas, as well as all bulbous stock. Primroses, this season, are largely supplementing cut flowers as gifts.

St. Valentine's Day

ST. LOUIS showed to great advantage here and the market improved greatly. The big demand was for violets and sweet peas and these were in plenty with prices considerably higher than early in the week. All other staples sold at the usual quotations and the market was well supplied in general.

Flower Market Reports

Two days of SAN FRANCISCO good weather have stimulated retail trade somewhat, but as a good many strikers are already coming in for the opening of the Exposition Feb. 29, the approach of St. Valentine's Day is also felt in the trade, as the occasion is being celebrated more generally than usual. Most of the stores are featuring special Valentine boxes and baskets, which already have a good sale. For such work short stock of all kinds is greatly in demand, and the wholesalers are doing well. Shipments of violets have been quite heavy, and local offerings at the moment are moderate, as the plants have had too much rain. Most bulb stock is now fairly plentiful, and daffodils, freesias, etc., are rather cheap. Tulips are in better supply, but still hold up well in price. Fruit blossoms of various kinds find a very fair demand, while blossoming acacia has suddenly become a prominent feature. Cinerarias are still something of a novelty, and some very fine plants are shown. Carnations are about holding their own. All varieties of roses continue scarce, and retailers find difficulty in getting enough for their requirements. The cut of gardenias continues good, but even more could be sold than are obtainable. Cattleyas are still plentiful, but move off rather better than last week; while an excellent cut of phalaenopsis is very well received. Sweet peas are shown only in a limited way, but the demand is not large.

The St. Valentine's WASHINGTON Day business this year equalled and perhaps exceeded the business done at the same time in previous years. This is due in part to the fact that the fourteenth fell on Sunday and was generally observed on that day as well as on Saturday and Monday. At times the stores closely resembled the Easter period, so good was the business. Stock, while not over-plentiful, was to be had in sufficient quantities with the possible exception of American Beauty roses. Cattleyas sold very well. Other favorites were sweet peas, violets, baby primrose, forgetmenots, yellow daisies and pansies, for there was a very good call for corsage bouquets. Lilies are not as plentiful as they have been. Up to the present week there has been an almost exceptional shortage of carnations, but a freer supply appeared just in time for Saturday's business. The basket trade was good, and, added to all of this, there were a number of good decorations and plenty of funeral work. Narcissi poeticus registered its arrival during the week. The sale of narcissi has been much better.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

The Proceedings of the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists has come to hand from the Secretary's office. It is much the largest publication ever issued by the society, comprising 350 pages, in addition to a number of full page illustrations of views in the Minneapolis and Boston Convention Gardens, together with folded diagrams of the layout of the two gardens. Mr. Young has incorporated a large amount of interesting and valuable matter in this report, which alone is well worth the annual cost of membership to any progressive horticulturist.

On Sunset Highways. A Book of Motor Rambles in California. By Thomas D. Murphy, California is in the limelight this year and Messrs L. C. Page & Co., of Boston, publishers, have started the year auspiciously with this captivating book on California scenery which will unquestionably enjoy a very large sale. The volume is embellished with 16 full page illustrations in full color from original paintings mainly by California artists and 46 duogravures from photographs of rare artistic excellence, also an automobile road map of the State. The chapters cover a wide stretch including the country round about Los Angeles, San Diego and the Imperial Valley, Santa Barbara and Old Monterey, San Francisco, Clear Lake Valley, San Antonio and La Pursima. Mountain grandeur, noble forests, flower carpeted valleys, orange groves, vineyards, ancient mission ruins, country byways, rugged passes and canyons, beaches, ranches and camps are all pictured to the mind vision of the reader in a manner which shows the author to be an ardent and romantic lover of nature. We can unreservedly commend the book as a most interesting and useful introductory guide to any of our readers who are contemplating a trip to the Sunset Land this year. The price is $5.00 net and the book can be supplied from the office of HORTICULTURE.

The Princess and the Clan. This is another publication just out, by The Page Company of Boston. The name of this publishing house is a sufficient guarantee of excellence, whether of fiction or history. The writer of this story is Margaret R. Piper already well known as the author of "Sylvia's Experiment," "The Cheerful Book" and other productions of merit. As a birthday or vacation gift for a young lady especially, "The Princess and the Clan" will just fill the bill. It is beautifully bound and illustrated. Price $1.50 net.

Just send for a copy for yourself.

Stumm & Walter Co., New York.—General Catalogue for Spring 1915. A handsome catalogue displaying flowers of Salpiglossis superbissima and King asters as cover adornments in colors. 150 pages of illustrated lists presented in attractive and comprehensive form. A publication which will interest and capture the public wherever it reaches them.

Galloway Brothers & Co., Waterloo, Ia.—General Catalogue for 1915 of Galloway "Hi-Quality" Pure Seeds. This is certainly "some catalogue" and is one of the liveliest and most enterprising stunts in its special line that we have ever seen. There is much that is unique and novel in the make-up of its 140 pages, not the least of which is the use of colors in many of the numerous illustrations with which it is embellished. The typographical work is really exceptional and if the contents do not wake up the agricultural and gardening public then they must be indeed dead. An ingenious trading scrip sheet goes out with each catalogue.

South American Sheep and Goat Manure

We have just landed the Third 1000 Ton Cargo in New England and it is certainly as good or even better than the last. If South American Goat and Sheep Manure had not come up to the expectations of the growers who bought the first, or if we could not guarantee to furnish the same high grade article, which has built up for itself and for us such a splendid reputation from the very first start, we would never have had to send a ship after another 1000 tons. That's plain. We have an abundant supply for New England and it is our aim to keep this right up to the high standard you know it to be. It is ground fine and is clean to handle, makes an ideal liquid manure, which is safe. WE GUARANTEE OUR S. A. S. & G. M. TO BE ABSOLUTELY PURE. Spring is near and plants need feeding. SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:

$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

ObituaryM. J. Miranda.

Mortimer Josiah Miranda, one of the oldest florists of East New York and Queens, died at his residence, No. 6 North Vermont street, East New York on February 10.

John B. Hanft.

John B. Hanft, founder and for sixty years a member of the firm of Hanft Bros., florists, died at his home, 125 E. 87th street, New York City, on February 10, aged 83 years. His first store was located in Grand street, in 1854. Mr. Hanft leaves a widow, five sons and five daughters.

Lucius H. Mann.

Mann Bros. of Randolph, Mass., are receiving the sympathy and condolences of their friends upon the death of their father, who passed away last Sunday evening, after a shock received from a fall two weeks before. The late Mr. Mann was about 77 years old and had been connected with his sons' business for a number of years. The funeral took place Wednesday from the home in Randolph.

Richard Groves.

Richard Groves, formerly in the retail florist business as the Park Floral Co., at San Francisco, Cal., was struck by the Southern Pacific Stockton flyer Saturday night, January 30, at San Leandro, Cal., and was almost instantly killed. Mr. Groves was born in Atchison, Kans., in 1870, where his father has been in the florist business for half a century. Since disposing of his retail business last year he has been engaged in the wholesale trade in San Leandro.

Jesse E. Northrup.

Jesse E. Northrup, for many years head of the firm of Northrup, King & Co., seedsmen, Minneapolis, Minn., died in that city, Feb. 4, aged 58 years. He was born in Saline, Mich., Dec. 1, 1857, and entered the seed business in 1879. In 1884 he removed to Minneapolis, since which time his name has been associated with the wholesale seed business of that city. He was prominent in the affairs of the American Seed Trade Association, and served as its president in 1901-1902. He is survived by one son and three daughters.

IF YOU ONLY KNEW what a good save the METROPOLITAN PATENTED is, you would use no other. It is made of cast iron and will not rust. That part of your greenhouse which in other constructions is the weakest becomes the strongest. Not this alone, it is ice-clearing and carries all the water of condensation from the inside, and it is so constructed that almost the entire end of the bar is exposed to the air, thereby preventing decay. Only one screw, about two inches from the end, is all that is necessary to secure the bars. For side stationary glass, wood headers are absolutely unnecessary, thereby causing no shade. Zinc glass stops are not necessary—the eave is made with a lug to prevent the glass from slipping. Let your next house be built with a Metropolitan Patented Iron Wall Construction. You will never regret it. Our price and service are right.

ADVANCE CO., RICHMOND, IND.

Our Year Old Reconstructed Curved Eave Construction

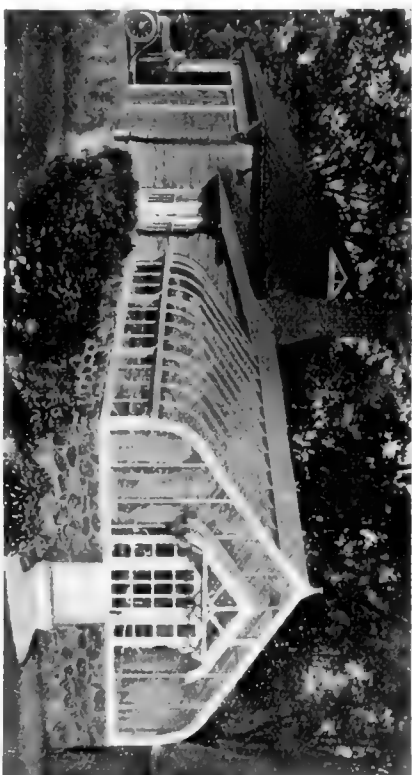

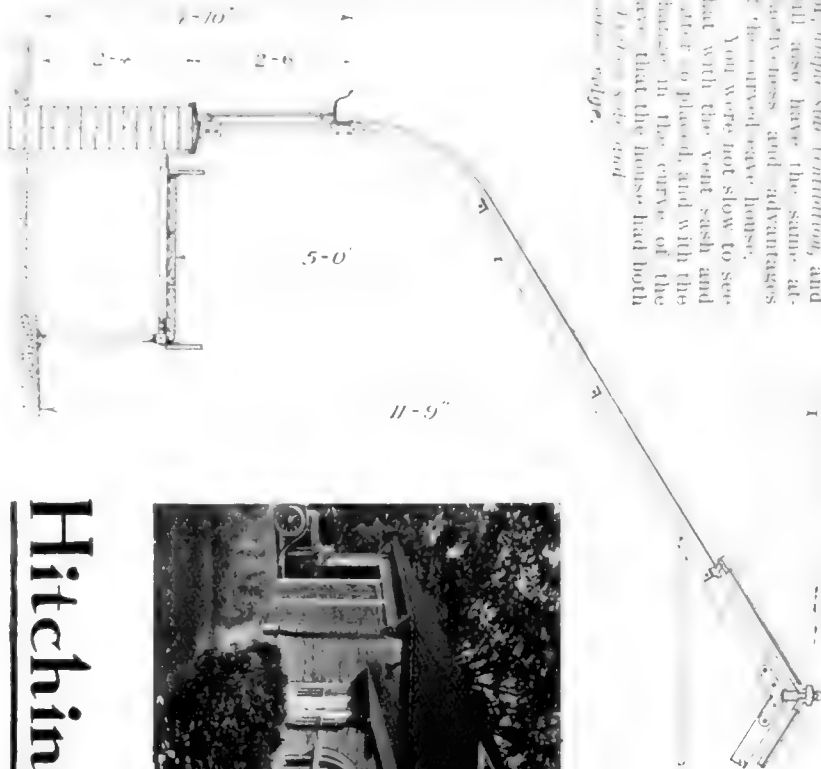

MANY of you who attended the New York Flower Show last March saw for the first time our Reconstructed Curved Eave Greenhouse Construction, for private places.

You saw that we were the first to successfully overcome the objections so many of you have had to the curved eave house, because of its insufficient side ventilation, as furnished by wall vents.

You saw that in taking the cutter from the top of the foundation wall and placing it at the eave, and then hinging the side vent sash to it, you could once again have the much longed for ample side ventilation, and still also have the same advantages of the curved eave house.

You were not slow to see that with the vent sash and sash roller placed, and with the balance in the curve of the eave, that the house had both a full side and a full ridge.

You will see from this detail that the new Hitchings & Co. curved eave allows for side ventilation under a foot more head-room over the benches and the ridge is a foot higher.

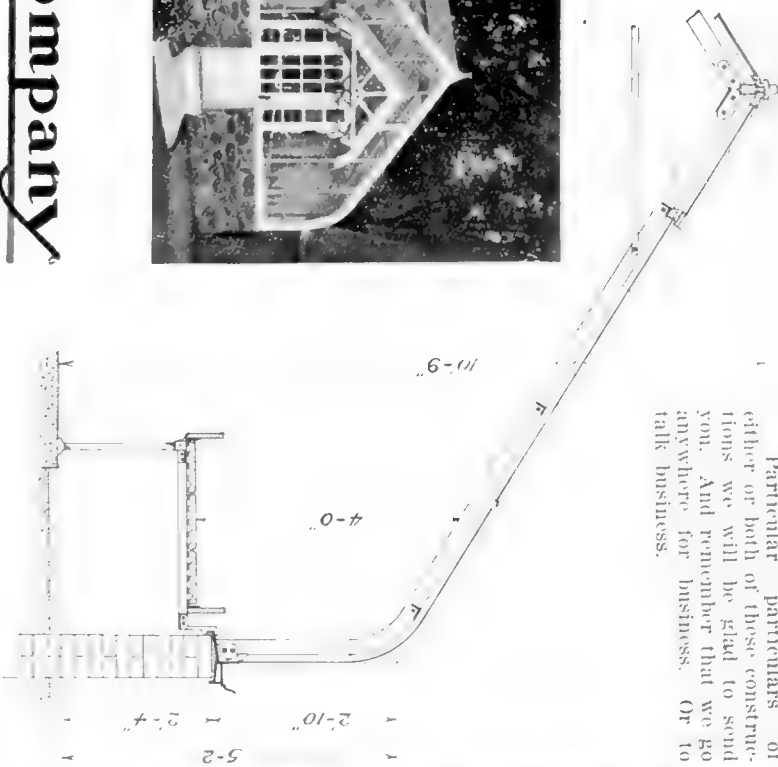

These are two things which have never before been so satisfactorily accomplished with the curved eave construction.

We have built several of these houses in the last year and, so superior and thoroughly satisfactory have they proved in every way, that you just mark our word, and see if other greenhouse builders will not soon be following our lead and be offering houses strikingly similar to ours.

Just as we were the first, in our Reconstructed Commercial Construction, to build a house with the rafters spaced 12 feet 1 1/2 inches apart, instead of the old time 8 feet 4 inches, just so we were the first to Reconstruct the Curved Eave Construction.

Particular particulars of either or both of those constructions we will be glad to send you. And remember that we go anywhere for business. Or to talk business.

This old style has got the broad sweep of the new construction—but is inclined to be "squeaky" and contracted.

Burpee Quality Flower Seeds

Conditions in Europe preclude the possibility of securing flower seed from that source within any reasonable time. When stocks become depleted during the season, an American source of supply of undoubted integrity is highly essential.

Fordhook Farms—America's greatest and most complete trial grounds—are famous for the finest strains of flower seeds, especially Antirrhinums, Balsams, Begonias, Celosia Plumosa, Perennial Chrysanthemum, Coleus, Polichos, Gladiolus, Gourds, Heliotrope, Marigolds, Morning Glories, Petunias, Phlox Drummondii, Poppies, Portulaca, Salvia, Sunflower, Torenia and Zinnia.

Floradale Farm—the California home of Sweet Peas—produces in addition to tons of Sweet Pea seeds the very finest strains of Centaurea Imperialis, Cosmos, Dahlias, Delphiniums, Dimorphotheca, Eschscholtzias, Hollyhocks, Marigolds, Pelargoniums, Nasturtiums, Petunia, Pentstemon and Verbena.

Sunnybrook Farm in South Jersey has produced for a number of years exceedingly fine strains of Petunia, Poppies, Dahlias, Ipomoeas and Dolichos.

With these vast quantities of flower seeds at our command, we are in a position to offer to the trade superior stocks of seeds which have formerly been secured in Europe. When in the market for the very best strains of flower seeds, kindly submit a list of your requirements for quotation.

Please bear in mind that we are in no position to offer in a wholesale way (as we are entirely sold out) the following: Morning Glory Tall Mixed, Ricinus Zanzibarensis, Marvel-of-Peru Mixed, Vincas and Thunbergia Mixed.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Prope.

Azaleas

The azaleas for Easter should now be placed in a slightly warmer house. As a rule, six weeks in an average night temperature of 58 to 60 degrees will suffice to bring any of the naturally late varieties into bloom, but there are some sorts, such as Deutsche Perle, Mme. Petrick, Apollo, and a few others which will require but little forcing. Spray the plants over twice a day during the bright weather. Discontinue this as soon as the flowers begin to open; give ventilation on all good days; see that none are allowed to become dry at the roots; give plenty of room between the plants. The azaleas should show color about three weeks before Easter so they can be hardened off in a low temperature. It is always better to hurry them now, rather than late in the season, as a few days in a cold house before being sold makes them better fitted to withstand vicissitudes. Carefully pinch out any leaf growth that may be showing around the swelling of the flower buds, which would only be at the cost of producing food flowers.

Bulbs for Easter

There is not much trouble in forcing bulbs, especially if you know your stock is furnished with an abundance of active roots. It is not always easy to time the various species under this head so as to be just right for Easter. In forcing these bulbs at this season it is well to figure on from three to five weeks. Tulips need about 70 degrees until the bloom is developed and should then be gradually hardened off in a cool house. Always select a cool bottom to place them on but a warm atmospheric temperature overhead. Narcissi and hyacinths are better when grown slowly in a temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees with a moderate bottom heat. Daffodils, hyacinths, tulips and others belonging to this class that are buried outdoors or under protection of some frame, should be brought into a cool house not later than the 25th of this month. When fully developed they should be placed on a cool bench in a semi-dark place to bring about an exquisite blending of their delicate tints which enhances their value.

Chrysanthemums

Give the stock plants a place well up to the glass and in full sun and they will give you fine sturdy cuttings. They will want a temperature not lower than 50 degrees at night, with 10 to 15 degrees higher with sunshine. Provide fresh sand to place the cuttings in, and when they are in the sand they should be kept just moist enough to prevent their wilting. When they have made roots about half an inch or so they should be potted off without delay. It only permanently weakens cuttings to remain too long in the propagating bed. For the first potting you can use quite a bit of leaf-mold in the soil as the young roots delight in it. Shade until they become used to the sun and give plenty of ventilation.

Easter Lilies

From this out lilies will consume great quantities of water. They should now be well formed in crown growth. By the first week in March they should plainly show their buds clustering in the heart of the crown. If this is the case they will be in good time when held at a steady pace temperature of 60 to 65 degrees. Any that show an inclination to become stunted or evince slowness in growth after that date should be sorted out subjected to 10 or 15 degrees higher, which usually will bring most of them in line with the rest, provided, of course, that they were sufficiently furnished with roots. To enlarge the flowers and give color to the foliage, liquid feeding once or twice a week will prove a great benefit. Lilies of the Japan longiflorum class, only recently started into active growth, if well rooted, can still be forced into bloom by Easter, but need driving hard. A gradual daily rise in temperature until by the second week in March the 75 degree mark is reached and then steadily adhered to will promote development.

Gladioli for Memorial Day

It is time now to plant gladioli for Memorial Day. Give them a bench in a house kept at 48 to 50 degrees at night. Use such varieties as Brenchleyensis, Augusta and America, which are all excellent sellers. Do not use any fresh manure which will come in contact with the bulbs. If you have no old manure, try fine bone and pulverized sheep manure, incorporating them well with the soil. Of course, so much depends on climatic conditions that it is not easy to hit the date just right with this crop. Again, the bulbs do not all flower at one time, which is, generally speaking, an advantage. The market for gladioli spikes is usually good in April and May, and fairly good in June, and there is not much likelihood of spikes being wasted even though a good many of them flower before and after Memorial Day. In order to secure an early crop of such varieties as Colvillei The Bride, Peach Blossom and Blushing Bride, every week or ten days bring a few flats into a house kept at 48 to 50 degrees at night.

Sowing Moonflowers

Seed should be sown now. They can be sown in any light sandy mixture and placed in a warm house until they come up, when they will do better in a temperature of about 60 degrees than when kept at 70. When large enough to handle, pot off and grow on.

Rhipsalis pachyptera, Pfeiff

RHIPSA LIS PACHYPTERA

Reproduced by permission of Brooklyn Botanic Garden.

The genus Rhipsalis, whilst not possessing any great claim to horticultural consideration, contains one or two species that are worthy of culture on account of the weird and interesting forms that they assume.

Rhipsalis pachyptera, a photograph of which, taken from a plant in the Brooklyn Botanic Garden, appears herewith, presents a rather pleasing appearance when in bloom. Its blossoming period is late winter or early spring, and the flowers are produced in great abundance along the edges of the flattened leaf-like stems. Owing to the unsuitable background these flowers do not show up so well in the photograph as they should do. The color of the flowers is creamy yellow, and they have numerous, conspicuous, white stamens.

The plant is a native of Brazil and has been in culti-ated for a number of years. It was figured in the Botanical Magazine for 1828 under the name of Cactus sp.

Its culture is easy; it potted in open soil, containing a proportion of peat, and grown in a greenhouse with a minimum temperature of 50 degrees. It should be given a sunny position. Propagation is readily effected by means of cuttings of the joints, taken from the plants as soon as they are finished flowering, and inserted in sand. Like most of the Cactaceous plants they are benefited by being plunged out-of-doors during the summer months and, in the case of the subject now under consideration, it results in the joints assuming a reddish color.

Montague Tree

Brooklyn Botanic Garden.

The Chinese Tree Lilac

The Japan tree lilac created quite a furor when it was introduced and Jackson Dawson's favorite one which he raised from seed made a remarkable showing and was a mark for the kodak for a long time. But after years of acquaintance with both we have decided preference for the Chinese—Pekinensis. With us it is a more rapid grower and a far more satisfactory bloomer. The foliage is finer, the twigs are smaller. We have some 17 years old which are seven inches through and 20 feet tall and in summer they are overwhelmed with great masses of snowy white, honey-scented flowers. Sixteen years ago we sent one to Mr. Campbell, publisher of "The Fruit Grower," St. Joseph, Mo., and he reports it as 11 inches in diameter and 25 feet tall. It is destined to be a foot through or more and 50 feet tall. It endures our hot dry weather better than the Japs, which are somewhat inclined to sunscald. For lining walks or as an individual tree it is a grand success.

HOLLY CULTURE.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

My Dear Sir: In Mr. Vincent's lecture at Easton on February 10 he referred to the question of holly trees and their coming value. I am writing to ask in what way they will probably become valuable and how they might be propagated. I have had poor experience in transplanting them and wonder if they could be secured from the seed of the berry, and if so, when they should be planted out. It seems to be hard to find a season for transplanting them. I have some ground that would be adapted to them.

Thanking you for any information you may give me, Yours very truly,

Ma

J. B. S.

In answer to the foregoing inquiry in regard to holly trees, etc., I would say that there is no doubt of the coming value for good well-berried holly, as the supply is getting more limited each year, more by wanton carelessness in cutting than necessary; the whole tree being slashed down to obtain a few scattering limbs. A great deal of the holly cut at random is of poor quality and very little is obtained for it, but a good brand always did and will command a good price, especially in the near future.

My reference has much to do with the natural plantations, much of this land not being suitable for the best farming purposes. These natural plantations would require but little attention except to keep some other growth from smothering the holly out. This could be easily accomplished by cutting such trees or bushes out as were crowding the holly crop.

As to the transplanting; most people try for too large a bush; small bushes transplant easier and are more apt to grow. Good seed gathered from the best bearing trees can be sown in a bed in the wood lot as soon as mature; not sown very deep, so that the winter's freezing will easily reach them. These do not always come up till the second spring. These, when young, can easily be transplanted and even then after they get a few years' growth on them can be handled much better than wild ones dug up, and will make an appearance after a while. Please do remember that the holly tree runs in sexes and you will find large trees in the woods that have not been cut simply because they were male trees and never bore any berries. You have got to have a few of these in a grove or the insect will fly away hunting other pollen and neglect yours.

I hear a party advocating the moving of large trees of holly and other varieties of trees growing wild. This is a hard and expensive job if followed out under his suggestions, which I would not advise. The best time to transplant these from the woods would be early after the first hard frost. Protect and shade them with pine or cedar brush for a limited time.

R. VINCENT, JR.

Whitemarsh, Md.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

Mr. Bennet, of Toulouse, France, was the first man on record to select and sow seeds of the chrysanthemum; this was in 1826.

One of the best formulae for the compost heap for roses is the following: First a layer of sod one foot thick, then a six-inch layer of cow manure with a good sprinkle of air-slacked lime over same, then another foot layer of sod and again a six-inch layer of cow manure with a good sprinkle of air-slacked lime, and top off with from four to six inches of fine sod.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers on life with any of the topics presented on this page will be promptly received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the Editor of HORTICULTURE.

Crowding Roses

With the coming spring there will be a big demand for bedding stock and many growers will be tempted to crowd as much of it as they can among the roses. This may pay the small grower with two or three greenhouses, but we have reason to doubt it, and if we were to grow stock of this kind we would take out a poor bench of roses, and devote the entire space to it. The plants thus grown will be a credit to the place, for with any care at all they should come along nicely. Plants that are placed in among the roses will soon run up thin and sprawly, and will be lacking in quality that is so essential to gain a reputation or name in business these days. The roses will not be helped any by the stock being crowded in on them and will soon show that they do not like it. Better give the benches to the one thing, and grow that one thing well. It pays, as has been proved time and time again. Growers who grow one thing and grow it well, or grow several in separate houses, and grow these well, are the most successful, as we can see by watching some of the most prosperous places.

Ventilation

With the warm weather approaching, we get a warm day now and then, yes, several days in a group, that will be like spring, and if the houses are not looked after well, they will get quite warm. This should be avoided, and the thermometer should not be allowed to rise to over 78 degrees at the most or the plants will get soft, and will be worn out much before their time in the spring. Then, too, the flowers will be small if the houses are too warm, which will help reduce the quality of the stock, and the price will drop. Do not close the houses down tight at night unless there is a storm raging or a heavy wind blowing. A crack of air with heat turned on in the house will do wonders in keeping the plants hardy and vigorous, and will go a great way to prevent mildew, which is very common early in the spring.

Mulching

Although it is still early to depend on getting any real good weather, it will be necessary to watch the front of all benches to see that there are no places that are needing mulch very badly. Should there be it will be best to mulch these places, as the soil will dry out so fast that it will always be dry, and the result will be that the plants in these parts will become stunted, and will be very hard to get going again. It would be harmful to mulch the whole house, and will be better just to touch up. Bone meal can be applied now, for the plants will get the good of it before they are removed.

Houses for Summer Flowering

If there are any houses that are not doing very well, and roses are wanted early in the summer, it will be a good idea to cut plants down, and then let them come up fresh. Before this is done, dry the plants off gradually, also drop the temperature gradually until the houses run 54 at night if it is possible to get them as low as that. Then cut the plants off, and remove all loose soil and old mulch from around them, and let them dry off quite well. Begin first to water right around the plants and syringe very lightly two or three times a day on clear days until the growth starts. Then be careful with the water, and try to keep the plants on the dry side all the time. When the growths are an inch long mulch lightly with good manure, taking care not to put on too thick. This will send the shoots right up, after which it will be quite easy to keep them going. As soon as any buds appear, pinch them out while they are small, until the plants have quite a little wood, or until the stems are the desired length. The plants can then receive liquid manure as fast as they will take it, and they certainly will take it, once they start growing. Do not be worried over their sickly appearance right after they are cut down. As long as they are not over-watered they will come along very good. Keep them cool until after they are well leaved and branched.

MELONS UNDER GLASS.

Gentlemen:—Last year I planted several varieties of English and the American Emerald Gem melons on the same bench, and while the former varieties gave a good crop, the Emerald Gem did not produce a fruit, although it made a fine growth. Both had same treatment, and the same experience happened on every batch. Outside the Emerald Gem did fine, from the same packet of seed. Will be pleased to get the opinion of some of your readers on the above.

Faithfully yours,
T. A. L.

In answer to T. A. L.'s inquiry, I would say that the reason for the different results as described lies chiefly in the type of melon. The English Emerald Gem is raised from a type that has been selected and hybridized to produce a high class melon for use in the greenhouses in England, the climate being unsuited for raising melons outdoors except in frames, the hot season not being long enough to mature the fruit. The American Emerald Gem is a melon from a type that has been improved for outdoor use, being of a more hardy nature suitable for outdoor conditions, consequently when it is planted in the confined and humid atmosphere of the melon house the change of conditions result in a fast growing plant with the tendency to produce a mass of foliage, in preference to a fruitful type of plant. If an early crop of American Emerald Gem is desired the best way would be to sow in April and plant out in frames in May, removing the sash after the hot season has commenced, making a gain of a few weeks in the crop. As a companion to the English Emerald Gem, T. A. L. would be well repaid to grow Sutton's Perfection, which, when well-grown, is as near perfection as a well grown melon can be.

J. W. SMITH.

Referring to the inquiry about the green rose in our last week's issue, we learn that this curious freak R. viridiflora can be supplied by Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., who make it a point to carry a few of all these uncommon and odd things to accommodate all who call for them.

An interesting communication from "A Reader" has just come to hand. But the writer thereof failed to send his name which, under our rules is indispensable with any article we publish. Will "A Reader" please comply?

probable unfriendliness on the part of the retail dealers towards such a movement. While the inference may be quite correct as regards a considerable section of the retail trade, yet it surely is not true of all, for there are to be found among the retail trade of every city many firms who in their regard for sterling business principles and modern financial practice have no superiors anywhere, whose approving co-operation would be given to any reasonable plan for the improvement of present conditions and who would welcome the general adoption and enforcement of proper credit regulations, one tendency of which would be to weed out unscrupulous and irresponsible business competition. The installation of rules to prevent the abuse of trade credit will be more easily accomplished and its provisions more cheerfully complied with if the element of antagonism between interested parties is eliminated as much as possible and, if the proposition of the wholesale dealers is presented in such spirit and manner, no organization of retailers can find justification for opposition or complaint. Events of frequent occurrence in the past have emphasized the great need of some better system of credit giving and when this shall have become a fact it will contribute not a little to the welfare of both buyers and sellers.

The Panama-Pacific Exposition is now a reality and for months to come the great tide of travel will trend westward to the City of the Golden Gate. The great distance which a majority of the present members of the Society of American Florists and kindred organizations must travel in order to attend the sessions of the annual convention this year will materially deplete the attendance from the older sections but there are favorable indications for a much better showing than has been generally believed to be possible. The wearisome features of such a journey across the continent in mid-summer can be greatly modified and to a very considerable extent eliminated by the social advantages offered in the several plans which are now being matured for travelling together and the breaking up of the monotony of the long trip by visits to places of note en route. It is quite likely that there will be at least two of these main parties, one composed of those who prefer to start sufficiently early to spend some eight or ten days in sight-seeing on the westward trip and the other for those who desire to go straight through and limit their indulgence in the stop-over privilege to the homeward trip. Thus all tastes may be fairly gratified without sacrificing the pleasure of agreeable company. On behalf of the gentlemen who are giving so much of their time and best thought to the perfecting of these itineraries for the general comfort and pleasure we would urge upon our readers who contemplate going to San Francisco the desirability of giving prompt consideration to the plans presented and making known their decision as early as possible, for the preparatory labor in the effort to please and accommodate all in such a proposition is far from simple.

A Beautiful Cattleya Specimen

Our cover illustration shows a remarkable specimen of the lovely white-petalled Cattleya Mossiae Reineckiana which flowered as shown in the Julius Roehrs Co., establishment at Rutherford, N. J., and is said to be the finest blooming plant of this variety ever seen. When photographed it carried sixteen leads bearing sixty-eight flowers of exceptional size, many of them being seven inches across.

For better business methods

Many of our readers will probably have noticed in our account last week of the formation of a protective association by the wholesale dealers and growers in Boston, the statement that no retail dealers were present at the meeting. Of course, this was quite natural as the business in view primarily concerned the wholesale trade. Yet the mention of their absence would seem to mildly intimate

A CARNATION TRIO

S. J. GODDARD.

A visit to Goddard's range in Framingham is really a visit to a carnation show, for the blooms to be seen there are at all times of high grade. A varied stock is grown, consisting chiefly of carnations, and including pot plants, callas, freesias, sweet peas, fuchias, etc., which are needed to supply a large local retail trade.

Mr. Goddard likes his latest house, of King construction, and in his opinion it is one of the best houses on the range. His carnations are all grown on benches. Pink Delight is one of his favorite varieties and White Perfection does better with him than any other white carnation. Sweet peas are grown on the posts and ivy covers the soil beneath the benches, so but little space is wasted here. We noted some ten promising seedlings, all in shades of red, which Mr. Goddard is confident will produce results in the near future. These are all from Domer's seedling No. 5908. The best one seemed to be No. 16, a maroon, prolific, large blooms, good color, etc., which will be tested for a few years yet before putting it on the market.

To every bunch of carnations that goes to the market a label is attached, on which is printed the name of the firm, the number of blooms and the name of the variety. This is indeed a step in the right direction, making his product different from the rest and sought for because of the high quality that the tag guarantees.

W. R. NICHOLSON.

"A chip of the old block" is Wm. R. Nicholson of Framingham. What his father did by way of the carnation, Nicholson Junior is doing and more. There are ten houses, covering about 50,000 sq. ft., three of them big Lord & Burnham structures. One was the first L. & B. house built in this vicinity. The first houses built by the elder Mr. Nicholson in 1890 were up-to-date and big for that time, but as they stand today, 20x100 feet, they are rather puny edifices in comparison.

White Wonder, Beacon, Matchless, Benora and Pink Delight are the best commercial varieties in W. R. Nicholson's opinion. These are grown in wood benches, although he stated that beds, if made well, were just as good. These benches are of cypress, about 17 years old and still solid. In his opinion the only advantage to concrete is that it looks better.

Mignonette and freesias are also grown here in large quantities. Spencer sweet peas are grown on the posts. The mignonette is of a particularly good strain. Yellow marguerites, callas and gypsophila make up the rest of the stock, all of which is disposed of at wholesale.

The storage house is an interesting place. The walls are partitioned off, so that all around the room there is an air space which connects with a ventilator from the outside. The air in the room is thus kept fresh and cool all the time.

The propagating house is being widened and instead of running the benches lengthwise, they are to be built across the width of the house, making small benches which can be individually regulated as to temperature, etc. Mr. Nicholson also contemplates building a large house in place of two small ones that now stand.

J. A. NELSON.

J. A. Nelson of Framingham, Mass., started into business about eleven years ago with one little house. Today there are eight houses, in which a variety of stock is grown. The principal crop is carnations. His product was exhibited for the first time at Buffalo last month and for a first attempt Mr. Nelson was quite successful. About 15,000 blooms are cut each week, shipping to Boston daily. Three small houses are devoted to single violets.

We noted locust posts on the sides of one house. These were quite irregular and seemed out of place in a modern greenhouse, but Mr. Nelson states that locust posts are just as durable as cypress, in fact, more so. The glass in this house was laid the long way across, making a very light house. All the houses were put up locally, only the materials being secured from the big construction firms.

White Enchantress is the best white and Harry Fenn the best crimson grown here. The latter made a particularly fine showing. All the newest varieties are to be seen blooming in profusion. Mr. Nelson states that Alice Coombs was the best of the new carnations shown at Buffalo. S. L. F.

BRITISH HORTICULTURE.

Items of Interest.

After 34 years valuable service on the Fruit and Vegetable Committee of the Royal Horticultural Society, George Bunyard, of Maidstone, a well known fruit expert, has resigned. His colleagues have shown their appreciation of his services by presenting him with an illuminated address and gold scarf pin.—The Royal Horticultural Society's spring flower show has been fixed to take place at Chelsea on May 18, 19 and 20. The summer show will be held at Holland House, Kensington, on July 6, 7 and 8.—"The Sweet Pea Annual," issued by the National Sweet Pea Society, has recently been published. It is crammed with informative articles as to this increasingly popular flower from the pens of the leading experts. It is pointed out that the official trials have not yet revealed any reliable cure for the dreaded streak disease. Not one of the preparations tested had any value in preventing or checking the disease. At the annual meeting of the National Chrysanthemum Society, the report presented showed that although the Society's operations were interfered with last year owing to the war, all the liabilities had been met out of the current revenue. The following officers were elected: President, Sir Albert Kaye Rollit; chairman, T. Bevan; vice-chairman, E. F. Hawes; treasurer, John Green; foreign secretary, C. Harman Payne; auditors, A. H. Stevens and W. Wallis; secretary, R. A. Witty.—N. N. Sherwood, head of the firm of Hurst & Sons, wholesale seed merchants, has been appointed a magistrate for Essex—a famous seed growing country. W. H. ADSETT.

FEAST OF REASON AT PHILADELPHIA.

A Farmers' Institute meeting of The State Board of Agriculture of Pennsylvania, under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and The Florists' Club of Philadelphia, will be held in Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, on Friday, March 5th and Saturday, March 6th, 1915. Afternoon sessions 2 to 5 P. M.; evening sessions, 7.30 P. M.

The bill of fare for this event is "some entertainment"—and all free! Don't miss it. George W. Kerr, James Boyd, Robert Pyle, Dr. Huey, and others are to add liveliness and variety to the splendid catering of the professors from the state department. This is a revival of our dear old friend Edwin Lonsdale's pet hobby, and the first that Philadelphia has had in about eight years. There will be lantern views Friday evening. Take in these movies—and bring the family. Don't forget the date, Friday and Saturday, March 5th and 6th.

HAY FEVER AND GOLDEN ROD.

Editor of HORTICULTURE:

Dear Sir:—Anent your fling at the hay-fever victims, who believe that the golden rod, the oxeye daisy, and other fall flowers of the composite type are responsible for their discomforts:—If you ever get the hay-fever, you'll not believe any such thing.—you'll know it, and there'll not anybody have to tell you about it, either. There probably is also a predisposing cause resident in the patient himself; but that predisposing cause will not produce the hay-fever except in the sphere of influence of those flowers, nor will the affliction persist, even in the height of the season, more than two days after the patient passes beyond that sphere of influence.

I do not blame you, however, for your attitude toward the proposed legislation. I spent a season, years ago, opposite a daisy patch of surpassing beauty on the top of the old Audover hill, and I have feelings about those flowers myself. My attitude toward the legislation would be: if a majority, or a near majority, of the people have hay-fever, destroy the flowers; if only an occasional sufferer, let the state furnish him a sea voyage, or a trip to the Berkshire Hills, or to the Maine woods. The hay-fever is awful; I know, for I am a victim.

Very respectfully,
E. C. L.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS' CLUB.

Fifteen seemed a small crowd for us to have on a visiting trip, but weather conditions have considerable to do with this club, as quite a few of us are dependent upon ourselves for the care of our greenhouses, and they are, of course, the first consideration.

Manheim and the Hostetters was the objective point, and in a general way the three places all owned by Hostetters were in good shape and the stock looking like a money-making proposition. Sweet peas of the Spencer type planted alongside of the older sorts demonstrated the paying qualities of the Spencer's better than a day's argument could have done. At E. P. Hostetter's many had four perfect flowers to a stem and stems fifteen inches long. He also had white and yellow snapdragon of exhibition quality, Primula Forbesii by the thousand for cuttings, four large house plants to Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus, double sweet alyssum wherever there was room to plant it, and carnations house after house of them. He is very favorably impressed with Matchless and has quite a large planting of Georgeous and Philadelphia, both of which are giving satisfactory results. Victory for a red and Winona for a pink are grown here in quantity and considered good money makers.

The meeting was started promptly at 7.30 p. m. and a grand exhibition of cut flowers staged. A. J. Guttman sent Laura Weber and Peace, both attracting favorable attention, but the white one, Peace, seemed to receive the most honors. F. Dorner & Sons Co., sent Pink Sensation and Good Cheer. Pink Sensation was at once declared to be head and shoulders over all others. S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. sent Akehurst in good shape and a very good looking red from C. H. Frey, of Lincoln, Neb. The latter certainly has some keeping qualities to be sent to Philadelphia reshipped to Lancaster and make a good showing. Peter Fisher sent Alice and it came through in fine form. E. Winkler, of Wakefield, Mass., sent Morning Glow, which looks as if it might be a productive variety. Among the local growers, Ira Landis, of Paradise, had a fine vase of Benora, one of Princess Dagmar and Yellow Prince, also an exceptional fine lot of Freesia Purity. Willis Girvin, of Leola, had Gloriosa, Matchless and Mrs. C. W. Ward. Elmer Weaver, of Ronks, had a vase of his white seedling, which is considered a good one by our growers here. H. D. Rohrer had a vase of his scarlet and Amos Rohrer, of Strasburg, a vase of White Wonder. The paper of the evening was a resume of the Buffalo Convention by Albert M. Herr and brought out quite an interesting discussion.

The visiting committee have outlined a trip to take in Stroud's at Stafford, the houses at North Wales, Heacock's and the Weiss establishment at Hatboro, returning to Philadelphia in time for the meeting of the Philadelphia Club, March 2. On March 13 a trip will be made to Christiana, leaving Lancaster 12.15 noon and stopping at the places en route on the return trip home. April 15 will be observed as Ladies' Night, and on March 18 Charles H. Grakelow, of Philadelphia, has consented to give us one of his inimitable talks on the business.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF PARK SUPERINTENDENTS.

A meeting of the executive committee together with a number of local members of the American Association of Park Superintendents was held on Saturday, February 20, at the office of Mr. Cabot Ward, Commissioner of Parks of Manhattan, at the Municipal Building, New York City. The following named gentlemen were present: President G. X. Amrhy, New Haven; W. H. Coldwell, Chas. Haible and Mr. Ross, Newburgh, N. Y.; J. B. Shea and W. J. Stewart, Boston; Fred C. Green, Providence, R. I.; M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J.; John H. Beatty, H. W. Merkel, Frank L. Hamilton, John F. Walsh, E. A. Miller, W. C. Grassan, Geo. V. Nash and G. H. Burgevine, all of New York City.

The main business was a discussion of the date for the summer convention which is to be held at San Francisco this year and the most acceptable route to select. It was voted that August 18 be the day for the meeting of the Association at such hour as will conflict least with sessions of the S. A. F. M. C. Ebel presented an itinerary which met with general approval. It provides for stopping at various points of interest both going and coming. The plan is to constitute Chicago as the general starting point. Parties from points east of Chicago will round up at that city in season to start on the tour on the evening of August 7, on one or more special cars. The ticket, which includes R. R. fares and lower berth in Pullman sleeping car will cost $155 for round trip from New York and other points in same ratio. The itinerary as laid out will occupy 30 days, but the tickets are good for 90 days. It was voted to invite members of other bodies who would like to join and members are extended the privilege of taking any friends along who may desire to take the trip. Mr. Coldwell offered the use of the rooms of the Coldwell Lawn Mower Company for headquarters of the Association while in San Francisco. A vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Ward for the use of his office.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

The fourteenth annual meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America will be held at Cleveland, Ohio, November 10th, 1915, and the annual exhibition in conjunction with the Cleveland Florists' Club will be held at the same place, November 10th-14th, 1915. An exhibit of chrysanthemums under the auspices of the Chrysanthemum Society of America in conjunction with the Gardeners and Florists of the Pacific Coast, will be held at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, San Francisco, Cal., the date and other details to be announced later.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF NEW YORK.

An exhibition of plants and flowers was held on Wednesday, February 17th, at the American Museum of Natural History. Unusually fine displays of cut orchid blooms were made by Mr. Clement Moore and Lager & Hurrell. The exhibit made by Mr. Moore was very rich in Cattleya forms, one of the most interesting being a cross made and reared by himself from Cattleya Dowiana × C. Schroederæ. The display of Lager & Hurrell was rich in genera and species. Much interest was added to the exhibit by the numerous displays of plants and flowers for which no premiums had been provided in the schedule. Special prizes were awarded to many of these. A business meeting of the society took place at 3.45, followed at 4 by an illustrated lecture by W. C. McCollom on "The Small Greenhouse: Its Use and Abuse." This was of great interest, and many practical methods were described by the lecturer.

The next monthly exhibition of the society will be held on Saturday and Sunday, May 8th and 9th, at the New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park. The usual March exhibition is omitted on account of the spring show at the Grand Central Palace. The April show is also omitted, as it would follow too closely upon the big spring show.

The following premiums were awarded at the exhibition of Feb. 17th:

Vase of schizanthus: Henry Goldman, Deal Beach, N. J.; Anton Bauer, gard., 1st; G. D. Barron, Rye, N. Y., Jas. Linane, gard., 2nd.

Vase of snapdragons: Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mamaroneck, N. Y., Jas. Stuart, gard., 1st.

Vase of 50 freesias, arranged for effect: Henry Goldman, 1st; G. D. Barron, 2nd.

Three vases narcissus: Mrs. H. Darlington, Mamaroneck, N. Y., P. W. Popp, gard., 1st.

Collection of orchid blooms, commercial class: Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., 1st.

Collection of orchid blooms, non-commercial class: Clement Moore, Hackensack, N. J., J. P. Mossman, gard., 1st.

Vase of 50 roses, arranged for effect: Mrs. F. L. Constable, 1st.

The following special prizes were awarded: Mrs. H. Darlington, for display of bulbous flowers, cash; Bobbink & Atkins, display of flowering shrubs, silver medal; G. D. Barron, display of cyclamens, cash; Ernest Iselin, New Rochelle, N. Y., Wm. Whitton, gard., cultural certificate for lilies; Henry Goldman, for vase of stocks "Empress Augusta Victoria," cash and cultural certificate; Clement Moore, for hybrid cattleya, a cross between C. Dowiana and C. Schroederæ, silver medal; Mrs. A. J. Moulton, West Orange, N. J., Arthur W. Jackson, gard., for display of freesias and tulips, cash; Mrs. F. A. Constable, for vase of Darwin tulips "Wm. Copeland," cash.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERMEN.

Miss Ida Tarbell recently spoke before the Civic Club of Rochester, N. Y., her audience numbering over 400 business men. Among other good things uttered by the speaker was this: "You must cooperate or you will not get results;" and this leads us to remark that the executive officers of the American Association of Nurserymen are in full accord with the sentiment expressed by this noted journalist. sociation he is very anxious to get from one to three members cards which bear respectively such inscriptions as "The Association is interested in your interest. You could give it your support." "Results can only be achieved by united action," etc.

The Fortieth Annual Convention of this Association will be held in the city of Detroit, Mich., June 23-25 next. In a week or two every member of the Association and every legitimate nurseryman in the United States will receive the "Announcement" of the event, which in addition to containing much of the details of arrangement, programme of speakers and of entertainment, will make an urgent plea for prompt renewal of membership, as well as for responses from those who, whilst daily living in the enjoyment of the privileges and benefits secured for them by this Association, have hitherto turned a deaf ear to our appeals for their cooperation.

That the Detroit meeting is going to be a success no one questions, but it will be a much greater success in point of numbers and influence if every nurseryman who ought to be long responded to this invitation. A fee of five dollars per year is exceedingly small compared with the benefits afforded by a membership.

It is the expectation that a special railroad car will be chartered to convey the nurserymen of Rochester, N. Y., and the immediate vicinity. Those interested should write E. S. Osborne of Charlton Nursery Company. Final particulars regarding special rates and special car parties will be contained in the "Announcement." In the meantime John Hall, Secretary, 204 Granite Building, Rochester, N. Y., will gladly respond to requests for further information concerning membership, etc.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The annual meeting and exhibition of the American Rose Society will be held in Horticultural Hall, Boston, March 18th to 21st. The New York Flower Show at the Grand Central Palace occurs March 17th to 23rd. It has been arranged to stage roses at these exhibitions to conflict as little as possible, and the American Rose Society wishes to call attention to these dates. Roses in pots and tubs will be staged at Boston on Thursday, March 18th. All cut roses will be staged on Friday, March 19th, on which day the annual meeting will be held at 3 o'clock.

At the New York Flower Show, all pot-grown roses will be staged on Wednesday, March 17th. All classes of cut roses, except the special class for display of 1000 blooms, will be staged on Thursday, March 18th. This special class will be staged on Saturday, March 20th.

This arrangement allows an exhibitor the opportunity of exhibiting in New York on Thursday and in Boston on Friday. It allows visitors from a distance the opportunity of participating in both the New York Flower Show and the American Rose Society Annual Exhibition, which, in conjunction with the spring show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, will be especially attractive. The American Rose Society invites your attendance and your exhibit. Schedules may be obtained from Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y. We trust that our exhibition will be a credit to the

HOLYOKE AND NORTHAMPTON FLORISTS' AND GARDENERS' CLUB.

The regular monthly meeting of this club was held in Northampton, Mass., on Tuesday evening, Feb. 16th, in E. J. Canning's office. G. H. Sinclair and George Strugnell of Holyoke and F. D. Keyes & Son of Florence, exhibited some remarkably well grown cyclamen plants. It is doubtful if better plants have ever been grown in Western Massachusetts. F. D. Keyes & Son also exhibited a vase of that grand crimson carnation Princess Dagmar. E. H. Downer of the Smith College Botanic Gardens, exhibited some well grown plants and sprays of flowers of Schizanthus Wisetonensis in a great variety of colors and markings, also some specimen cinerarias. Each of the exhibitors were awarded a first class certificate of merit. The exhibits provoked much discussion among the members, and practically every minute detail of culture was brought out. Frank Barnard a former active member, sent a paper which was read by Mr. Sinclair on the history, and the quantity of plants and cut flowers grown at the A. N. Pierson Company's plant at Cromwell, Conn., where Mr. Barnard is now located. The club presented W. H. Whiting of the Mass. Agricultural College with a pair of gold cuff links in recognition of his faithful and efficient services as Secretary of the club. The March meeting will be held at the large, new Sinclair greenhouse at Smith's Ferry.

E. J. CANNING.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The St. Louis County Florists' Association will hold an important meeting on Wednesday, March 3, at Kirkwood, Mo., in the Eleven Mile Hall. F. Vanemann is president.

A. E. Thatcher of Bar Harbor, Me., will lecture before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society at Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Saturday, February 27. His subject will be "The Culture of Hardy Shrubs."

Robert Pyle of the Conard & Jones Co. delivered an instructive lecture on The Rose before the members of the Newport Horticultural Society and the Newport Garden Club at Newport, R. I., on the evening of February 23.

Secretary J. F. Ammann, of the Illinois Florists' Association, has extended an invitation to all local florists to attend the meeting and exhibition of the association at Urbana, Ill., on March 2 and 3, and quite a few will make the trip.

Secretary Beneke of the St. Louis Florist Club, reports that Supt. W. W. Ohlweiler, of Shaw's Garden, will read a paper at the next meeting which will be of great importance to all growers. A carnation exhibition will also be held at this meeting March 11.

The St. Louis Retail Florists' Association met on Monday, February 15, and elected officers. Chas. Young was elected president, C. Bergestermann vice-president, F. C. Weber, Jr., secretary and Alex. Geranios treasurer. It was voted to give a banquet at the Washington Hotel on March 8 and invite all retailers to attend and join the association.

J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md.

Gentlemen: Your ad. of February 6, in "The Florists' Exchange," is some puff for "John Baer" Tomato, which is all true. I tried the "John Baer" last year and there was not one in your ad. that had one on me.

From 620 plants I sold over 2 1/2 tons of Tomatoes. Set 3 feet each way and trained to Bamboo stakes trimmed to one shoot. When they became heavy with Tomatoes, I tied the top of four stakes together, as shown in the enclosed photo, and as the season was cold in the Spring, could not set the plants until the last of May, and commenced to market on the 17th of July. I raised Celery between the rows. Enclosed find check for 1 ounce of "John Baer" Tomato seed. Very truly, (Signed) S. D. PRICHARD.

the ladies had entire charge of the meeting. Mrs. C. B. Graves gave a paper on Our Native Birds. At the close of the paper the ladies served refreshments. It was announced that a rose show would be held June 22nd. The next meeting is March 11th when Mr. Schooman will speak on Trees and Shrubs for Profit and Pleasure.

H. E. L.

The Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., will hold its annual meeting at 1214 F Street, Tuesday evening, March 2. At this time the members will be called upon to elect officers for the ensuing year. Sidney B. Lust, of the United Film Service Company, has promised to repeat the motion picture exhibition which made such a hit at the last meeting and among the reels will be one devoted to rose culture. Herbert M. Osborn, of the Pathe Company will present a number of war pictures.

The Florists' and Gardeners' Club met Tuesday evening, February 16, at the home of Prof. E. J. Canning, Northampton, Mass. A paper was read by G. H. Sinclair of Holyoke, Mass., on "Cyclamen," which was written by J. Barnard of Connecticut. The club presented a set of gold cuff links to James Whiting of Amherst college, for his excellent work in behalf of the association. A committee consisting of D. J. Gallivan and G. H. Sinclair were appointed to complete arrangements for the annual flower show to be held in the city hall next November.

The regular monthly meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held on Wednesday, Feb. 10th. After a few minor changes in the schedule for the coming fall exhibition had been adopted, an interesting and instructive lecture was given by Professor J. A. Foord of Mass. Agricultural College on "Some Principles of Farm Management." A well attended meeting of members and local farmers accorded Mr. Foord a unanimous vote of thanks, who in reply, invited those present to take a trip to Amherst, and so get a better insight into the work the college is attempting.

J. CARMAN, Asst. Sec'y.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke Hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., on Wednesday, Feb. 10. The exhibition table was well filled. Awards were as follows: Freesia, J. McDonald; stock, J. McDonald; Primula malacoides, F. Honeyman. For exhibition only Primula malacoides improved, by J. Duthie was highly commended. Freesia by H. Jones, thanks of society. President Westlake announced that he would offer a fountain pen at the next meeting for the best vase of 25 carnations (mixed). Other exhibits will be 12 white, 12 pink and 12 any other color carnations.

Officers—President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif.; First Vice-President, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Second Vice-President, E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa.; Secretary and Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary, S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O.

The value of various horticultural imports into New York for the week ending February 13 is given as follows: Manure salt, $102,430; fertilizer, $9,329; clover seed, $78,834; grass seed, $7,479; sugar beet seed, $7,040; trees and plants, $16,535.

The imports of that group of potash salts most largely used for fertilizer purposes amounted in the calendar year 1914 to 702,800 long tons, compared with approximately 942,000 tons in each of the two years immediately preceding. Muriate of potash, sulphate of potash, kainit and manure salts are the classes of potash usually designated as fertilizers, their value as soil food being dependent upon their content of K₂O. The muriate usually yields about 50 per cent. of K₂O, the sulphate, 48 per cent.; kainit, 12½ per cent.; and manure salts, 20 per cent. On this basis the year's supply of imported K₂O was 176,354 tons, as against 228,757 tons in 1913 and 226,722 tons in 1912. Of guano the imports increased from 19,100 tons in 1913 to 25,600 tons in 1914; and those of ammonia sulphate, from 58,300 tons to 74,100 tons.

The aggregate value of potash salts and fertilizer materials imported into the United States in the calendar year 1914 was 38½ million dollars, as compared with 47 million dollars in the preceding year. Nitrate of soda decreased in value of imports from 21½ million to 15¼ million dollars, and sulphate of ammonia increased from 4 million to 4½ million dollars.

Of Interest to Retail FloristsJOTTINGS FROM THE PEN—N.

Keep your own optimism always up front. Show your own faith in your self. Inspire everybody, enthuse every one. Encourage the under dog. It makes you bigger.

The man who says he does not believe in advertising does not know what he is talking about. If he really believed what he says he would tear down his sign, board up his windows, cover up his flowers, make kindling out of his store windows, and do business with intending customers through a hole in the wall.

Good motto for a store "Enter without knocking, and remain on the same terms."

A business which depends on cheap prices entirely is like a little engine running at high speed, while one based on quality and service is like a great engine with a mammoth balance wheel that will keep going at the same rate regardless of minor fluctuations in the steam pressure.

It's none of my business what you do at night, after work hours. But if dissipation affects what you do the next day, and you do half as much as I demand, you'll last half as long as you hoped.

A man must work when he is young. Work never hurt anybody—it's lack of work that breeds discontent and illness of mind and body.

W. A. M. A. J. Alpine & M. D. C. E. L. February 19 1915. S. M. L. W. L. L. L.

There was a whole lot of arrest of street flower sellers last week, about nine of them being taken to court. It is rumored that a prominent retailer is instigating the arrests.

Henry Quint's new Bay Store is still in process of renovation, but will be ready for occupancy very soon. The interior will be finished off in white and blue-gray, in marble effect.

A party of students under the direction of Prof. Arno H. Nohrling, Amherst, Mass., visited the local markets, retail stores and greenhouses last Friday and Saturday. This was the annual eastern trip taken by the Floriculture class of the Mass. Agri. College.

Some specialties noted this week were lily of the valley from J. Leach & Son of N. Easton, single violets from Kidder Bros. of Lincoln, yellow marguerites from J. W. Simpson, of Woburn, genistas from W. T. Walke of Salem, and antirrhinums from Phelps, Lexington.

An interesting article on the work of F. J. Dolansky, Lynn, Mass., appeared in the Boston Sunday Globe last week. The importance and place of the orchid as a commercial flower was emphasized. More newspaper articles of this kind are to be encouraged, as they all tend to the education of the public.

An unique display was noted in Penn's windows last week, consisting of violet boxes in blue and white colors; to the cover of each box was attached a little hatchet, bunch of artificial cherries and ribbon in the national colors. In the centre of the display was a large portrait of George Washington. Sales were stimulated a bit by the exploiting of this holiday, but satisfactory results have not yet been reached.

The spring crop of mushroom stores is again in evidence all over the city, especially in the shopping district. "It's an ill wind that blows no one no good," and in this case the dull real estate market offers exceptional opportunity for the opening up of temporary stores in the highest-priced section of the city at one-fourth the regular rents. We noted nine such stores within five minutes' walk of each other. Local growers welcome this outlet for surplus stock, which is accumulating rapidly on account of the recent and existing spring weather.

SAN FRANCISCO.

A local import broker has been offering a lot of Belgian azaleas at 50c. each. Some of the plants shown in his window look as if there would be no possibility of reviving them.

James Lee, who has been associated with one of the Oakland flower shops for some time, is starting in the business for himself in that city, on Twelfth street between Broadway and Washington.

B. M. Joseph, the Grant avenue florist, is making a specialty of "Welcome" and "Bon Voyage" packages; and in connection with the latter, is using an ornamental window card, showing the sailings of boats for the following week.

Chas. Steppenbach, of Polk street, near Sutter, is making a fine showing of Brilliant and Ophelia roses, of which he controls one of the largest and best of the rather limited plantings for this season. He is taking the entire output of a good-sized nursery across the bay, which has done particularly well with its rose plantings.

All the down-town florists, though they closed for the Exposition opening February 20, made some special decorations for the occasion, and some very fine windows were seen. Probably the most striking features of the decorations was the great variety of fine tulips in novelty boxes and baskets. Phalaenopsis was also used with fine effect, and some cattleya displays were very beautiful, though these are two plentiful to attract special notice. Some shops have also secured very impressive effects by lavish use of daffodils. In one window, a big font full of flowering quince as the central feature is very effective.

Several houses have been very busy at the Exposition this week. Albert O. Stein, the Sutter street florist, has been spending considerable time at the grounds, looking after floral decorations in a number of the exhibit booths and buildings. The E. W. McLellan Company prepared decorations of greens for 350 tables for the opening banquet at the Old Faithful Inn of the Yellowstone Park concession on Saturday night. Aside from such work, several members of the MacRorie-McLaren Company's staff have been practically living at the Exposition, putting the final touches on some of their landscape operations. Work at the Exposition has been somewhat retarded by rain, but it is now fairly complete; and the large plantings of pansies and bulbs throughout the grounds are showing up finely.

PHILADELPHIA.

Costa Rica was W. Atlee Burpee's objective point on his vacation this year. He has just returned and the machine will get an added hum—if such a thing is possible in such a well-oiled smooth-running outfit as Burpee's.

Henry F. Michell, president of the H. F. Michell Co., has returned from his vacation on the Florida coast. He visited Bel Air and other points and reports a very enjoyable time. He looks fit and hearty and ready for the rush which is just about commencing.

Edward Reid tendered a complimentary dinner on the 20th inst to his old employee, Stuart H. Miller. Mr. Miller will open a new commission house on his own account at 1617 Ranstead street about March 1st. He has been thirteen years with Mr. Reid, has had a thorough training in the business and is a young man of great promise. He is liked and respected by everybody—and is a hustler. We feel sure he will make his mark and be a credit to us all. We extend our most cordial and heartiest good wishes.

NEW YORK.

Joseph E. Roelker is off on his regular western spring trip.

Harry A. Bunyard is having his new store at 40 West 28th street fixed up in attractive shape and will be ready to occupy it shortly.

Two wholesale houses are preparing to move westward on 28th street, J. K. Allen, who goes to 118 and H. E. Froment who goes to 148 a few weeks hence, and there are others who are considering a similar move. Both the parties above mentioned will have greatly increased room and facilities.

The final schedule and entry blanks, etc., for the "International" Flower Show at Grand Central Palace are now ready and copies have been sent out by Secretary Young to all whose address he has. Anyone desiring to receive same will be accommodated by applying to John Youny, 53 West 28th street.

There will be a meeting of the National Flower Show Committee on March 2 and of the directors of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery on March 3 at the La Salle Hotel, Chicago, in connection with the annual meeting of the Executive Board of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists.

Frederick W. Smythe of the florist firm of Wadley & Smythe has purchased the Depew Building at 487 to 491 Fifth avenue, between Forty-first and Forty-second streets, facing the Public Library and adjoining the new Rogers-Poet Building. The property is owned by the Augustine Pottier estate. The leasehold now has about eight and one-half years to run. The florists have occupied one of the large stores in the building for some time.

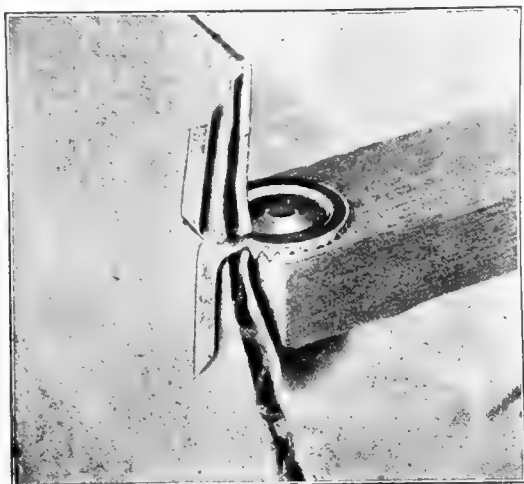

The annual meeting of the Greater New York Florists Association took place on Wednesday night, February 17, at 162 Livingston street, Brooklyn. The business of the evening was the election of officers for the year. With but one exception, those selected were Brooklyn growers and retailers. Those chosen were: President, Hugo H. Jahn; vice-president, George I. Laird; treasurer, Robert G. Wilson; secretary, William A. Phillips. The new board of directors is composed of Hugo H. Jahn, George I. Laird, William A. Phillips, Robert G. Wilson, F. G. VanMater, John V. Phillips of Brooklyn and Charles Weber of Lynbrook, L. I.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The four Sharper brothers, all of whom have long been in the employ of Gude Bros. Company, are about to engage in the florists' business on their own account. William and John Sharper are to be located at Oxon Hill, Md., while Herbert and Al. Sharper will build houses at Silver Hill, Md.

The proposed encampment of the Grand Army of the Potomac next August, promises to be a big thing for the National Capital and elaborate arrangements are being made by the citizens' committee, at the head of which is William F. Gude as chairman.

Another prominent florist, a member of the committee, is J. Henry Small.

Plans will be discussed at the March meeting of the Brookland Rose Society for the holding of a rose show in the spring. At the February meeting the members were addressed by Prof. S. K. Mulford, of the Department of Agriculture on "The Pruning of Roses." Other speakers were President Charles F. Tansill, Dr. William Turner, and Miss Carrie Harrison, who is an orchid expert at the Department of Agriculture.

The florists of the center market, more than a dozen in number, are very well pleased with the show that was held there last week and are already active in the plans for a second affair of this kind. The market was thronged with people every day, it being estimated more than 100,000 people were present during the week. Not only were many additional sales made, but those participating were given an opportunity to avail themselves of some excellent advertising.

CHICAGO.

A. Peterson of the Peterson Floral Co., Gibson City, Ill., while here this week said that he has bought the greenhouses of C. W. Moore, of Clinton, Ill., and has rented a store in that town. He will be ready to open the store about March 1.

George Teglaar left for New York last week and his family will follow in a few days. Mrs. Teglaar is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam'l Pearse and Mr. Teglaar is a well known bulb salesman, and expects soon to sail for France.

At the store and greenhouses of the Kirchhoff Bros., 4713 Milwaukee Ave., the two young men are making good headway mastering the details of the business. Just as the place was nearing completion, the father passed away and the young sons have greatly missed his counsel.

The Thompson Carnation Co. of Joliet, Ill., has leased the greenhouses owned by H. N. Higgenbotham and operated under the name of the Chicago Carnation Co. The recent manager of the Chicago Carnation Co., A. T. Pyfer with his foreman Peter Olson has gone into business in Wilmette.

The A. L. Randall Co., has leased the second floor of the new LeMoyné block now nearing completion at the corner of Wabash avenue and Lake street. The new building is one of the finest on the street and the location is a choice one. E. C. Amling has not made arrangements for the future but may possibly go into the first floor of the same building.

In visiting Sam'l Pearse's place one's first impression is that he has come to a flower show. The large service building was a mass of bloom. Thousands of tulips in pans covered the tables and other bulbous stock seemed to reach as far as the eye could see. Three large houses of giganteum lilies are about a foot high and as even as if they had been mowed off.

Phil Schupp says that the growing of more roses and less carnations has worked out well this winter. Ophelia has proven a good rose with the J. A. Budlong Co., and Mr. Schupp is expecting to increase his planting this year. Double White Killarney is also making a good record here. Mrs. Russell has not been as free as had been hoped but will be tried again. Maryland which did well here at first has not proven satisfactory and has been discarded.

Among the downtown florists, Geo. Wienhoeber carried off the honors, in window displays, in celebration of Washington's birthday. The window was highly artistic and displayed the flowers and plants offered for sale to excellent advantage. In the background was a six-foot wreath of magnolia leaves, encircling a life-sized bust of Washington mounted upon a pedestal which was draped with flags. At the right front were pots of spring flowers tied with the new chiffon ribbon figured with gold and silver. In the foreground were plants of prunus in which were hung red hatchets. The Atlas window had a ground of bark and the national colors were tastefully displayed around the picture of Washington

OBITUARY.

H. Frank Darrow.

H. Frank Darrow, who has been American representative of Vilmorin's and other prominent foreign houses since the death of August Rhotert several years ago, died at Long Island College Hospital, Brooklyn, N. Y., on Sunday, February 21, after a two weeks' illness. Mr. Darrow was in the employ of Mr. Rhotert in the office at 26 Barclay street, New York, for a number of years. He was born in New London, Conn. His age was 48 years. He leaves a widow and one daughter. He was a member of the Society of American Florists and New York Florists' Club.

William B. King.

William B. King, a veteran of the Civil War, for many years a florist in the town, and a well-known resident of Apponaug, died on February 18, at his home on Main street, Apponaug, R. I. Death was due to a complication of diseases incident to old age, he being 75 years old. In 1888 Mr. King built a greenhouse and started the florist business, and he was a charter member of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island. Two years ago he gave up this business, which has since been carried on by his son.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON At the present writing the market is very inactive, almost at a standstill. Trade has fallen off considerably in all branches. The supply of all kinds of flowers is much larger than last week, due to the recent warm weather, and with a decreased demand, prices of the staple items have declined. The usual dull business of the Lenten season is being experienced in all its full effect, although a number of progressive retailers are making attempts at stimulating trade in various ways. All kinds of roses are in larger supply and in general the quality is excellent. Carnations are very plentiful and have dropped considerably in price, the best bringing $4.00 per 100 with difficulty. There is a deluge of "splits" in the market. The supply of cattleyas and gardenias is not large and the demand for these is a trifle better, but only medium figures are being reached, although their quality is fine. Sweet peas are moving faster than any other crop and are bringing fair figures. Bulb stock is also selling well. Nevertheless, the general feeling is one of inactivity and a slow market. A large quantity of funeral work is the only encouraging feature at the present time.

BUFFALO A good report can be made regarding market condition the past week.

It was a busy one and the trade had its hands full to fill orders. The wholesale market was cleaned up daily, except on bulbous stock and lily of the valley, the demand falling toward carnations, roses and peas and at times not enough of the three items could be secured, though there was about enough to go around. Saturday's business was especially good, the day being an ideal spring one. Floral work consumed a good portion of stock. At this writing, February 23, a rainy day, the market got a sudden jolt everything coming in double supply and the demand having fallen 5 per cent. The receipts were heavy on all lines, a good portion being carried over at the close.

CHICAGO There is a slight increase in the amount of stock coming in. This was noticeable the latter part of last week and was particularly appreciated by the wholesalers for their week-end trade. The bright weather opened the carnation buds and that flower was seen in larger quantities than before this season. Roses are more nearly normal in supply but prices average low on all but the best stock. American Beauties are more than scarce. There are so very few good long ones that the price is high, while shorter ones are poor in quality. Lily of the valley is very good and there is a fair demand which Lent does not seem to diminish. Violets are rather discouraging much of the time. The weather conditions have made it difficult to handle the eastern stock to advantage, much of it arriving worthless. Still when the quantities are considered a fair profit will probably be found after all. Bulbous stock is coming now in very large lots and the high prices are probably over for this season.

CINCINNATI The market is much easier than at the last writing. The supply has increased very considerably. The call from both local and distant points for stock is active and fairly steady. Prices have dropped a notch or two. Roses are in a better supply than for the past month. Carnations, though more plentiful than they were continue to clean up well. Sweet peas meet with an active call. Lilies and bulbous stock are in a good supply and meet with a fair market. Only the best single violets have at all a ready sale. Others move slowly if at all. The lily of the valley market is also slow while calls for orchids are comparatively few. Some good mignonette was added to the list of offering during the past week.

NEW YORK The market is rapidly tending downward and prices are very low already on many things. This is especially true of bulbous stock of which an enormous quantity is being sent into the wholesale market daily and which are necessarily sold at whatever the cheap trade will offer for them. Roses still show up in fine quality, some of the newer varieties being really superb. Noble Mocks, sleek Ophelias, dainty Mignons and Fire Flames and glowing Radiance are seen in captivating array. Carnations are more plentiful now but very many of them are burst and otherwise of inferior quality. Violets, of course, are fine, and lots of them. In addition to the standard varieties quoted in our tabulated market list there are wall-flowers, pansies, primulas, stocks, gladioli, cyclamen, myosotis, lilacs, acacia, calendulas, etc., most of which are sold by the "bunch," at prices varying according to quantity and abundance, as well as by the number of sprays in a bunch which varies with different growers.

Being the first
PHILADELPHIA week in Lent no great enthusiasm was expected in the demand for flowers, and the results bear out this forecast. Still, there is no great cause for complaint, as prices generally have held fairly firm, and in some instances—notably in carnations—there was an upward tendency, due, the experts think, to a shortening in the crop. This was especially noticeable towards the end of last week. Roses are much more plentiful and the market on these lags a little. American Beauty shows excellent form and larger supply, but the demand is not strong. Jonkheer Mock is still improving and is now a really classy proposition. The recent scarce ones like Russell, Hadley and Ophelia, are now much more in evidence. The cattleya situation has not changed much. The supply is rather less but the quality is still very good. A few miltonias have made their appearance. Sweet peas are more plentiful and of fine quality with prices easier. The same may be said of violets, both single and double. There are far too many daffodils and other bulbous flowers. That market is easily overdone and when it breaks it breaks badly. Other items like gardenias, mignonette, calendula, daisies, etc., remain about normal and do not call for special comment. The outlook at this writing seems to point to more flowers and no increase in demand. The increased supply is certain. Let us all work for the uplift—I mean the outlet.

The market was strong last week and it contained about anything one wanted and as much of it. Business has slackened up somewhat since Lent began. Roses, which were off crop for some time, are coming in plenty. Carnations, violets and sweet peas, too, are coming in in great abundance with prices much lower than for some time. Bulb stock is going to be heavy from now on, and when southern stock comes up it is going to glut the market greatly.

With St. Valentine's Day and the Mardi Gras celebration, and the Panama-Pacific Exposition to open Saturday, the San Francisco florists have had about the best week since the holidays. The Exposition celebration is taking a vast amount of stock of many kinds, and more will be required for the formal opening of various exhibits, etc., during the next few weeks. For this, greens, potted ferns and palms are the strongest feature, but cut stock is also considerably used. Nearly all seasonable flowers are plentiful. The rose crop is beginning to show up very well, and the larger offerings are readily absorbed at good prices. The demand is especially good for Killarney Queen and Russell. Gardenias are better than ever, and had an exceptionally large sale for the Mardi Gras ball, while later offerings clean up well. Violets are again in large supply, with a much lighter shipping trade. Large displays of peach, plum and almond, and especially of flowering quince blossoms, are shown this week and are in good demand for decorative work. There is an abundance of freesias, hyacinths, daffodils, etc., and tulips are in much greater variety, the unusually fine quality attracting much attention. Mignonette, forgetmenots and similar small stock are coming in well. Sweet peas are still offered sparingly, but larger cutting are expected soon. Cattleyas are still over-abundant. The cut of phalaenopsis keeps up well, but is no more than the market will readily absorb.

Roses and carnations continue scarce, but there is a heavy supply of other flowers which can often be readily substituted, and the coming of Lent has caused a marked falling off in the volume of business. The supply of bulbous stock has been so heavy as to cause a sharp falling off in the wholesale price. Lilies are in much better supply than they have been. There is a reported scarcity of orchids, but no one seems to care, as they are in but slight demand. It is promised that the present scarcity of roses will be relieved within a week or ten days, but nothing is promised in the way of better business.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

Free Fall for February, 1915 published by the Fernald & Patten Company, Stamford, Conn., contains some very valuable articles on the planting of trees for street and home grounds.

California Association of Nurserymen. The proceedings of the Fourth Annual Meeting held in San Diego, October 15-17, 1914 has been published. It is a model in its class and its contents show that this young association is living up to its declared objects and aims. Henry W. Kruckeberg of Los Angeles is secretary-treasurer.

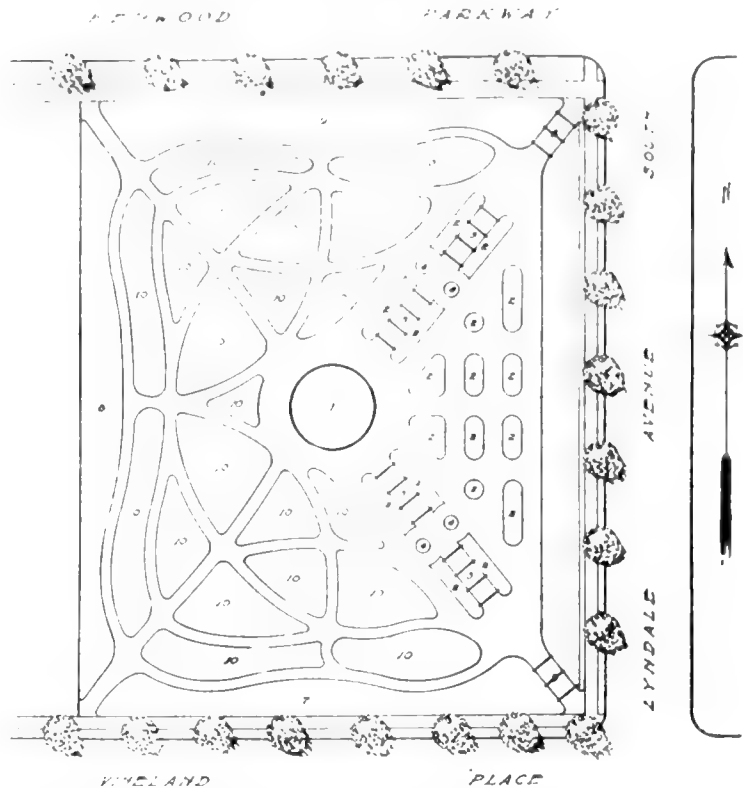

The February, 1915, number of the Minnesota Horticulturist shows plans and description of the proposed new horticultural building. The Minnesota Horticultural Society appears to be doing splendid work in the broad field of horticulture and we hope to see the required state appropriation granted for this much needed building. The location selected is midway between Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Twenty-seventh Annual Report of the Purdue University Agricultural Experiment Station, Lafayette, Ind. An interesting pamphlet of 88 pages recording the work of the various departments for the year ending June 30, 1914. The report of Prof. J. C. Arthur of the botanical department tells of experiments to rid the ground of a number of troublesome weeds, such as Canada thistle, dandelion, quack-grass, wild garlic, etc. The report of the horticultural department by Prof. C. G. Woodbury is devoted to orchard and small fruit matters. The receipts of this station from various sources for the year amounts to $315,362.20 and expenditures $268,576.61, of which no portion appears to have been applied to any branch of ornamental horticulture.

From the January number of the Missouri Botanical Garden Bulletin we learn that the construction of a formal garden, bounded on the north, south and east by the new conservatories, and on the west by a pergola, has been the largest single addition to the features of the main garden during the past year. The land back of the conservatory sloped so rapidly to the west that in order to level this area it was necessary to construct a reinforced concrete retaining wall, which in some places is fourteen feet in height. On top of the retaining wall there has been built an Italian pergola about 250 feet in length. This pergola, when covered with perennial vines, will constitute one of the most pleasant parts of the garden in which to rest, the outlook over the formal garden being particularly attractive. The latter, with the aid of hedges, orange and boxwood trees, appropriate furniture and fountains, will be the most pretentious thing of its kind that has ever been attempted at the Missouri Botanical Garden. Here will be afforded an unusual place for the exhibition of tulips in the spring, and throughout the summer a succession of foliage and flowering plants will present an admirable example of what can be done with this sort of a garden.

The total number of visitors to the garden in 1914 was 222,211, of whom 90,187 came on Sundays. The number of specimens in the herbarium is now 657,461.

8. Border planting of shrubs, evergreens, ornamental grasses, perennials, annuals, bulbs, etc.
9. Deciduous shrubs.
10. Perennials and annuals in groups, classes and combinations.

On account of the large amount of annual planting material required to fill the garden, which, because of the requirements for bedding plants for other parks, we are not able to furnish from our own propagating plant, it seems advisable to change the layout of the garden to provide appropriate room for a larger number of perennials and other hardy plants which do not require replacing every year. The accompanying plan shows the proposed rearrangement of the grounds.

We cannot expect outside growers to furnish large quantities of plants every year to help fill this large garden and we do not intend to ask them to do so. We are, however, not only willing but anxious to have all growers who wish to do so, make use of these display grounds to introduce and show their novelties in large or small numbers. Exhibits sent us for that purpose will be given a conspicuous place in the garden amongst the class of plants to which they belong. They will be properly labeled, giving the exhibitor's full name and address. We simply ask that prospective exhibitors write to us before April 1st what they wish to exhibit so that we may reserve space for their exhibits, and that the plants be sent, freight or express prepaid, at the proper time of planting.

Our home people are taking a great interest in the garden right along and there can be no question as to the advertising value of an exhibit at these well kept exhibition grounds. I therefore extend a hearty invitation to all growers and introducers of novelties and meritorious plants to make use of our garden. We will do our share to grow the plants as nearly to perfection as possible and to thus serve the interests of the exhibitors and public alike.

South American Sheep and Goat Manure

We have just landed the Third 1000 Ton Cargo in New England and it is certainly as good or even better than the last. If South American Goat and Sheep Manure had not come up to the expectations of the growers who bought the first, or if we could not guarantee to furnish the same high grade article, which has built up for itself and for us such a splendid reputation from the very first start, we would never have had to send a ship after another 1000 tons. That's plain. We have an abundant supply for New England and it is our aim to keep this right up to the high standard you know it to be. It is ground fine and is clean to handle, makes an ideal liquid manure, which is safe. WE GUARANTEE OUR S. A. S. & G. M. TO BE ABSOLUTELY PURE. Spring is near and plants need feeding. For Roses, Carnations, Lilies, Ferns, Palms, or any other plants, our S. A. S. & G. M. will do just what a full meal will do for a hungry man.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, 40 lbs.

How Three Years Ago We Met the Demand for Lighter Houses

TO further lighten a construction, that had apparently already reached the point of greatest lightness, consistent with safety, was a problem that faced us three years ago, when the J. W. Davis Co., of Davenport, Iowa, added their last wide house.

There seemed but one thing to do and that was, widen the distance between the rafters. So we increased it to 8 lights 16 inches wide instead of 6. This decreased the number of columns and posts considerably. But it put an extra weight on the purlins and rafters.

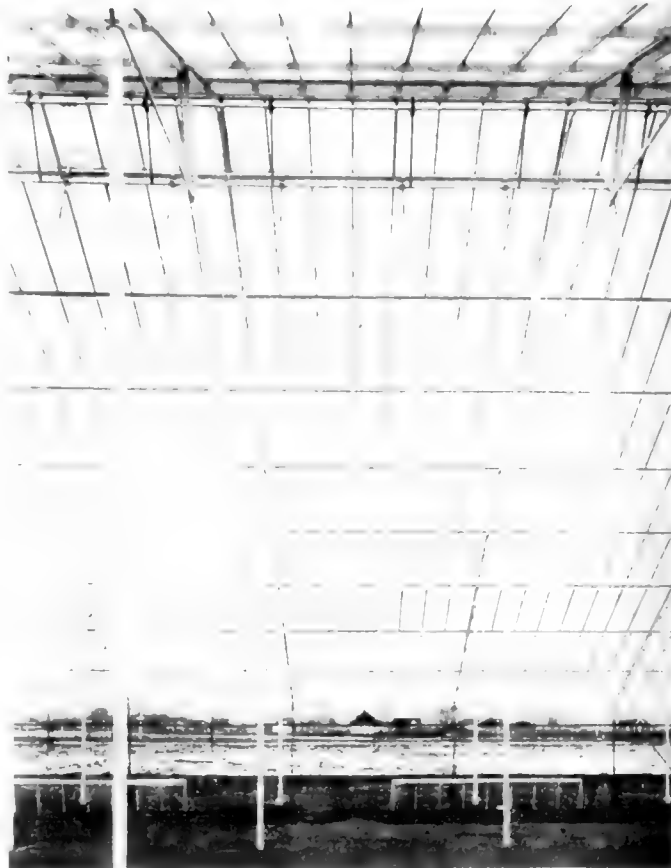

To overcome this, we slightly increased the size of the purlins and depth of the rafters and strength of the fitting that secures the purlins to the rafters. In the center, between the side posts, we put sort of a junior post, just half the size of the regular posts. This extended from the eave into the concrete sides and footing.

It took the extra strain put on the eave, by the wide spacing and met any tendency of the eave to sag.

It certainly made a splendid house.

On entering it, you at once recognized its un-

This shows the lightness of the house when the rafters are spaced with 8 lights of 16-inch glass instead of the time-worn 6 light spacing.

usual lightness, but if it didn't occur to you to count the glass between the rafters, it would have puzzled you to account for it.

This same construction was used in W. B. Davis' houses at Aurora, Ill., and is being used in the new Davis Plant, now under construction at Terre Haute, Ind. The houses are 76 feet by 600 feet.

Doubtless, you wonder why it is we have not exploited and pushed this expanded space construction. Our answer is: it was such a radical departure that although we believed in it thoroughly and tested it out exhaustively before selling it to the Davis Brothers; still we thought it the part of wisdom to do a little "watchful waiting."

We wanted to make sure that we were surely right and take time to watch its action carefully during several seasons, under varying weather conditions.

The way it has acted has more than satisfied us. As a result, we have concluded to still further widen the spacing, and it's of this extra spaced house that we are going to tell in our next Ad.

Our New Rose Mrs. Moorfield Storey

Has a strong upright growth, the wood being very stout and smooth, with large handsome dark green foliage, practically mildew or black-spot proof. The flowers, which are freely produced, are of good size and substance with abundant petals, opening freely. The color is a shell pink deepening toward the centre with the large smooth petals tipped deep rose.

It will be a fine, yet distinct, companion for the Mrs. Charles Russell rose.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Mignonette in Pots

It should hardly be necessary to remind retail plantsmen of the fact that mignonette grown for the general pot plant trade is a good seller, not difficult to work into shapely and attractive specimens in less time than it takes with most other kinds of stock. To have a good stock of 4 and 5 inch plants for the spring and Memorial Day trade it is necessary to sow the seeds now. All transplanting should as much as possible be avoided. We fill the 3-inch pot up to the rim with soil, sow half a dozen seeds in the center and with the bottom of an empty pot press down quite firmly. Three plants may be grown in one pot, all forming a dense bush. Keep at about 48 degrees and keep growing right along. Placed well up to the glass they will grow nice and stocky. Give light fumigation every week.

Salvias

All the newer types of salvias are good material for outdoor planting and, as such, highly prized and extensively made use of by all classes of people. Few other plants mainly used, in the brightening of home grounds, have stronger claim for public favor. Salvias are easily and rapidly propagated by cuttings taken from last year's plants. It is not yet too late to strike another batch if good cuttings can be had. The first seedlings are now in 2-inch pots almost ready for 4-inch. Those sown later will all be readily disposed of either as 2, 3 or 4 inch stock, most of the larger sizes being in bloom when sold. Any sudden change in temperature or constant overdoses in watering hurt salvias, while yet soft and growing rapidly. Do not keep them too cool. Put them well up to the glass.

Seed Sowing

In order to have annuals and perennials of good size by planting out time seed should be sown now. Sow them on a mixture of about one-third each of fresh loam, leaf mold and clean sand. For the bottom of the flats or pans any rough soil will do—in fact it is better. Fill to within about half an inch of the top and firm. Give them a good soaking of water and allow time for them to drain. The seed can be sown and covered about three times their diameter in depth and pressed even. Place them where they can have a little bottom heat and in a temperature of about 60 degrees. Just as soon as they start to come up uncover and place well up to the light.

Starting Begonia Tubers

Tubers started now and on to the end of March will be in good time for the spring and summer demands. A good way to give these tubers a good start is to place them in flats about three inches deep with some crocks on the bottom covered with sphagnum. Leaf mold and sand in equal parts make a good compost. Place the tubers about half an inch apart and deep enough so they will be just covered. Give bottom heat of about 70 degrees until they have made some young leaves and roots. Before they begin to crowd they will need to be potted into four-inch pots, using a mixture of new loam, three parts, leaf-mold and cow manure one part each and some sand.

Sweet Peas

Winter-flowering sorts that were started earliest are now beginning to give out, while those planted later into vacated chrysanthemum beds will be in substantial growth. Apply liquid stimulants carefully and be cautious about ventilation, especially if the vines are near the glass. Give hard sprinkling after every picking rather than frequent and heavy fumigation to hold them free of aphids. Remove every bloom whether salable or not, to prevent seeding, and water to the extent of keeping the now well-matted roots always moderately moist with no drying out between times, which treatment will considerably lengthen their flowering season. In the treatment of the later batches yet full of vitality, more air—lots of it at all possible times—is called for, together with regular fumigation in frequent but very mild applications. Also greater restraint and care in watering to prevent stem decay is required. A temperature of as low as 45 degrees at night with not much more than 10 degrees higher in daytime is advised as long as the rapidly increasing sun heat permits.

Outside Work

Now that there will be plenty of good days to do outside work, we should do the most important work first, such as getting hot beds ready, also frames, so that in a few weeks we shall be able to relieve our crowded houses. All beds, borders and land needed for planting will require manuring when dry enough to dig.

Next Week:—Care of Pelargoniums; Compost; Easter Lilies; Orchids; Making a Hotbed; Fancies.

iving and if this be so then the much bewailed "high cost of living" has accomplished some good and is indeed a blessing in disguise. A busy season for the seedsmen means an industrious summer and more rational living for the consumer and the inauguration of better conditions all around.

Perversity or what?

Our national Senate is not a very sensitive body, evidently, or it would worry a lot about the attitude of the public on its refusal to strike out the appropriation of $245,000 for tree seeds, repudiated by the Agricultural Committee and repeatedly condemned and ridiculed by granges, societies and farmers' papers all over the country. The respect which every patriotic citizen would naturally feel for those who occupy high station in a "government of the people" gets an incurable jolt with such evidence of the small "measure-up" of their chosen representatives. How true it is that

"Obstinacy's ne'er so stiff
As when 'tis in a wrong belief."

What next?

At a recent gathering of gentlemen, most of whom are prominently identified with commercial floriculture, a question was asked as to what flower stands most available and likely to be widely taken up for improvement and exploitation as a cut flower specialty. The markets in most cities are supplied this season with a larger diversity of flowers, outside of the universal staples, than has ever been the case before in this country, almost every one of which might hopefully be taken in hand for special advancement. This fact will be apparent to anyone visiting the wholesale markets on any morning or taking the trouble to inspect the stock in the show cases of prominent retail florists.

Two candidates

On the occasion above referred to one party suggested that the so-called English primrose preeminently possesses the necessary attributes to make it a very desirable candidate for an increased popular interest, as well as characteristics which suggest its probable responsiveness to any well directed effort to develop and improve it upon standard points of excellence, such as size of flower, length and strength of stem, variety and brilliancy of color, form of truss, etc. This sounds promising for the primrose and why is it not as amenable to such a course of advancement as for instance the sweet pea proved to be, especially considering that the painstaking work which has been done on the primrose in England and elsewhere in Europe has been mostly in the direction of ideals quite different from what an American cut flower specialist would strive for. Undoubtedly the best success would be attained by breeding with an original species type. P. malacoides has promising attributes for future development. Another flower favorably mentioned for a place of prominence in the flower trade of the immediate future was the Buddleia in its various species. This plant is but slightly known as yet amongst the trade but already the richly perfumed Buddleia asiatica has begun to get recognition as an exceedingly graceful and otherwise very attractive flower and at the very first try the American hybrid, B. Farquharii comes to the front recognized by all who have seen it—including the discoverer of B. asiatica—as far superior to the latter, which was one of its parents. As it appears now, nobody can begin to predict what the Buddleias may shortly attain to, but that they are destined to take their place among the much used cut flowers commercially seems now assured beyond a doubt.

Home truck raising

We have learned from a number of seedsmen that the demand for kitchen garden seeds has started in already on a scale which would indicate an unprecedented planting of such material during the coming spring. Perhaps this is the public response to the increased cost of

SOME BEAUTIFUL IRISES

IRIS RETICULATA VAR KRELAGEI

The Irises pictured herewith are among the most beautiful of the bulbous section, and to my mind one of them, Iris reticulata, will bear comparison with any species in the genus. Its flowers, which are produced before the leaves, are from three to four inches in diameter, six to eight in height, and several are produced by each bulb. They are rich violet in color, with golden yellow and white markings on the falls. The flowers last in good condition for a considerable time, and charm all the while with their delicious fragrance reminiscent of that of violets. The photograph shows the reticulated character of the covering of the bulb, which gives this Iris its specific name. It is a native of Asia Minor and Persia.

Iris reticulata var. Krelagei, whilst not possessing the charm of the type, is very beautiful and worthy of culture. It is somewhat dwarfer than I. reticulata, its coloring is not so brilliant, nor its fragrance so pleasing. The flowers are red-purple in color with veins of a darker shade. The falls have golden yellow markings and some flowers possess a velvety blotch that is almost black. It is a native of the Caucasus. Other varieties of I. reticulata, are Histrio, and histrioides, both of them pale blue in color. They are valuable in that they come into flower some weeks earlier than I. reticulata.

Iris Danfordiae is a diminutive species, the flowers only ascending three or four inches from the soil. The leaves, which are produced after the flowers, are about a foot in length. At a first glance the standards in this species appear to be absent, but, on closer observation, they may be found much reduced in size and having the appearance of scale-like teeth. The flowers are fragrant, about two inches in diameter, the outer segments being orange yellow, with brown or greenish spots. The style arms are yellow and the style crests are very conspicuous. It is a native of the Cilician Taurus.

IRIS RETICULATA

All these Irises are of fairly easy culture and are very valuable winter flowering, cool house, subjects. The bulbs should be potted in the fall, in pans, placing the bulbs about two inches apart, excepting those of I. Danfordiae, which not being of such strong growth may be planted closer together. The soil should consist of two parts loam, one part leaf soil, with enough broken oyster shells or mortar rubble to provide calcareous matter, and to make the soil thoroughly porous. After potting, the bulbs should be plunged out-of-doors in ashes, with good covering to keep out severe frosts, and left until about the middle of January, when they may be brought into a house having a night temperature of 50 deg., and allowed to bloom. Whilst blooming they should be treated to an application of bone meal, which will assist in the formation of good bulbs which will flower the following year. When the leaves begin to turn yellow, water should be withheld and the plants allowed to dry off.

An abundance of sunshine and water during the growing season, and a porous soil with good drainage in the pots, are the important things to provide in the cultivation of these beautiful Irises. It should also be borne in mind that hard forcing will so debilitate them as to make them useless for another year.

CULTURE OF HARDY SHRUBS

Horticultural Society Lecture by Arthur E. Thatcher.

A timely address on the culture of hardy shrubs was delivered before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on February 27 by Arthur E. Thatcher of Bar Harbor, Me., superintendent of the Mount Desert Nurseries. He showed how the garden may be made much more attractive by the use of hardy shrubs, which requires little care from year to year, if planted right, and suggested that good ideas on what shrubs to select and how to arrange them may be obtained by visiting the Arnold Arboretum. He said in substance:

When one considers what a large number of people there are who spend the most pleasant part of the year in their country homes it is somewhat surprising that so little attention has been given to the hardy garden and the many beautiful subjects which are suitable for adorning lawns and pleasure grounds. But the rapidly increasing interest which is being taken in all branches of horticulture makes it safe to assume that a much greater use will be made of those shrubs and plants which are capable of withstanding the rigors of our variable climate and which, instead of having to be renewed every year like the majority used for garden decoration at the present time, are enabled to continue giving pleasure year after year with a minimum of expense and yet giving far more beautiful and adequate returns than annual plants are capable of doing. Along the Eastern seaboard of North America from Washington to Bar Harbor and inland for some hundreds of miles we have a climate remarkable for its variability and severity and also remarkable for the fact that in no part of the world do flowering shrubs succeed better. English enthusiasts when visiting this country are always impressed with the beauty of our deciduous shrubs produced by the well-ripened wood, the result of our warm summers and congenial warm temperature, and though we cannot succeed so well with many of the ornamental leaved evergreens so conspicuous in English gardens yet we have our corresponding advantages. Having been privileged to work for many years in one of the foremost gardens in England, where hardy trees and shrubs received the careful attention of the owner and were a great specialty, and also for several years in that great institution, the Arnold Arboretum, I may claim to have had exceptional opportunities for studying their requirements. Knowing the Boston Arboretum as well as I do I would like to draw special attention to the remarkable collection grown there and the great facilities it offers for people to learn what are the most beautiful shrubs to plant and which will succeed in this climate.

How to Start a Garden.

In laying out and planting a garden it is a very much better plan to go to such a wonderful Arboretum as this and make one's own notes of the shrubs which will succeed in different situations, than to leave the selection to others. One of the principal reasons why so many shrubberies are uninteresting today is because of the constant repetition of a few well-known sorts and yet there is a great variety of inexpensive material which can be seen at any good nursery which by a judicious selection will add much interest and distinction to a garden. In making a choice it should be remembered that there are other shrubs than those remarkable for the beauty of their flowers deserving of inclusion. In some, such as the Rhus family, the foliage is very ornamental; others whose flowers may be inconspicuous attract much attention when carrying beautiful fruit; some are most noteworthy when their green mantle has changed to various shades of crimson or gold in the autumn, and others are again desirable on account of their richly colored stems in winter. Many persons in making a selection are apt to attach too much importance to coniferous and other evergreen shrubs, and although I am fully aware of their value when used with discrimination, there can be little doubt that they have been overdone in the past.

Shrubs that Blend Well.

To produce the most pleasing effects both evergreen and deciduous shrubs must be happily blended, but it should be borne in mind that deciduous shrubs are much more beautiful, less expensive, and give the most satisfactory results. In selecting material for the planting of an ornamental shrubbery, whether one has a limited area or unrestricted space, it should be borne in mind that one need not be confined to shrubs only of a bushy nature, for while they form the basis of a shrubbery, others grown as standards or half-standards may be employed with excellent results. A very pleasing method of growing many of the hardy climbers such as ornamental grapes and roses is to firmly insert a stout pole into the ground, leaving ten to twelve feet above the surface and lightly nailing or tying the long shoots of the climbers to it. The pole soon becomes completely covered. If varieties of sufficient hardiness are employed so that no taking down or covering is required they will need little attention beyond tying up the new growth.

The pole should be sunk into the ground three or four feet so that the frost will not loosen it, and the buried part should be well treated with creosote or tar, which will preserve it for many years in good condition. A good straight larch or cedar pole answers well for the purpose. Many varieties of shrubs are now obtainable in standard form, such as the following: Crabs, thorns, maples, particularly the handsome Japanese varieties, and many others which by proper method of pruning are amenable to this form of cultivation.

Pick the Sunny Spots.

All hardy shrubs, except those which are naturally more at home beneath the shade of trees, succeed best in an open sunny position where they receive the full benefit of light and air, and this is particularly true of those grown for their floral beauty. It is important therefore to select if possible a position which while being sheltered from rough and cold winds, is fully exposed to the beneficial influence of the sun. This enables the wood of the current season's growth to become thoroughly ripened and consequently much better able to pass through the winter without harm. Having selected the position it is of paramount importance that the ground be properly and thoroughly prepared, first by seeing that it is well drained, as very few shrubs will succeed in a water-logged soil, and then by having it well broken up to a depth of at least two feet. If the soil is naturally very heavy it is a good plan to freely incorporate decayed leaf mould and sand, but if very light and dry in character nothing is better than a good heavy loam. Well decayed manure will prove of much benefit to the shrubs if it can be worked deeply into the ground, otherwise I do not advocate its use. All hardy shrubs will succeed in a loamy or peaty soil providing it is well drained and deeply worked, but it may seem to some that it is quite unnecessary to prepare it so deeply as I have advised. It is, however, highly important, even if the expense is somewhat larger, for the difference between shrubs planted in ground which has been properly prepared and those in poorly worked soil is quite remarkable, and no one will question the advisability after seeing the results.

DARWIN TULIPS FOR WINTER FORCING.

The adaptability of the Darwin tulips for winter forcing is only now coming to the knowledge of many of the commercial plantmen. The gardeners on the private estates, in this as in many other items now generally adopted as standard goods for the trade florist, have been the first to demonstrate their value as subjects for winter forcing, for pot plant use or for cut flower purposes. It is now well proven that quite a few of these Darwin tulips may be readily forced and the beautiful variety William Copeland shown in our cover illustration is one of the best of its class and the one most in use in England where it is forced by the hundred thousand. In color the flowers are bright violet, and as with all the representatives of this class, the stems are invariably long even when brought into bloom in January. The Darwin tulips afford a wide selection of unusual and beautifully illumined art shades, appreciation for which has only begun, but it will not take long before they will largely supercede in popular favor the garish flaunting colors of the tulips hitherto used for winter forcing. We are indebted to R. & J. Farquhar & Co., for the beautiful photograph from which our engraving was made.

Lexington, Mass.—Hon. Augustus E. Scott has made a gift of 25 acres of beautiful meadow land to the town of Lexington for park and playground purposes.

A BOSTON ORCHID GROWER

J. T. Butterworth of Framingham, Mass., grows orchids for the Boston market. A sincere and earnest lover of plants, Mr. Butterworth personally cares for every one of his twenty thousand orchid plants. He was one of the first to grow orchids in quantity for commercial use in New England and as a little touch of personality we might add that M. Norton, an old time Boston florist, was Butterworth's first customer. The first house on the place was built in 1848, by C. J. Power, the original owner. This was a lean-to affair against the side of a barn, which stands today, a fitting demonstration of the remarkable progress in greenhouse construction since that time. There are now twelve houses, most of them built since Mr. Butterworth came into possession, about sixteen years ago. He served his apprenticeship in England, came to this country in 1888, worked in Stoughton for some time, became manager for C. J. Power and finally bought over the business.

Not only the stock, but the houses themselves are of interest. All but two are old-fashioned, with small panes, heavy, thick wood-work, and replete with encumbrances and appliances that make the modern house a veritable palace in comparison. But, as Mr. Butterworth says, "each man is the architect of his own fortune," and with the tools in his possession, he has carved out for himself an enviable reputation for fine orchids. In reference to interesting houses, we noted one which formerly grew roses and which in its time was the largest house in the state, built 35 years ago. In its present condition it runs north to south, but when first built it ran east to west, and in moving not a pane of glass was broken. Hot water is still used to heat the range.

Very little importing is done here, as Mr. Butterworth is almost a crank on efficiency and conservation. The weak looking odds and ends accumulated in repotting from time to time are seldom thrown away. With infinite patience and guided by the intuition acquired in life-long acquaintance with plants, all of these are nursed back to healthy, virile life. Thus, very few orchid plants are imported from South America and through this practice some fine strains have been selected, which today are to be found nowhere else.

Speaking of importing—Mr. Butterworth states that the importation of Cattleya labiata is slowing up rapidly, due to the thousands of plants that have been sent to this country in response to public demands. Collectors are finding good specimens exceedingly difficult to secure. In his opinion C. Mossiae outclasses all other cattleyas for beauty and quality, but because of its habit of blooming in April it fails to take advantage of the mid-winter demand.

Orchids are not the only crop grown here, as everything else but roses and violets can be seen in the range. The two newest houses, one of them a Hitchings, contains carnations, the chief varieties being Pink Delight, White Wonder and Mrs. Cheney. A big retail business is done direct from the greenhouses, although much of the product finds an outlet in the wholesale markets in Boston.

SOME LONG ISLAND GROWERS

Among the prosperous plant growing establishments of Long Island none yield greater pleasure to the visitor than that of A. L. Miller at Jamaica. It is an extensive place and things are done well there but what counts for as much or more is the genial, frank personality of its proprietor. The popular president of the Plant Growers' Association is, indeed, a "shining light" among that alert and thrifty fraternity. Mr. Miller has seventeen houses in all and they are largely filled with Easter plants. Well ventilated cool sheds for storing and retarding and six autos and trucks for delivery purposes complete an outfit well equipped for the wholesale plant trade. The great advance made in recent years in color and size of bloom of Primula obconica is well in evidence in the large stock seen here. Daisies—the old-fashioned and still the best, marguerite, are a very extensive crop and, of course, there are lilies, hydrangeas, azaleas and Rambler roses in abundance. Among the more uncommon things are some lovely Japanese cherries, calycanthus and Viburnum Carlesii. In the pot-rose houses are entire benches of American Beauty grown to bush form which will be well worth a visit very soon. For St. Patrick's Day large quantities of shamrocks are grown in tiny pots.

Most of the ground in the 17 acres is devoted to conifers and other ornamental nursery stock but on account of the encroachment of a proposed park reservation and boulevard the nursery department will in time be removed to a 25-acre farm a short distance away.

G. Peters & Sons have a splendid range of carnation houses at Hempstead. There are no less than 75,000 plants all told, of which 18,000 are in one large double house with gutters elevated 10 ft., which seems to be well liked by the carnations for they are very fine. Enchantress and Enchantress Supreme have been blooming profusely since Christmas without any let-up and a very heavy crop is indicated for Easter.

Rowehl & Granz at Hicksville have one of the most admirable locations for a florist business. The land is naturally very rich and perfectly level. They have a fine carnation range which they propose to enlarge to a considerable extent in the near future and the place is just suited for this purpose. One of the carnation houses is 67 ft. by 125 ft., and very lofty, having been erected over four older houses while the latter were standing, the original benches being continued in use after the old houses were demolished. Messrs. Rowehl and Granz are brothers-in-law and they make an enterprising and aggressive business team, already widely known to the trade generally.

Charles Weber's place at Lynbrook is known everywhere as "The Home of Laura Weber." Anyone interested in a good new carnation will find Laura Weber here in all her glory. Mr. Weber strongly advises growers against the use of a certain advertised special plant food which he believes to be responsible for a big loss in split carnation blooms this season.

M. Matheron at Hempstead has a very promising rival for carnation Beacon which he has named Champion. It is a tremendous grower and the color is dazzling.

Lord & Burnham houses seem to be the rule in all the places above mentioned.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Sixteenth Annual Exhibition, March 18 to 21st inclusive in conjunction with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

The fine hall of the Horticultural Society is the place of meeting. There promises to be some choice exhibits. Massachusetts has a local pride in this work, and local people are doing their best to make a fine showing. On Thursday, March 18th, by noon time, the pots and tubs will be staged; the next day, Friday, the cut blooms.

The schedule committee, Messrs. Louis J. Reuter, Alexander Montgomery and Thomas Roland, have done good work in fixing prizes; the special prizes are liberal. The final list, except for any additional prizes, is now distributed and the entry blanks are available. Secretary Rich of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society is giving all the aid and attention in his power to serve exhibitors.

The manager of the Rose Society's exhibits is Eber Holmes of Montrose, Mass. The manager of a rose show always has a job ahead, and so far the men who have acted in this capacity have made all things satisfactory to exhibitors and the interested public. Mr. Holmes will do that.

The annual membership dues are being paid well. There is a free ticket to all members. The election of officers will be an important event, also deciding where the show shall go next year. Philadelphia has spoken for it.

CHICAGO FLORISTS' CLUB.

The Chicago Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting on Monday instead of Thursday in order to meet socially the out-of-town florists here for the Directors' meeting of the S. A. F. After a short business session the meeting was turned over to the entertainment of the twenty or more visitors. E. G. Hill was called to the chair and after the luncheon, served as toastmaster in his own happy manner. Responses were made by President of the S. A. F., Patrick Welch, Irwin Bertermann, C. E. Critchell, R. C. Kerr of Texas, Herman Bartsch of Boston, Past President Theodore Wirth, Wm. F. Kasting, Alois Frey, August Poehlmann, Geo. Asmus and others.

FLORISTS' AND GARDENERS' CLUB OF RHODE ISLAND.

This club held its annual banquet and installation of officers in Swarts Lodge Hall, Providence, Tuesday evening, March 2, about 50 members being present to participate in the festivities. During the evening an entertainment was given by Benjamin Whittaker, pianist; John Canning, Philip F. Lavery, John White and James Dillon. President Hartstra was the toastmaster and following the festivities the exercises were concluded with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner." Secretary William E. Chappell was unable to attend and Robert Johnston filled the office. The committee of arrangements included Robert Johnston and Alexander Macrae.

The Yokohama Nurseries Company, with headquarters in Yokohama, Japan, and branches in New York and in London, England, is a business house of international repute, known to all those interested in horticulture the world over. At the San Francisco Exposition, an exhibit of this firm is one of the striking horticultural attractions of that wonderful fair. Mr. H. Suzuki, whose portrait appears here, is the managing director and eldest surviving son of the founder of this great house. He visited this country and Europe some years ago in company of his father, and he has hosts of friends in many lands. The writer of this note during the year 1914 was brought much in contact with Mr. Suzuki, and enjoyed several trips in Japan in his company. I was deeply impressed by his practical knowledge of Japanese plants and their native habitats. Among Japanese horticulturists his knowledge of exotic plants is unique. On lilies, Japanese iris, azaleas, and on peonies, he is an acknowledged specialist. He is imbued with that profound love for plants which characterizes all successful cultivators and nurserymen. In business he is ably assisted by a competent staff, among whom is numbered his younger brother, who is now in this country.

A man of great executive ability and deep knowledge, a cheery, optimistic traveling companion, and a courteous gentleman is Mr. H. Suzuki; may good health ever attend him through a long and prosperous life.

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

The next regular meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be on Monday, March 8th, at 7.30 o'clock P. M. Exhibits of roses are called for at this time. Flowers from a distance may be sent either to Max Schling, 22 West 59th street, New York, chairman of the Exhibition Committee, or in care of the Secretary, 53 West 28th street, New York. There will be a lecture by Prof. James Ross Lynch. Subject: Panama Canal—Description of the trip across the continent, via all routes, including the new Panama Canal route; seeing several points of interest, Yellowstone Park, the Grand Canon of Arizona, cities, etc., California, San Francisco and the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. Illustrated with stereopticon slides from actual photographs of the entire trip.

INTERNATIONAL FLOWER SHOW, MARCH 17-23, 1915.

This great exhibition which will be held in the Grand Central Palace, Lexington avenue and 46th street, New York, is now only about two weeks off and the outlook is that it will be successful from all points of view. The guarantors' list now amounts to $6,800. Orders of space in the program received to date amount to $1,700. Space reserved in the trade section amounts to $7,400. If you are interested in securing space in the trade section, Do It Now!

An arrangement has been made whereby trade tickets can be bought at the following prices: In blocks of 20 up to 100, at 25c. each; in blocks of 100 or more, 20c. each. Purchasers of 100 tickets or more may have their names printed thereon with the words "Compliments of."

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

New Bedford Horticultural Society.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Bedford Horticultural Society was held Monday evening, March 1, in the Public Library building. It was decided to hold two shows this coming summer, the first to be a peony and rose show, the exact date of which is to be decided later. President Roy offered the H. C. Converse cup again for the six best chrysanthemums at the fall show and is to award a cup this year to the exhibitor taking the most first prizes during the year. A committee was appointed to arrange details for the annual banquet to be held shortly after Lent.

Mr. Young, landscape gardener, gave a very interesting talk, in which he suggested that all the small shows of the society should be general shows, allowing exhibition of anything in the line of horticulture and offering premiums to encourage the small exhibitors. The merits of the new St. Regis ever-bearing raspberry were discussed. Mr. Young said that with him this variety bore fruit from the middle of June till the last of November, but gave its largest crop during the early fall. He thinks that it will displace the old Cuthbert.

Our stock is in prime condition, retarded dormant plants from 6-inch pots, in fine shape to flower for Spring Sales or for Memorial Day; any of the varieties described below at $30.00 per 100.

Avalanche. A splendid large white with a well established reputation; an easy variety to force.

Bouquet Rose. Large trusses of rosy amber turning to bright pink; a favorite with all growers.

Dentelle. Entirely distinct, deeply fringed flower of a creamy white color.

E. G. Hill. Trusses of immense size, color a most pleasing shade of pink which does not fade; growth vigorous, foliage of a pea green color, large and attractive.

General de Vibraye. A favorite wherever seen; very large heads of bright rose colored flowers. A splendid early forcing variety.

La Lorraine. Very large flowers, pale rose, turning to bright pink; has become a general favorite.

Mme. A. Riverain. Superb bright rose color; very vigorous and floriferous.

Mme. E. Mouillere. Probably the most popular white variety on the market today; an early easy variety to force.

Mme. Maurice Hamar. A delicate fresh-rose color, a vigorous grower, the individual flowers as well as the trusses being very large.

Mlle. Agnes Barillet. A splendid white; flowers large and very freely produced.

Mousseline. A beautiful mauve-rose with cream-colored center; the flower heads are large and held erect; a fine acquisition.

Mont Rose. Immense panicles of clear-flesh rose, entirely distinct, one of the best very early flowering varieties.

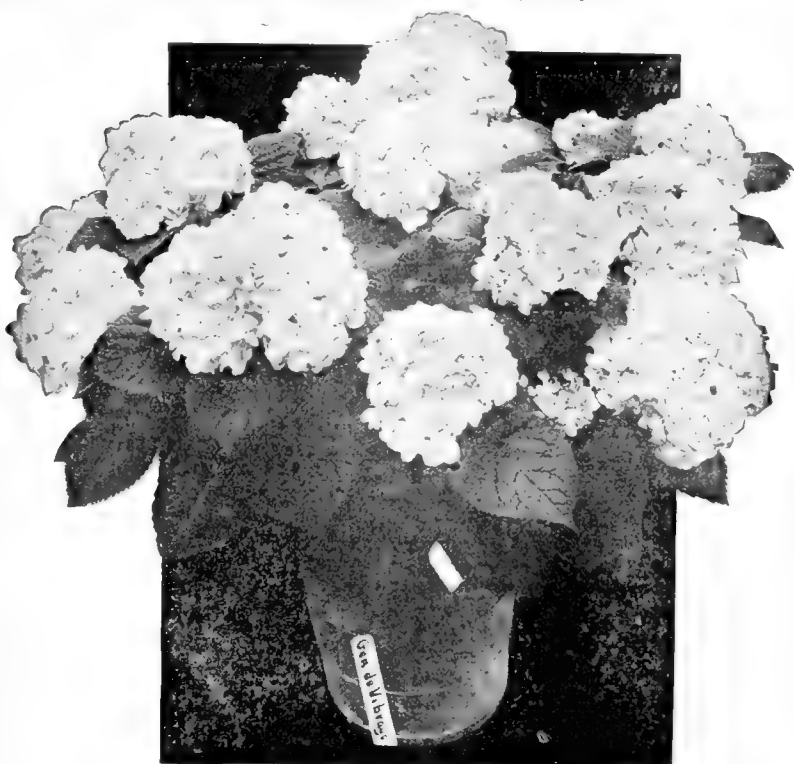

Ronsard. Flowers and trusses very large, of a beautiful rose-tint.

Souvenir de Mme. E. Chautard. One of the very best, of splendid erect habit, very robust, medium sized heads, of bright rose colored flowers; one of the very best of the Bouquet Rose type.

Senateur Henri David. Another splendid rose-colored variety, with red reflections; flowers produced in immense large heads; on the style of La Lorraine, but an earlier bloomer.

Vieux Chateau. Very large pure white, becoming suffused with delicate rosy carmine as they mature.

Hydrangea Oktaka. Dormant plants, 6-inch pots, $25.00 per 100; 10-inch tubs, $1.00 each; 12-inch tubs, $2.50 each.

OYSTER BAY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The regular monthly meeting of the Oyster Bay (N. Y.) Horticultural Society was held on Thursday evening, Feb. 25th. The exhibition tables were loaded down with splendid stock, there being seventeen entries for exhibition only, besides many entries for the monthly competition prizes. Jas. Duthie won all three of the latter. For exhibition only, the awards were as follows:

Jos. Robinson, cultural certificate for azalea; J. Ingraham, cultural certificate for callas, honorable mention for cattleyas; A. Lahodny, cultural certificate for Lilium formosum, honorable mention for larkspur and tulips; F. Kyle, honorable mention for Primula obconica; James Duthie, certificate of merit for Primula malacoides improved, honorable mention for cyclamen; H. Gibson, honorable mention for cucumbers and roses; Chas. Mills, thanks for string beans, roses and tulips; J. Sorosick, honorable mention for roses.

The Executive Committee presented preliminary schedules for the 1915 shows, which were accepted, and

CONNECTICUT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

It was a gorgeous sight that met the eye on entering the society's room in the County Building, Hartford, as John F. Huss, of Hartford, and George B. Baker, of New Britain, staged some twenty-four fine specimen cinerarias. The cactus cineraria was particularly attractive. The judges awarded the exhibit of Mr. Huss a first-class certificate, and that of Mr. Baker a cultural certificate, which was duly ratified by vote of the members.

We had with us on this occasion Maurice Fuld of New York, who gave a most interesting and edifying talk on roses. He addressed the amateurs particularly. The meeting did not adjourn until 10.30. The next meeting, March 12, will be "Carnation" night.

MASSACHUSETTS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

Students Visit Boston.

Under the guidance of Prof. A. H. Nehring, fourteen of the horticultural students at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, including nine of the Ten Week men, took a three days' instruction trip to Boston and vicinity last week. The first day, Thursday, included visits to three prominent growers at Framingham and to the Waban Rose Conservatories at Natick. J. F. Butterworth, the grand specialist, was the first man visited. Mr. Butterworth has been in business fifty years and it was with justifiable pride that he exhibited his valuable collection. He is using the oldest commercial greenhouse in Massachusetts, a plant to which was built in 1848, and he finds it admirably suited to cypripediums. When asked with what do you feed these plants, he replied in his characteristic way, "With brains, man, brains, nothing but brains." He emphasizes the fact that nothing is thrown away on his place. Calls were next made on S. J. Goddard, past president of the American Carnation Society, and on Wm. R. Nicholson. These men are carnation growers, especially, but they also raise minor crops. The best mignonette seen on the trip was at the Nicholson's.

The Waban Rose Conservatories proved to be the most extensive range the students saw. The plant consists of about thirty houses and comprises 300,000 square feet of glass. It contains the first steam boiler which was put in a greenhouse in this country. It is a Babcock & Wilcox, seventy-five horse-power, water-tube boiler which was installed in 1862. It is no longer used regularly but is now kept in reserve. The plant contains the first refrigerator for cut-flowers ever built in connection with a greenhouse establishment.

Friday was devoted to the markets, stores, and to private estates. A study of the methods of marketing and of the prices was made at the Boston Co-operative Flower Market and at the Boston Flower Market. At the latter, which is the largest exchange of its kind in this country, the product of one hundred and seventy-three establishments is offered for sale. During the remainder of the morning Penn's, Carbone's, Hoffman's and Galvin's two stores were visited, where flowers were seen on exhibition and floral pieces were seen in the process of making. A call was also made at the wholesale store of Henry M. Robinson & Co., and the afternoon was spent at Mrs. Brandegee's estate, the Faulkner Farm, and at Mr. Larz Anderson's country place, Weld Garden, Brookline, where the conservatories were inspected, following which the managers, Messrs. Craig and Finlayson respectively, conducted a tour over the estates, pointing out the important landscape features.

On Saturday the class went to Wm. Sim's at Cliftondale where excellent sweet peas and violets were seen. Mr. Sim was the first to erect greenhouses with high sides and to use wide houses for violets. The water for this range is raised by an electric pump from a drilled well 300 feet deep, at a cost of $250 yearly, whereas the cost from the city supply was formerly $1,000.

THE CONARD & JONES CO.

SWAS-TEEKA BRAND CANNAS West Grove, Pa.

Calls were also made at Thomas Roland's two ranges, one at Revere and one at Nahant. At Revere there were seen three large houses. One was devoted to 15,500 rose plants, another to sweet peas, and the third and newest house, 75x650 feet, though built for roses, was being prepared for open ground cultivation of 10,000 tomato plants. Two two-horse plows were in operation at the time, one a subsoiler following in the furrows of the other and incorporating manure. At the Nahant establishment were found the biggest collection of acacias in this country and the famous collection of ericas. The manager, Mr. Ringdahl, pointed with legitimate pride to the Erica melanthra which won the gold medal at Boston and New York and also a $100 prize. Here were houses devoted to excellent cyclamen, ramblers, and other plants. One house contained an array of 40,000 cuttings of Glory of Cincinnati begonia. But most interesting were the ericas and acacias.

One of the most impressive features of this valuable excursion for the students was the warm reception afforded by the different masters of floriculture. In every case attention was cheerfully given to the invading horde and the magnanimous spirit of these men, who by their success in their honorable calling commanded the respect of the prospective florists, was much appreciated by the entire class.

- 2.30 P. M. The Forcing of Plants. Ernest Downer, Northampton, Mass.
- 3.30 P. M. Question Box. A. H. Wingett, Lenox, Mass.

On these dates a Spring Flower Show, occupying the entire first floor of French Hall, will be held.

For further information write the Department of Floriculture, M. A. C., Amherst, Mass.

In preparing for its rose festival, the city of Portland, Ore., has commenced a large planting. The campaign was started by the City Beautiful Committee of the Rose Festival Association, and has found strong popular support. With the co-operation of the florists, about 100,000 rooted plants were distributed February 22, all varieties being sold at 12½ cents each, and it is expected that most of them will be in bloom during the festival next June.

EUROPEAN VICISSITUDES.

The many friends of Denaiffe & Son, seed growers, Carignan, France, will be pleased to hear that since the capture of Carignan, on the 30th of August last, no damage has been done to the town, and that the Denaiffe farms, their warehouses and other properties are uninjured and in perfect condition. Henry Denaiffe, the head of the firm, who was disbarred from military service by reason of age, has remained at Carignan. But his two sons, both members of the firm, are in the French army. John Colle, the eldest, sergeant in the 120th regiment, was unfortunate to be badly wounded by a bullet through the thigh, at the battle of Belle Fontaine on August 22, was taken prisoner, and now recovered from his wound, is interned at the prisoners' camp near Magdeburg, Prussia. Maurice, the other son, who made a tour of America, five years ago, is serving as aid to the military Governor of Ardennes, the department which includes nearly all the section of Northern France now occupied by the German army. His military duties take him from one city and town to the other; he is constantly on the go. His automobile record, since the war began is now over 40,000 kilometers, which will interest automobilists. His military experiences have been so thrilling that he is contemplating writing a book of his adventures, when the war is over. He has witnessed some very horrible and heartrending scenes. Twice he was nearly captured by the enemy and three different times he has been close to death by the explosion of shells around his automobile. Two nephews of Henry Denaiffe were killed in battle.

HOW THEY FEEL ABOUT IT IN SURREY.

The following extracts are from a personal letter dated Egham Surrey, Jan. 20th.

"Today everybody is talking about the Zeppelin raid on Yarmouth and asking querulously 'Where is our navy and what is it doing?' To one of these pessimists I said 'where did you get your average from this morning?' He was the average man in the street and it took some moments for the light to penetrate his mental haziness. Depend upon it, this war will be decided by what that fine old Aberdonian, Dugald Dalgethy, called 'prudent.' Sir Edward Grey the keenest intellect in Europe, will see to that. Some time ago I was at a dinner in London where the table decorations were mostly Lillium Harris, and one of the speakers, a learned botanist, began to descant on lilies in a very impressive manner. Immediately I could see William K. Harris bowling at the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, also yourself, and the McCallum More; and John Westcott, Jack Dunham, and his dapper little lawyer friend; also John G. Gardner and a host of others. Suddenly I was asked to come out of my trance and say something, which I promptly did and confined myself to Lillium Harris and its introducer and his characteristics.

For the rest of the evening the great authority on lilies entertained a higher opinion of me than I really deserved but when he interviewed me I thought it wise to talk about Roumania and Transylvania and the war, for I was well aware that my knowledge of the lily family was only of an excursionary character. Mr. Harris died shortly after my leaving your midst but as long as the lily grows, William K. will live. . . . My retreat is between Broadstairs and Margate. It is close to the North Foulard Lighthouse and is an old smugglers' village with caves and underground passages made by those real Free Traders. There is a church and also an inn—both of which are alike in one respect, as they both dispense spiritual comfort. I know because I have tried both. The church is just eight and one-half yards from the inn. You see I am still an accurate authority on points of great importance—as becomes my early legal education which I have never used. . . . I can still do my twenty-mile walk and occasionally when going along a country lane I think of my walks from Ardmore to Wayne and sometimes "King of Prussia." That name on the inns here is now conspicuous by its absence!

The above letter is from Stewart Barclay Lohman, a famous English cricketer, well known to the horticultural fraternity around Philadelphia. These extracts will interest and amuse many of his old friends who are readers of HORTICULTURE and I hand them along solely for that purpose and hope that by so doing I am doing nothing to fracture this country's steel-clad neutrality!

N. F. McCarthy of Boston is in St. Georges, Bermuda, for a month's rest and recuperation before the opening of the strenuous spring plant auction season.

Aug. C. F. Obermeyer, Jr., who has worked in greenhouses through the west and for the past five years has been with R. W. Allen, whose death was Jan. 10, 1915, has now accepted a position with Leon Hathaway as foreman and will have charge of all the design and floral work and also the green houses, 13 in all, which Leon Hathaway has just purchased of the R. W. Allen estate.

New Method for Fumigating Imported Seed.

A satisfactory method for destroying injurious insects in imported seed without affecting the value of the seed has been used by the United States Department of Agriculture, and is described in a new bulletin (No. 186) entitled, "A Method of Fumigating Seed." Interested individuals who apply to the Department at Washington, D. C., will be sent the bulletin.

In the new method, the infested seed is placed in a chamber in which a partial vacuum has been created. The chamber is then filled with a very deadly gas—hydro-cyanic acid—which penetrates more effectively into the seed, because of the previously created vacuum. It has been found that a considerably shorter exposure was necessary in using this method of fumigation than in the usual method. The bulletin describes the experiment completely, giving details and illustrations of the chamber used in the experiment.

Hydro-cyanic acid is, of course, a most dangerous poison and should not be handled by any except those who are thoroughly familiar with it. Another gas—Carbon bisulphide—is to be used by the department in a similar experiment, the results of which will be announced later.

"Pork Bar!" Congressmen.

The House of Representatives in Washington, Jan. 26th, threw to the sparrows the price of a couple of companies of infantry, or coast artillery for the defence of some great port, when efforts to eliminate from the agricultural appropriation bill the indefensible item for the distribution of free seeds were defeated by the supporters of this petty congressional prerogative. For another year, at least, a sum in excess of $250,000 will be squandered on this, the cheapest of all the cheap practices of which the national lawmakers are guilty. The pages of the Congressional Record are filled with convincing arguments establishing the folly and extravagance of the free seed system, but a majority of the small fry of Congress is invariably mustered to perpetuate the custom. Of no agricultural value whatsoever, since the seed distributed are of the commonest varieties, and given in quantities too small to be of practical use to any save back-yard and window-box farmers, the little packages are designed wholly for the consumption of those for whom the something-for-nothing idea has an irresistible appeal. Picayunish though they may be individually, the packages of early sweet corn and climbing nasturtiums are, in the aggregate, a heavy burden upon the treasury, and their distribution should be discontinued. It is significant that the principal advocates of free seed are the very gentlemen who ordinarily have the most to say about "Democratic economy," who cheerfully vote millions for tribute but not one cent for defence. Scratch the average defender of the free seed perquisite and nine times out of ten you will find a little navy "pork bar!" congressman.

Boston Transcript.

A Pleasant Recognition.

The Henry F. Michell Co. are daily in receipt of compliments for their seed book of this year—the finest they have ever issued, and which celebrates their 25th anniversary. The following from one of their European correspondents is a sample.

Arnhem, Holland, January 26th, 1915
The Henry F. Michell Co.,
Philadelphia, Pa., U. S. A.
Gentlemen:

We received in due time your favor of the 5th instant and the copy of your catalogue has also come to hand. We are very much pleased with it and beg to tender you our best thanks for thinking to mail us a copy.

It behooves us to offer you our sincerest congratulations on the 25th Anniversary of your firm's existence, and to express the hope that, as time passes on, the "silver" copy may be followed by a "golden" one.

The history of the firm, as written by Mr. Watson is in itself a prophecy that this business, conducted by so competent leaders who have caused it to grow so wonderfully and rapidly will, with another 25 years of life added to the first quarter of a century, give the historian of the future a grateful work to do by adding another brilliant page to the firm's history. Our mutual friend, Mr. George C. Watson, is just the man to write a history like this. No friend of exaggerating things, he lets facts speak for themselves, and in your case they require no embellishment. May he be the author of the history of the 50th Anniversary of your firm, too!

Yours very truly,

(Signed)

DARENBERG, BURGERS & Co.

A New Seed House.

One of the latest ventures in the seed trade has been launched recently at Canton, O.—the Holmes-Letherman Seed Co. at 126 North Cleveland Ave. Mr. Holmes is a son of H. L. Holmes, a Pennsylvania seedsman, and Mr. Letherman is a local capitalist of Canton. The company's first catalogue is a beauty; also practical and to the point. We hear that business with the new firm to date has been excellent, and away beyond expectations. Congratulations are in order and are hereby cordially extended.

G. C. WATSON.

Notes.

The value of horticultural imports into New York for the week ending February 20, 1915, is given as follows: Manure salt, $36,088; nitrate of soda, $141,447; fertilizer, $31,143; guano, $1,653; clover seed, $98,718; grass seed, $67,996; trees and plants, $42,448.

The testimonials which we have seen, prove beyond question or doubt that we do not have to depend upon foreign sources for a tomato that possesses all the desirable qualities. "John Baer," advertised in this paper by an American house of irreproachable character, fills the bill better than any that are being exploited by foreign advertisers in other mediums. Don't bother with them until you have given John Baer a trial.

Of Interest to Retail FloristsBUTTERFLIES FOR THE FLORIST.

The increasing use of mounted and living insects in floral decorations has assumed an important aspect in the last few years. Few things will help so much to call attention to the flower shop as bright colored butterflies and moths fluttering about in the window or attractive mounted specimens pinned to corsages, bouquets, baskets or cards inserted in boxes. In every big city there is at least one florist who appreciates any touch of individuality and richness given to the tone of his establishment; he is the one who will make use of these dainty bits of Nature. They bring the wonderful beauty of Nature's works a little closer and the combination of these creations in the animal and plant worlds makes a very agreeable impression.

Mounted specimens of delicately colored insects are being used effectively in floral decorations where added natural effects are wanted. The setting of a butterfly on a basket piece, with wings outstretched, as if ready to flutter away, gives that exquisite air of refined natural grace that is the despair and delight of many a floral artist. The luxury-loving, beauty-worshipping class of flower buyers, those who are looking for new creations, novel combinations, and the genius that is the gift of but few in the florist trade, are willing to pay liberally for this added touch of something different.

We do a large business in baskets, and it is in the planning of new effects scores of times during the week that these butterflies and moths come to our aid. There is a great variety of color combinations to be found in these insects, therefore making the blends and contrasts with flowers infinite. Pinned to the handle of a basket, with wings outspread, the effect of a well made basket and appropriate ribbon is fine. We have often sold a basket of flowers on the strength of the little winged insect attached to the ribbon, handle, or set on the flowers themselves. As a little trade secret I might add that the profit from the use of butterflies and moths is big, enough to warrant their liberal use by all progressive florists.

They also come in handy on table decorations, especially at large banquets, where plenty of table space is given for good effects. We have often secured $5 to $10 for single mounted specimens that were rare and beautiful. Placed at random over the tables, perched on the flowers in the vases, ready to fly from the garland-covered posts, attached to the corsage at each lady's plate, their use helps out very much to give tone to the floral display. Many species can be bought at low prices, averaging 15 cents to 20 cents each, allowing for their use in large numbers.

Some retail florists use beetles, as well as butterflies and moths, and while not as delicate and finely colored, these beetles by their very ugliness and grotesqueness attract considerable attention. We are always searching for the things that will make our store different from the rest, and little things such as these insects have been of great advantage to us.

Individuality should be one of the big ideals in every business man's code, whether he be florist or otherwise.

The Easter season is approaching, and every florist has unlimited opportunity to express his individuality in an infinite number of ways. I am not referring to general business methods just now, but to the touches of something different in decorations and basket displays that make for the reputation of a florist in that department.
Mounted butterflies and moths are only little things, and but a very small part of the florist's equipment;
but each little thing becomes big if it gives us that intangible impression of being different—so there you have the idea.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

Several local florists are talking of a protest campaign against the use of green-dyed carnations on St. Patrick's Day.

Houghton & Gorney Co. have their store illumined with a big display of forced forsythia in the centre this week.

P. Welch, William R. Nicholson, Thomas Roland and Herman Bartsch are absent, this week, attending the Executive Board meeting of the S. A. F. in Chicago.

Some specialties noted this week are Spanish iris from F. P. Putnam of Lowell, callas from Chas. Evans of Watertown, sweet peas from Wm. Sim of Chittendale, violets from John Cummings of Woburn, and bougainvilleas from Thos. Roland of Nahant.

Julius Zinn reports a good business since his removal a few doors nearer the Beacon Hill end of Park street. An attraction in his window this week is one of Roper's sensational seedling carnations, and blooming rhododendrons inside make a very inviting picture.

Carbone had a fine display of blue iris in his window this week. Business has been fairly good with this firm, although most of it has been done in statuary and pottery, rather than in cut flowers. A special line of baskets and stone receptacles will be featured for Easter.

A large attendance is expected at the annual banquet of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club at the New American House, March 10. An attractive program is promised, ending with dancing. All members are urged to attend, as a good time is always to be had at this annual event.

The street vendors are coming into their own just now. As far as the violet growers are concerned these people are almost a necessity, if the salesmen would clean up at the end of the day. Where does the grower's profit come in, selling violets at 15c. to 18c. per 100? The violet market certainly has been hard hit this year in Boston.

Harry Quint's new store on Boylston street was opened up last Saturday. The amount of business done was surprising, considering the unfinished condition of the store. Mr. Quint will follow his plan of popular prices, an innovation for this neighborhood, in the Back Bay. Even flower buyers who are in a position to pay high prices seem to take kindly to the popular price idea.

The credit protective association of local growers and wholesalers is being actively pushed. Papers are now in circulation for prospective members to sign. Several prominent retailers are also encouraging the movement, expressing their willingness to abide by any fair regulations proposed by the association. The plan is good and warrants the co-operation of all Boston florists. An expression of opinion in the form of an article from a noted retailer will appear shortly in the columns of HORTICULTURE.

CHICAGO.

Chas. A. Samuelson is in southern Idaho where he has a large apple orchard.

George Walther, a prominent south side florist, is confined to his home with tonsillitis.

George Kirchoff, of the F. Oechslein force, has the sympathy of the trade in the sudden death of his father.

Word has been received from Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Smyth, that they greatly enjoyed their winter vacation in Florida and Cuba and are now on their way home.

The genial face of the postman who has traversed Wabash avenue for 20 years, will be missed by some of the florists, for Christ Sorenson brought their mail for the last time on Saturday. Sunday he was ill and Monday he passed away. Not a florist—but carrying mail to florists is surely an "allied industry."

A. J. Simmons says business has averaged good on the far south side of the city and has added an auto delivery to his retail store equipment. This he regards now as a necessity. Collections are reported very slow. Mr. Simmons has almost entirely regained his health and with the assistance of Mrs. Simmons has made the store one of the most attractive in his locality.

Julius Wall now has the new greenhouses at 3235 Springfield avenue, in the best of condition. These houses were in the process of construction when his father died, last June, and the young man has devoted himself to completing the work. The old place was on School street where the business was started thirty years ago. The new location is a fine one and the houses are filled with a general line of bedding stock. Both wholesale and retail trade is carried on and there will be some good stock for Easter.

For many months the force of employees at the Foley Greenhouse Manufacturing Company have put in all their spare time completing the factory, and now there is not a better equipped plant for the purpose in the country. A railroad track on the south side brings all material into the factory and another to the north carries out the finished products, while the large space between is used for a lumber yard. The ground floor of the factory is given to the iron work where each machine is run by a separate motor, and adjoining this is a large room for painting and stacking wood work. The upper room has been partly double-decked and about 30,000 square feet of floor space is devoted to the production of all that goes to make a first-class greenhouse. A visit here would be a revelation to one who has been accustomed to look at greenhouse building as a simple affair. Mr. Foley has just been granted a patent on a bar bracket for attaching wood bars to iron gutters. The piece is comparatively small but very important. The case had been pending for some time. C. H. Schlueter, secretary of the company, was recently married to Eleanor Schultz.

SAN FRANCISCO.

John Fotheringham, the well-known representative of European and Eastern houses, has just returned from the East.

Hogan, Kooyman & Co. are furnishing a large number of potted palms and ferns for the Netherlands building, which is now being completed.

One of the exhibits which is attracting much attention is that of orchids in the Philippine Islands building, which was formally dedicated February 26. This exhibit contains over 4,000 specimens, and is valued at about $20,000. Many of the varieties, it is said, are being shown in this country for the first time.

The Art Floral Company of this city was made the victim of a practical joker a few days ago, when some "friend" of the house took its automobile around the block and left it in a back alley. The company was put to no little inconvenience and several hours elapsed, during which police assistance was asked for, before the machine was located.

Attention is still centered upon the Exposition, in which flowers are already a prominent feature, though comparatively little of the general plantings is now in bloom. Planting around many of the state and national buildings is still incomplete, but is being rushed as fast as possible. One of the most interesting events was the celebration of San Mateo county on Thursday of this week. Most of the violets for the San Francisco market are grown in that county, and these flowers by the ton, several wagonloads in all, were heaped in a mound inside the Scott street entrance. The flowers were distributed by three thousand San Mateo school children, who presented a bunch to every visitor to the Exposition; and about 15,000 bunches were distributed among the San Mateo delegation alone.

WASHINGTON.

William F. Gude has gone to Chicago for the purpose of attending the meeting of the executive board of the S. A. F. and O. H.

Frank W. Bolgiano is named as among those elected at the meeting of the executive committee as new members of the Washington Board of Trade.

Charles F. Diggs has been appointed receiver of the bankrupt estate of the Washington Florists' Company, and the case has been referred to Ralph D. Quinter, referee in bankruptcy. The first meeting of the creditors was held on March 1. The bond of the receiver has been placed at $4000.

J. Henry Small has been selected by President R. P. Andrews as a member of the committee on credits and collections, considered one of the most important committees of the Retail Merchants' Association, and Z. D. Blackstone will serve on the committee on trade abuses, and William Marche on the committee on home trade.

FLORISTS' CLUB OF PHILADELPHIA.

Edward A. Harvey, of Alban Harvey & Son, Brandywine Summit, gave an excellent address on carnations at the monthly meeting of the club on March 2nd. The discussion on same was participated in by some of our brightest lights, including Samuel S. Pennock, Edward Reid and many others. John C. Gracey, vice-president, occupied the chair in the absence of George Burton at Chicago. He proved a most efficient and entertaining presiding officer. The wit and wisdom of the meeting was ably taken care of by Charles E. Meehan, who put things to the audience in a plain business like way. A great feature was a delegation from Lancaster who had been visiting nearby places with Samuel S. Pennock as pilot and host. They enjoyed themselves splendidly and were sorry they had to take the eight fifty and miss much of the fun. Albert M. Herr, an old-timer, was with them to show them around and explain the situation. They called first at the Stroud place at Strafford then passed through Philadelphia and later visited North Wales. Then they went to Hatboro and on the way back called at Stephenson's, the celebrated Oak Lane rose growers.

At the club meeting there was a good showing of carnations, among them being White Enchantress, Pink seedling of Enchantress, Beacon, Ruth, a fine new cerise, a white seedling from DeWitt, a new one called Gracie from Roper, also a good showing of Alice Coombs, Mrs. C. W. Ward and Peter Fisher's Alice. Mrs. Akehurst from Akehurst & Son and Morning Glory from Edw. Winkler were also among the much admired exhibits. Most of the foregoing were shown under the care of the Pennock-Meehan Co., whose representatives were present to care for and stage and explain about the merits of the various new and interesting things in the world of progress.

Charles F. Edgar showed an interesting lot of suction adhesive flower holders. These look all right to us, and Mr. Edgar asked us to give him a good notice about them. When a lad starts in to ask for free advertising he betrays that he has much to learn about the business game. If one starts in that direction "it's a long long way to Tipperary." We have axes of our own to grind; sure; but we grind them ourselves or pay the other fellow. We are not looking for something for nothing. Come across, Mr. Edgar, and we shall give our readers some of that dollar-a-word stuff!

LADIES' SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Wishing to get the opinion of the members as to the use to which society money should be devoted—educational purposes or annual reception—the secretary sent out at her own expense about 300 postal cards and received back 133 expressing preferences as follows: Educational, 89; reception, 36; no opinion, 8. In reply to the question, "Are you planning to go to California in 1915?" there were 27 affirmative responses.

NEWS NOTES.

Philadelphia—Stuart H. Miller, our new commission man, launched his boat right on time, Monday morning, March 1st, at 1617 Ranstead street. He was kept busy in the early days receiving old friends and welcoming new—and at the same time doing a hustling business. Everybody feels kindly towards Stuart. All wish him well and they are giving him a share of their business. Actions speak louder than words.

Providence, R. I.—Mrs. Mary A. Conley, a florist of Providence, and her daughter Miss Anna F. Conley, had a narrow escape from serious injury Tuesday afternoon when a motor car in which they were riding skidded over an embankment and rested upon its side on the edge of a brook. The accident happened on the Francis farm in Warwick. The occupants of the car escaped with minor bruises. The car was damaged considerably.

Elmira, N. Y.—Mrs. Catherine Jackson, has purchased the La France Carnation Shop, 100 East Water Street.

Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society.

The annual entertainment and dance of this society was held in Mechanics' Hall, Stamford, Conn., Tuesday eve., Feb. 16th. The members with their wives, families and friends together with a very large number of representatives of leading seed houses and nursery firms were welcomed by President W. J. Sealy. A pleasing program was rendered, the leading features of which were Scotch ballads sung by Mrs. James W. Stirling, old-time songs by Owen Hunwick, character songs and dances by Prof. Wilson, violin solos by the talented young son of Jas. Foster, sleight-of-hand acts by Prof. Melcher, various classical, topical, sentimental and popular songs by Hon. John M. Brown, Mayor of Stamford, Ct., W. J. Collins of Boston, Jas. Johnston and A. L. Ricards. An excellent buffet lunch was served, a plentiful supply of fruit and candies were available for the little folks and an excellent orchestra was in attendance. A pleasing dance program was rendered under the able management of Jas. Johnston, assisted by Alex. Clarkson, the grand march being led by Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Stuart. A tired but happy crowd wended their way homeward in the "wee sma hours."

The Essex County, N. J., Florists' Club gave its annual banquet Thursday night, February 18, at the Krueger Auditorium in Belmont avenue, Newark. A feature of the dinner was the elaborate floral decorations, each member trying to outdo his neighbor in displaying the choicest blooms. Plates were set for eighty-five. There was speechmaking in abundance.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Business? There isn't any! That is the concise and illuminating report of all branches of the trade this week. The weather is clear and sunny, the air filled with that intangible snap that heralds the approach of spring and stock is excellent and none too plentiful; but the retailers will not buy and therein is contained the whole story. The full effects of Lent are being felt, intensified by the general business depression. Violets, especially, are hard hit, cleaning up each day only through the good graces of the street boys. Their quality is good and should fetch better prices, certainly more than the 25c. to 30c. per 100 now secured with difficulty. Carnations were selling fairly well at the beginning of the week, but at the present writing even the best varieties of the best growers hardly earn $3.50 per 100. Roses are plentiful and suffer with other kinds of flowers. The only stock really selling easily is yellow jonquils and potted tulips. These are being sold at "popular prices" all over the city.

Conditions are about CHICAGO normal. A fair amount of trade is coming to the wholesaler and a fair amount of stock is at his disposal. Lent has not cut into sales very materially, neither has a stormy week curtailed sales and the average florist wears a smile this week. Carnations are considered scarce and particularly in white, even "splits" being eagerly bought up. Roses are still off crop but the supply is increasing a little each week. The first shipments of southern jonquils have arrived, small and single, but in good condition and as the market was not flooded with home-grown ones, they sold readily, bringing 60c. and 75c. per 100. Violets still are bringing small returns and sell slowly. Tulips are doing very well. Sales continue to use up practically all that come each day. American Beauties are still scarce and no change is in sight. Southern Asparagus sprengeri arrives in fine condition and is put up in both large and small bunches.

Business taken as a CINCINNATI whole is pretty good. Besides the usual demand for flowers there is a demand occasioned by the opening of new stores and the early spring openings in the retail shopping district. The call from out of town is very strong. The rose supply is now about equal to requirements. Carnations still clean up very readily and their supply has increased somewhat. Bulbous stock is in a good steady supply and meets with a fair market. Lilies and callas are plentiful. The sweet pea cut is very large and includes many fancy blooms. Lily of the valley and violets move rather slowly.

The sales for NEW BEDFORD Valentine's Day and Washington's Birthday were unusually good, exceeding all expectations. Violets especially were in great demand. This appeared to be the result of a very small amount of judicious advertising. It seems probable that if another year this line should be followed up the result might be greatly to the advantage of the trade. Since the continued dark weather of the middle and last of February seems at last to have come to an end, stock in general is rapidly picking up. Tulips and hyacinths are very fine, though many of the Dutch narcissus bulbs are blind.

Roses are still high and much in demand. Carnations are selling well, and the sale of violets is exceptionally good.

NEW YORK The usual mid-lent conditions are apparent on all sides in the wholesale districts. In the case of some things the stagnation is not only as usual but greatly aggravated and, when we consider the extremely low ebb of business among the leading retail stores, it is an object for thankfulness that the situation is no worse than it is. The worst problem is the disposal of bulbous stock and violets. Roses have managed to move fairly well, taken all in all, and carnations might be much harder hit than they have been thus far. It is a little early to mention Easter prospects but we should not be surprised to see a very heavy crop generally of all regular specialties at that time. The rather moderate production since January has been a good thing for the market.

PHILADELPHIA We have experienced rather a dull week—a superabundance of flowers and business not very good. The first part of last week was especially bad. At the end things picked up a bit and the colder weather has held crops within bounds a little. The worst sufferers in the congestion were bulbous flowers: tulips, paper whites, daffodils, freesias, etc. Lilies did not suffer so much as the supply of these is better controlled all through the season. Roses are very plentiful and carnations are also in larger supply. Prices on the latter have receded to quite a noticeable extent. Violets are a drag and a drug. Lily of the valley not much better. Lilac, plentiful and in fair demand. Not so many cattleyas and prices slightly firmer; Schroedera is the best one now arriving. Snapdragon is of better quality and selling well.

SAN FRANCISCO Business has fallen off somewhat this week, though the natural quietness of the Lenten season is partly counteracted by the social activity due to the Exposition, and by small purchases by visitors to the city. Shipping trade in violets is light, and with stock more plentiful than ever, and also very fine, prices are low. The northern demand for roses keeps up fairly well, but the abundance of spring flowers is injuring their sale locally. There is now a large cut of most varieties, only American Beauties being a little scarce and hardly up to standard. Killarney and Maryland are especially good, and move readily. Hyacinths are now very plentiful, and tulips rather more so than usual at this season, while other bulb stock is in profusion. The large offerings and fine quality naturally stimulate a lively demand, but prices are low. Carnations are deteriorating, and find little demand in competition with bulb stock. This week's cut of gardenias is about the best ever seen here, with stems a foot long, and many blossoms 4 to 5 inches in diameter. The supply of orchids is getting down to normal again, with a corresponding steadying of prices. There is a heavy demand for ferns and palms, but the supply so far has been sufficient for all requirements. Practically all the growers are bringing in heavy offerings of Formosum lilies.

ST. LOUIS There was a good market last week. The dark weather cut the supply down somewhat and this seemed to increase the demand and raised the prices a few cents on all stock. Sweet peas and violets were in good supply and demand, and mainly so in the fancy grades. As the season advances, bulb stock is coming in more and more. There are enough roses and carnations for the daily demand with prices a little high on these.

WASHINGTON Business last week was very dull. There was a large accumulation of stock of all kinds which forced already low prices still lower. Particularly was this true of carnations. Colder weather put a halt to the oversupply and they have now regained former prices. In roses the cut of the week was more than double that of the week preceding, but this, too, is now a thing of the past. Cattleyas are going off crop. There is a glut of New York violets and they are not moving to any great extent except along the streets. There are more than three times as many sweet peas than there were two weeks ago and prices have dropped. Snapdragon is somewhat more plentiful than it has been and is moving slowly. Narcissi and daffodils are not moving at all. Single jonquils from the south find no market here. A scarcity is reported of American Beauty roses and of gardenias but there are enough of both to meet the limited call for them.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

The Proceedings of the Sixteenth Annual Convention of the American Association of Park Superintendents, held at Newburgh, N. Y., August 24-27, 1914, has been received from Secretary Cotterill. Full page portraits of President Amrhn and the secretary are inserted as well as a page of portraits of six vice-presidents. An interesting volume.

West Chicago Park Commissioners. The 55th Annual Report of the work on this great park system is, as usual, very interesting and profusely illustrated by full page views of objects of interest in the park, planting scenes, playground activities, etc. A. C. Schrader is superintendent and engineer and Jens Jensen is consulting landscape architect.

Bulletin 160 of the Agricultural Experiment Station of the Rhode Island State College deals with the comparative effect on different kinds of plants of liming an acid soil. Experiments covering many years are described and results summarized. These tabulated facts with the illustrations accompanying them will be found very valuable by those of our readers interested in soil fertility problems. Copies may be had free upon request to the College, Kingston, R. I.

The Brooklyn (N. Y.) Botanic Garden is doing some excellent educational work by the issuance from time to time of leaflets on various subjects of horticultural interest. "Heredity, Variation and Environment," "Hedge Plants," "Window Boxes," "Grafts, Grafting and Graft Hybrids," are examples of the titles of some of those most interesting to the professional gardener. Current numbers of these leaflets are free to all who wish them. The back series, complete, may be had for 50 cents.

Practical Talks on Farm Engineering. By R. P. Clarkson, B. S., Professor of Engineering at Acadia University, Nova Scotia. In this volume, Doubleday, Page & Co., have added one more very useful book to the series of practical works on horticultural subjects for which this publishing house is well known, for it is by no means a book of value to the farmer alone but will interest and instruct anyone who has to deal with the proper preparation, planting and general care of grounds of any great extent whether for utility or beauty. The contents of the book are based largely on matter previously written by the author for various periodicals. The list of topics includes Farm Buildings and Building Materials, Water Supply and Sewage Disposal, Mechanical Power, Drainage and Irrigation, Road Building, Orchard Heaters, etc., covered in detail in twenty-five chapters. There are forty-three illustrations and seven useful tables for engineering calculations which will be found very useful for frequent reference. The cost of the book is $1.20 net. Copies may be obtained from the office of HORTICULTURE

Bertrand H. Farr, Wyomissing, Pa.—
Illustrated Price List of Hardy Garden Plants. This is one of the daintiest and most "classy" catalogues that reaches our desk. This year it is better, if that were possible, than any of its predecessors. Irises and peonies figure largely in the contents and the lists are a standard by which the hardy garden planter may be safely guided. A number of full page illustrations in natural colors add beauty and interest to the book.

At the monthly meeting of The Medford (Mass.) Horticultural Society on February 23, Wm. N. Craig of Brooklyn gave a lecture on "The preparations of soils for spring planting; how, when and what to plant." Mr. Craig spoke for about an hour, strongly condemning the slipshod manner in which farm and garden soils are quite often prepared for planting. His remarks on insects and other pests, with remedies for combating them, were especially instructive. His experiences with various manures and fertilizers, in the growing of crops and dressing of lawns, was one the members of the society, were greatly interested in, as they had discussed the question at previous meetings. Mr. Craig answered questions for nearly an hour after his lecture, on troubles in the garden.

GEORGE F. SIEWART.

One of the many good features of "HORTICULTURE" is, that those who contribute to its columns always "say something" when they write. I take this opportunity to offer sincere congratulations. "May your shadow never grow less."

South American Sheep and Goat Manure

We have just landed the Third 1000 Ton Cargo in New England and it is certainly as good or even better than the last. If South American Goat and Sheep Manure had not come up to the expectations of the growers who bought the first, or if we could not guarantee to furnish the same high grade article, which has built up for itself and for us such a splendid reputation from the very first start, we would never have had to send a ship after another 1000 tons. That's plain. We have an abundant supply for New England and it is our aim to keep this right up to the high standard you know it to be. It is ground fine and is clean to handle, makes an ideal liquid manure, which is safe. WE GUARANTEE OUR S. A. S. & G. M. TO BE ABSOLUTELY PURE. Spring is near and plants need feeding. For Roses, Carnations, Lilies, Ferns, Palms, or any other plants, our S. A. S. & G. M. will do just what a full meal will do for a hungry man.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

Charles E. Bessey

Nebraska is in mourning. Dr. Chas. E. Bessey, Professor of Botany and Dean of the Nebraska University, died on Feb. 25th. He was a student of Asa Grey and since his death was probably the leading botanist of America. He was born in Ohio in 1845. Became professor of botany in the Iowa Agricultural College. In 1882 he came to the Nebraska University. He did not confine himself to botany but was intensely interested in forestry, horticulture and floriculture. We always depended on him. He was a man of large experience and wide acquaintance. He reared an army of scholars who now occupy prominent places. He was a genial, cheerful and helpful man. One of his last public acts was at the great banquet of organized agriculture where the writer was the guest of honor, when Dr. Bessey, the leading speaker, paid such a beautiful tribute, which is one of the happiest memories of my life. Surely I have lost a friend.

A. T. Vick, until recently engaged in the florist business in Albion, N. Y., died in the hospital in Buffalo on February 16, aged 57 years.

The Frank G. Smith Forestry Company of Phenix, R. I., suffered a loss by fire and water in the three-story block on the night of Feb. 25, the basement of the building where the headquarters of the firm are located being flooded.

OUR PRICES WILL PROVE THIS.

CHICAGO, ILL.

IF YOU ONLY KNEW what a good leave the METROPOLITAN PATENT-ED is, you would use no other. It is made of cast iron and will not rust. That part of your greenhouse which in other constructions is the weakest becomes the strongest. Not this alone, it is ice-clearing and carries all the water of condensation from the inside, and it is so constructed that almost the entire end of the bar is exposed to the air, thereby preventing decay. Only one screw, about two inches from the end, is all that is necessary to secure the bars. For side stationary glass, wood headers are absolutely unnecessary, thereby causing no shade. Zinc glass stops are not necessary—the cave is made with a lug to prevent the glass from slipping. Let your next house be built with a Metropolitan Patented Iron Wall Construction. You will never regret it. Our price and service are right.

Mr. Schunemann himself, holding a vase of his famous long-stemmed sweet pea blooms.

This new house of Mr. Schunemann's is 18 feet wide and 236 feet long. He also has three other Hitchings houses, each 30 feet wide and 150 feet long.

Mr. Schunemann again. The sides of the house are 9 feet high and equipped with transom sash.

George Schunemann Builds a Reconstructed Construction House at Baldwin, Long Island

If you have the pleasure of Mr. Schunemann's acquaintance, you know he is a man of many practical ideas. He is a man of facts, not theoretical facts—but proven facts. When, therefore, he decided to put some of his sweet pea profits into building a reconstructed construction house, we were very much gratified when he decided it should be our business to sell it to him, because of the thorough way he went into every detail.

Step by step, Mr. Schunemann anything but a novice in the building business, and spending between rafters of 12 feet 1 1/2 inches, and 30 feet high and equipped with transom sash.

With our regular 8 feet 4 inches spacing between rafters, there would have been 30 columns and posts, or 10 more of each. The columns are pipe. The posts are high carbon steel, the same as the rafters. They are secured to special cast iron bases, embedded in concrete. No part of the post itself is below ground. The rafters and post being in one piece, and bolt to shape when at white heat, the entire line is entirely free from any heavy ball jointed splice plates. This Reconstructed Construction has eight distinctly different construction features, all of which are both described and illustrated in a special circular recently printed and sent for one.

Remember that "we go anywhere for business" or to talk business. And "you can depend on depending on Hitchings."

THE NEW FRENCH HYDRANGEAS

FOR SPRING SALES AND MEMORIAL DAY

Our stock is in prime condition, retarded dormant plants from 6-inch pots, in fine shape to flower for Spring Sales or for Memorial Day; any of the varieties described below at $30.00 per 100

Avalanche. A splendid large white with a well established reputation, an easy variety to force.

Bouquet Rose. Large trusses of rosy amber turning to bright pink, a favorite with all growers.

Dentelle. Entirely distinct, deeply fringed flower of a creamy white color.

E. G. Hill. Trusses of immense size, color a most pleasing shade of pink which does not fade, growth vigorous, foliage of a pea green color, large and attractive.

General de Vibreux. A favorite wherever seen; very large heads of bright rose colored flowers. A splendid early forcing variety.

La Lorraine. Very large flowers, pale rose, turning to bright pink; has become a general favorite.

Mme. A. Rivecourt. Superb bright rose color; very vigorous and prolific.

Mme. E. Mouillere. Probably the most popular white variety on the market today; an early easy variety to force.

Mme. Maurice Haman. A delicate fresh-rose color, a vigorous grower, the individual flowers as well as the trusses being very large.

Mlle. Agnes Barillet. A splendid white; flowers large and very freely produced.

Mousseline. A beautiful mauve-rose with cream-colored center; the flower heads are large and held erect; a fine acquisition.

Mont Rose. Immense panicles of clear-flesh rose, entirely distinct, one of the best very early flowering varieties.

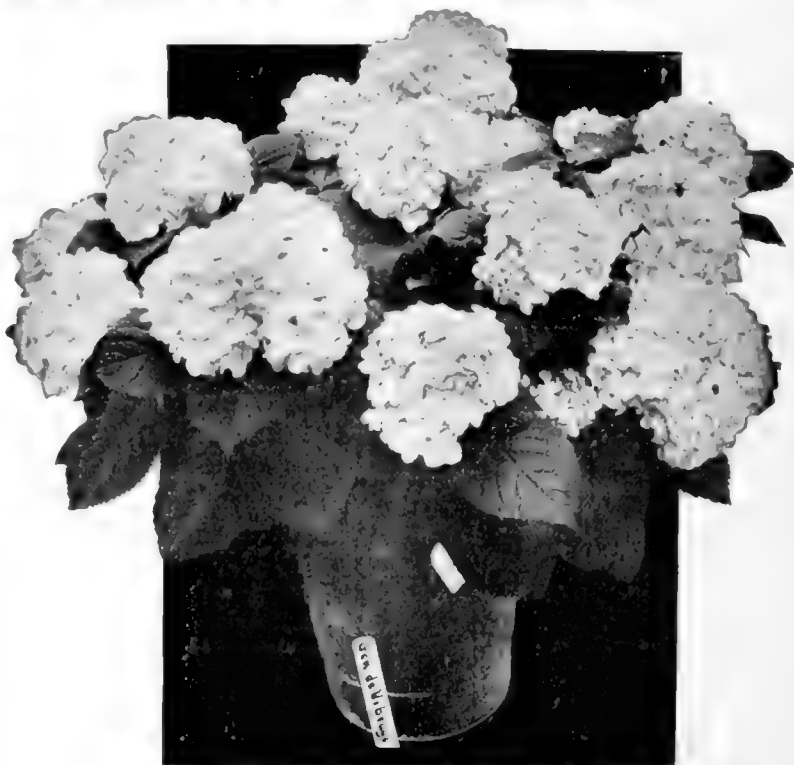

Ronsard. Flowers and trusses very large, of a beautiful rose-tint.

Souvenir de Mme. E. Chautard. One of the very best, of splendid erect habit, very robust, medium sized heads, of bright rose colored flowers; one of the very best of the Bouquet Rose type.

Senateur Henri David. Another splendid rose-colored variety, with red reflections; flowers produced in immense large heads; on the style of La Lorraine, but an earlier bloomer.

Vieux Chateau. Very large pure white, becoming suffused with delicate rosy carmine as they mature.

Hydrangea Otaksa. Dormant plants, 6-inch pots, $25.00 per 100; 10-inch tubs, $1.00 each; 12-inch tubs, $2.50 each.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Pelargoniums

Plants intended for Easter should have a sunny bench and plenty of room between them. Do not try to force these plants as they will not stand it to any extent. Liquid manure should be applied once a week. Young stock in 2, 3 or 4-inch pots will now be making good progress. Before they get too pot-bound they will want shifts. For a compost they like a good rich soil left rather roughly. Give good drainage and do not forget to fumigate regularly each week but do not fumigate too heavy.

Compost

Much potting and repotting, some benching and bed planting and a deal of hot-bed and frame building and filling is now to be done, for all of which the question of soil is not the least important. Good soil is the foundation on which in starting we rest our hopes for success with plants, ever in doubt afterwards, when failure strikes home as to whether or not the soil used was really good for the purpose. There should be at all seasons, and at this time of the year especially, adequate quantities, properly prepared and ready for immediate use, within handy reach. For the potting of small and tender plants—rooted cuttings in particular—the soil should be of recent bringing in from the open, but should be given time before use to reach a warmth very nearly that maintained in the houses. It should be first moist enough to yield to moderate firming in the pots, not so wet as to noticeably soil the fingers in potting.

Easter Lilies

Although Easter is now near at hand much of the advice extended in previous paragraphs may yet be followed to good purpose. A deal of pushing or retarding may still be practiced with satisfactory results. Lilies, to be right for Easter, should now show well advanced buds, some of these fully developed and beginning to turn white. A short week of continued forcing in from 60 to 65 degrees of heat will bring these to a point when a gradual cooling off will bring the last and very proper step to take. Any lilies more backward, but showing rapidly swelling buds and lengthening stem will need a high temperature and much attention as to regular sprinkling to bring them in line with the rest of the Easter stock. Lilies already showing opening flowers and white buds are ready to go to a cool shady place, where they will carry through in perfect condition until the Easter trade begins.

Orchids

Miltonias always enjoy a place where they can be near the glass as they love plenty of diffused sunlight, so do not apply too heavy a shade for a while yet; give just enough to cloud the glass. The sun becoming stronger will necessitate more attention as regards watering. Each plant should have a daily inspection. Ventilation serves the double purpose of keeping the right temperature and at the same time supplying a circulation of pure air. Temperature is the orchid growers' infallible guide, so when the right temperature has been reached proper ventilation will be in line. Miltonias like to have a light syringing overhead on all bright days. Give light fumigations once a week to keep thrips under control.

Making Hotbeds

Where several hotbeds are to be made it is best to have them as far as possible in an unbroken, continued line or in several long rows. Less of the heat generated by a large bulk of manure will be lost than with isolated beds and the temperature under the long line of sashes will be better equalized. The heat will be less intense, but will last several weeks longer if the manure is quite strawy, or if tree leaves are inter-spread while building up the manure. A layer, nicely evened out and well trodden down, of about 18 inches in height when finished, will be all-sufficient from now on and less will do if the bed is made later. When you have the manure all in, spread from 4 to 5 inches of soil upon it. Place sashes on and leave air on every second sash. They can be left this way until the violent heat has subsided when they will be ready for seed sowing or the setting of plants.

Pansies

Pansies from seed sown in November or December, and pricked out and grown on should by this time be big enough to plant out in frames. A mild hotbed will help to push them along.

Next Week:—Crotons; Dracaenas; Final Preparation for Easter; Propagating Bougainvilleas; Seedling Tuberous Begonias; Propagating Double Pyrethrum.

Prosperity real or imagined

We are pleased to note the busy times which, so early in the season, have set in with the seedhouses. It is a most encouraging augury for an old time hasting season when the seedsmen tell of working until midnight and on Sundays to fill orders as has been the case with at least some of them during the past two weeks. Let us hope that the favoring conditions will extend to the nursery and florist trade as well as the seedsmen, as there is good reason to expect. We saw an advertisement in one of our contemporaries last week, offering for sale a large, well built modern mansion, 18 rooms, 2 bath rooms and 9 acres of ground, described as an "excellent location for a florist!" Evidently the widespread popular idea of great wealth in the florist business is still prevalent.

How to get at the good buyers

HORTICULTURE's annual Spring Trade and Easter Special issue is due to appear next week. We make our usual appeal to the advertising trade for such support as they feel justified in according us on this occasion and we hope the response will be a generous one, for it is the advertiser who makes the business wheels go around in an institution such as this and the bigger the advertising patronage the bigger and better will the paper be. The advantage will not be exclusively ours. HORTICULTURE is widely recognized as a very serviceable publication, counting among its readers the brainiest, most progressive men in the field of floriculture in this country, and the advertiser who realizes this fact in its full significance and uses these pages to reach this most desirable class and interest them in his reasonable business offers will find the small expenditure to have been a very profitable investment.

Business promoters

Next week promises to be a lively one. Two big spring flower shows—one in Boston and one in New York, in progress at the same time, banquets in both places, with several important meetings, etc., not to mention lesser affairs in various other places, together with spring trade papers and Easter preparations generally, will suffice to keep some of us on the jump all right. It is gratifying to learn that the big New York enterprise, which involves a heavy expenditure and no small responsibility, is already well provided for, in advance, and that there is, consequently, no fear of a financial set-back—which is never an impossibility when gate receipts are the main source of revenue. The Boston show, housed and financed by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, presents no cause for solicitude. It is to be regretted that these two affairs should take place at the same time, but this was unavoidable, they tell us. This, however, will not detract from their effect upon the public in bringing to their attention a wealth of floral attractions at this very appropriate time. The influence of the two exhibitions will undoubtedly be a substantial factor in the Easter business in their respective neighborhoods.

Callirhoe

The reason for selecting Callirhoe, the Poppy Mallow, as subject of today's note is the everpresent assertion of the utter impossibility of maintaining a rich floral display in herbaceous gardens during the midsummer months. I am well aware of the difficulties in this direction; in fact I admit that without the mixing in of some annuals we cannot succeed in keeping up the gorgeous spectacle witnessed during May and June. If we, however, in most cases exhaust the list of midsummer flowering perennials before resorting to annuals, that is another question. The usual absence of the poppy mallows in our gardens is evidence of our aptness to overlook. Granted that Callirhoe can hardly be classed as more than a filler, it proves a valuable one, for it remains in bloom from late in June until the beginning of fall. Producing saucer-shaped flowers two inches across in lasting profusion this slightly trailing plant, attaining a height of from 12 to 18 inches, with its finely divided foliage can be easily made an elegant border subject. When partly overrunning big rocks on sloping ground it strikes us as being decidedly beautiful.

Belonging to the order Malvaceæ, poppy mallows are natives of our hemisphere. One of its handsomest species—Callirhoe involucrata, syn. Malva involucrata—distinguished by purplish violet flowers of a bright silky lustre, hails from Texas. Callirhoe lineariloba, the subject of our illustration, on account of its compact habit of growth is in my opinion the best for border and garden planting. The flowers appear in vivid purple and those of the variety alba in pure white.

Poppy mallows can be easily raised from seed sown during February and March. On their permanent place they prefer a light sandy soil, and as their thick roots go down deep the ground should be dug and manured to a depth of not less than two feet. The open sunny exposure is best. According to my experience poppy mallows are extremely useful in maintaining abundance and variety in the floral aspect of borders during our trying hot midsummer seasons. If it is our ambition to make the American garden the richest treasury of beauty and thus help to increase the enjoyment of home-life we must be able to master the material. Success within the modern hardy flower garden is only possible by paying attention to both big and little things. The occasional employment of poppy mallows of course ranks among the latter.

OBITUARY.

Herman Asher.

Herman Asher, a violet grower of Rhinebeck, N. Y., died at his home there, Monday, March 8th. He was an estimable man and held in the highest regard by a host of friends.

James Conlon.

James Conlon, a retired florist and a resident of Brooklyn for fifty years, died at his residence, 62 Dean street, Brooklyn, N. Y., on Monday, March 1, leaving a wife, a son, and five daughters.

William M. Mills.

Wm. M. Mills died in Philadelphia on March 5, aged 68 years. The funeral was held on Monday, March 8, from the home of his brother Mark P. Mills of the W. K. Harris Co., of which concern W. M. Mills was an employee.

S. Swan.

Word has been received of the death of S. Swan at Johnson City, Tenn., on the 27th of February. Mr. Swan was at one time a partner with Johnson & Chronis, Chicago and later was in the employ of J. Mangel, leaving Chicago about five years ago to make his home in the south.

William Roe.

William Roe, florist and civil war veteran, died on February 22, aged 85 years. He was born in Leicestershire, England. He came to this country when 25 years of age and located in Lockport, N. Y., where he resided up to the time of his death, spending forty years of his life in the florist business.

Mary M. Scott.

Mrs. Mary M. Scott, head of the firm of Mary M. Scott & Sons, of St. Louis, Mo., died on Tuesday, March 2, after a short illness of pneumonia, at the age of 79. Mrs. Scott and her son grew Asparagus plumosus for the local trade. She leaves besides her son Robert one daughter. The funeral took place Thursday from her late residence. Interment was in Calvary cemetery. Friends in the trade attended and extended their sympathy in many beautiful floral offerings.

David Monteith.

David Monteith, one of the old-time noted Boston gardeners, died on March 4 at Hyde Park, Vermont. Mr. Monteith, who was a native of the south of Scotland was for many years gardener on the Nickerson estate at Dedham, Mass., and was a conspicuous exhibitor and prize winner at the exhibitions of the Mass. Horticultural Society on stove plants and hot-house grapes being a sharp competitor of David Allan, George McWilliam and other noted grape growers. He retired about twelve years ago and took up farming on a small scale in Vermont. His age was about 70 years.

STREPTOSOLEN JAMESONII

TO BLOOM SOBRALIA MACRANTHA.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

As a reader of your valuable paper each week I would like to ask you about two quite fair-sized plants of Sobralia macrantha which have not produced a bloom in over two years to my knowledge. They are in 14-inch pots, crammed full of roots, making growths from 6 to 8 feet long and look as healthy as could be. If you could suggest anything that would throw them into bloom I would esteem it a great favor.

Yours truly,

SEEKER.

Sobralia macrantha grows best in a temperature of from 56 to 58 degrees at night during winter and with plenty of light and fresh air at all times. If grown too warm and in too much shade it will make plenty of long, strong growths but few if any flowers. Sobralias are coarse feeders and should be potted in a mixture of good turfy loam two parts, osmunda fibre one part, and a little well rotted cow manure. Some coarse sand or finely broken crocks should be added to this to keep the compost open. Fill the pots about one-third with broken potsherds to give ample drainage, for they require a good supply of water at the roots at all times, and after a plant becomes potbound a weekly application of weak liquid manure will be of great benefit to it.

STREPTOSOLEN JAMESONII.

This old favorite greenhouse shrub is well known to the majority of our readers. It is sometimes known as Browallia Jamesonii. Its gracefully drooping branches with their terminal racemes of bright orange flowers are a familiar adornment of most plant conservatories. Grown in standard form as shown in the picture it makes a very attractive subject. The plant shown was grown by W. N. Craig of Brookline, Mass., and we are indebted to R. & J. Farquhar & Co. for the photograph.

Annual Meeting of the Executive Board

The meeting of the Executive Board of the S. A. F. & O. H. was held at the Hotel LaSalle, Chicago, Ill., March 1 and 2, 1915. The following were in attendance throughout the two days' sessions: Patrick Welch, president, Boston, Mass.; John Yerger, secretary, New York, N. Y.; Wm. F. Kasting, treasurer, Buffalo, N. Y.; Ex-President Theodore Wirth, of Minneapolis, and the following named directors, Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass.; August Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.; J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb.; J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, O.; Wm. R. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass.; R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex.; also the following members under affiliation: Samuel J. Goddard, president American Carnation Society; Irwin C. Bertermann, president Florists' Telegraph Delivery; George Burton, president Florists' Club of Philadelphia; H. H. Bartsch, president Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston.

The Board, besides the usual routine matters coming up at the annual meeting, had before it arrangements for the Thirty-first Annual Meeting of the S. A. F. & O. H. to be held in San Francisco on August 17, 18 and 19, 1915, and also the Fourth National Flower Show which is to be held in Philadelphia, March 25 to April 2, 1916. The National Flower Show committee held its own session, but certain important matters considered by it were referred to the general Board of the S. A. F. for approval.

The reception by the Chicago florists of the S. A. F. Executive Board, the National Flower Show Committee and the Board of Directors of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery was most hospitable and elaborate. Notwithstanding the courtesies tendered by the Chicago florists, the Board transacted a great amount of detail business, its sessions were harmonious, and the results of its deliberations cannot fail to be beneficially felt throughout the coming year.

Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco, Calif., Wallace R. Pierson, president American Rose Society, and Harry A. Bunyard, president New York Florists' Club, were unavoidably absent, to the regret of all.

Mr. MacRorie telegraphed and also wrote the Board explaining his absence and stating that he expected to attend the Flower Show in New York on the 17th inst. He advised that Superintendent John McLaren, San Francisco, is now preparing ground for a fine convention garden. Mr. MacRorie's correspondence indicates that he is vigorously at work and that the San Francisco meeting will be up to the usual standard of the S. A. F. and probably have some additional peculiarly California features that will render it most attractive.

Charles W. Johnson, secretary Chrysanthemum Society of America, called the attention of the Board to the annual meeting and exhibition of the C. S. A. to be held at Cleveland, Ohio, November 10-14, 1915; also exhibit under auspices of the C. S. A. in conjunction with the gardeners and florists of the Pacific Coast to be held next fall at the Panama Pacific International Exposition, San Francisco, on dates not yet determined and asking for co-operation from the S. A. F. Mr. Johnson predicts that the exhibitions will be a big success.

The communications were referred to the National Flower Show Committee, the S. A. F. Board, however, authorizing the National Flower Show Committee to offer a certain number of medals.

A communication was received from the Pathologist, Prof. H. H. Whetzel, which was referred to the program committee. The report of Treasurer Kasting showed the finances in good condition and an increased reserved fund on hand.

On motion of Mr. Kasting a committee of three, consisting of John Young, New York, J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb., Robert C. Kerr, Houston, Tex., was appointed on trade exhibition to be held in conjunction with the San Francisco meeting, to report as to rates for space, etc. This committee recommended the adoption of the same rules that prevailed at the exhibition at the convention in Boston and that the same 40c. per square foot be charged for space, which on motion of Mr. Goddard was concurred in.

A motion was adopted to dispense with the reading of essays at the San Francisco meeting but to invite a limited number of prominent people to prepare such essays, the same to be furnished in advance of the meeting in time for publication in the various trade papers. On motion of Ex-President Wirth a committee of five on program was appointed, consisting of John Young, chairman, New York; Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; August Poehlmann, Chicago; Wm. R. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass., and George Burton, Philadelphia, Pa.

At Monday afternoon's session the correspondence of Mr. MacRorie was received and on motion of Mr. Bertermann it was referred to the proper committee, with thanks to Mr. MacRorie. Some members of the Board present stated that they had good reason to know and they believed that hotel rates in San Francisco would not be excessive or above the ordinary schedule prevailing at other times than during the Exposition. On motion of Mr. Nicholson the Chair appointed the following committee on publicity: George Burton, president Florists' Club of Philadelphia, chairman; Irwin Bertermann, president Florists' Telegraph Delivery, Indianapolis, and Wm. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

A resolution was presented from the National Flower Show Committee, the details of which cannot be made public at this time but which will have an important bearing upon the success of the National Flower Show which Past President George Asmus in presenting the report of the National Flower Show Committee, predicted would be far ahead of any previous National show. The chairman of the National Flower Show Committee, George Asmus, presented for the consideration of the Board his plans in general. These received the hearty approval and unanimous endorsement of the Board, and Mr. Asmus was highly complimented upon his successful attention to all details looking to the most efficient management of the National Flower Show.

Messrs. Wirth and Hess were appointed auditing committee to pass upon the reports of the secretary and treasurer, and they reported that the accounts were correct and in first-class shape, also making some detailed recommendations, which were adopted. The usual routine appropriations came up for action and after thorough discussion were duly acted on and suitable appropriations made.

R. C. Kerr reported quite at length in regard to the energetic work he has been doing in Texas in the shape of organizing. In the course of this report he referred to the possibility of the organization of sectional associations. This brought out a spirited discussion in which a number of the members participated, and the result of the discussion was that Mr. Kerr expressed himself as thoroughly in accord with the recent broad movement toward nationalism and the dominance of the parent Society, the same not to interfere with complete autonomy on the part of state or other florists' associations, all of which are invited to come into the fold under the affiliation plan, which at the close of the discussion Mr. Kerr acknowledged the paramount advantages of and expressed himself as having gained much from the discussion and as prepared to go back home and push organization harder than ever.

A lengthy talk over the various proposed routes to San Francisco was had, Guy French, Secretary Chicago Florists' Club, appearing before the Board and explaining the careful work that the Chicago local association had done with a view of arranging for Chicago to be the nucleus or meeting point where all eastern florists could converge and from there either go as they please or join in the general arrangements. After full discussion the Board endorsed the route selected by the Chicago Club as probably the best that can be had, although this of course will not prevent individuals from making their own arrangements. On motion, the Chair appointed three representatives in the East as an addition to the Chicago Clubs' Committee on Transportation and who will furnish eastern members all information in their power regarding the trip, viz.: H. H. Bartsch, President Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston; George Burton, President Florists' Club of Philadelphia, and Harry A. Bunyard, President New York Florists' Club.

At the Tuesday morning session of the Board several representatives of subsidiary societies announced that it was not their intention to hold special meetings of their societies at San Francisco, further than to participate in the general meeting of the S. A. F. In response to a telegram sent Daniel MacRorie by a special committee, Mr. Wirth and Mr. Young, the latter announced that a reply had been received from Mr. MacRorie that the Local Committee on Convention Garden will undertake to carry out the same on the same basis as it was carried out in Minneapolis. At the suggestion of Mr. Roland, Theodore Wirth was appointed by the Chair as a representative of the Board of the S. A. F. to act in conjunction with the Local Committee on Convention Garden at San Francisco.

On motion of Secretary Young it was ordered that the awards to be given for the Exhibits in the Convention Garden be in the form of medals or certificates, and that no cash prizes be awarded. Judges of the Convention Garden and Trade Exhibition, the Chair announced will be appointed later as soon as it is ascertained what members of the S. A. F. will positively attend at San Francisco. J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, offered a suggestion as to the possibility of having an exhibition where new plants could be exhibited and judged once every month, which he thought would be a great benefit not only to the grower but also to purchasers of new plants. Mr. Peterson stated that he personally knew of plants sent out under three or four different names when they were all practically the same plant. This suggestion was quite generally discussed by the Board, and a special committee, Messrs. Wirth, Kasting and Roland were appointed to take this matter under consideration.

Mr. Peterson also brought up a matter regarding which he has had considerable correspondence with various members of the S. A. F. & O. H. as to the provisions in the classifications of the express companies regarding growing plants not in pots or tubs, placed in boxes and the sides and ends of which are as high or higher than the plant, and slats nailed on the top completely protecting the plant, which are rated as second class by the express companies, while growing plants in pots or tubs, plants in receptacles crated, are rated first class. He believed that plants in pots carefully packed should be carried as second-class matter, giving reasons for same. After considerable discussion this matter was referred to the Tariff and Legislative Committee.

Wm. F. Gude, who was present at this session, having arrived one day late through a misunderstanding as to the date of the meeting, reported certain correspondence that he had had on the above matter with the Interstate Commerce Commission, advising that they had it under investigation. Wm. F. Kasting thought it might be a good idea to appoint a committee to take measures to obtain a new rating from the insurance companies on greenhouses of modern construction. It was the general consensus of opinion that the former rates were now too high, the same having been established at a time when greenhouses were a much more hazardous risk than under the present improved construction of concrete, etc. No action was taken on this suggestion at this time.

Mr. Wirth moved that there be a permanent Standing Committee on Convention Garden similar in point of numbers and in tenure of office to the National Flower Show Committee. The discussion on this motion brought out the general approval in which the whole subject of the Convention Garden is held and its possibilities as a general advertising feature as well as the public benefits to be derived. The motion was seconded by Mr. Roland and unanimously carried.

At the final session of the Board, Tuesday afternoon, Ex-President Wirth brought up a subject very dear to his heart, by asking for an expression of opinion from these present in regard to the suggestion that Mr. Wirth made in his President's Address at Boston, namely, his belief that the name of the S. A. F. & O. H. should be changed so as to refer to horticulture only. Great deference was paid to Mr. Wirth's feeling in this matter, but the result of an extended discussion was confirmation of the fact that the majority's sentiment was strongly opposed to any change of name. Mr. Gude bringing out very forcibly that such a change would not only be repugnant to the traditions of the society and the sentiment of the membership at large, but would require the taking out of a new charter which might even endanger the national character of the charter, the S. A. F. & O. H. being the only society of its kind which had been favored with a charter from the National Government adopted by act of Congress only after years of effort by the late lamented Wm. R. Smith.

Mr. Wirth, although fondly cherishing his desire for stronger reference in the society's name to horticulture pure and simple, stated that he would bow to the will of the majority in the matter until he could present stronger arguments for a change.

On motion of Secretary Young an adjourned meeting of the Board was authorized to be held at the time of the Flower Show in New York.

The Committee on Final resolutions, Irwin Bertermann, chairman, reported resolutions of thanks to the Local Committee of the Chicago Florists' Club for courtesies and hospitality; also a vote of thanks to the National Flower Show Committee for their presence and work, and to the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Executive Committee for their attendance; all of which was unanimously adopted by rising vote.

The Board adjourned feeling that the meeting had been a most satisfactory one from all standpoints and that good work had been accomplished.

JOHN YOUNG, Secretary.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW COMMITTEE.

The meeting of the National Flower Show Committee was held at the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, Illinois, at 2 o'clock, P. M., March 1, 1915, Chairman George Asmus presiding. All members of the committee were present with the exception of Messrs. Charles H. Totty and W. N. Rudd.

The discussion at this session was entirely devoted to a consideration of the adaptability of the building to be selected for the Fourth National Flower Show which is to take place in Philadelphia, March 25th to April 2nd, inclusive, 1916. As a result of the work of this session instructions were issued to the Lease and Contracts Committee, Messrs. Farenwald, Kasting and Craig, who have been doing energetic work and who reported that preliminary arrangements with reference to the lease of the building had been considered and are being pushed with all possible dispatch.

The second session of this committee was held at 1.30 P. M. on Tuesday, March 2nd, 1915, at the same place. A matter of special importance that was considered at this session was the rates for space at the Trade Exhibition to be held in connection with the National Flower Show. After a full discussion it was finally determined that inasmuch as the exhibition will be held on one floor a uniform price of one dollar per square foot would be charged, first come first served. It is believed that this price will be satisfactory to all concerned, and Mr. Young reports that he has received a gratifying number of applications for space with every prospect of plenty more coming, and as no favors will be shown, it is up to exhibitors to get their applications in early. The question of admission of artificial flowers, etc., on equal terms with natural flowers was debated from all viewpoints and it was the consensus of opinion that while no discrimination would be made and artificial flowers would be admitted on equal terms, it was suggested that a better display would be promoted by segregating the artificial flowers from the natural flowers in a special department of their own.

On motion of Mr. Kasting, the chairman and secretary were authorized and instructed to raise a guarantee fund for the National Flower Show in the amount of $10,000 and that in the call to be sent out the purposes for which the guarantee fund is to be raised shall be fully specified, and that all florists throughout the country be invited to participate in subscriptions to this guarantee fund. It was also agreed that all funds in connection with the National Flower Show shall be turned over to and handled by the treasurer of the S. A. F. and O. H.

The announcement was made by the American Carnation Society that they will bring their jubilee meeting to Philadelphia, in consideration of which on motion of W. P. Craig it was ordered that the former action taken by the National Flower Show in reference to the American Carnation Society's exhibit and awards on condition that they would hold their regular annual meeting in conjunction with the National Flower Show in Philadelphia, in March, 1916, be reconsidered and that the same same day, but to that society as well. It was decided to allot to them a few minutes, and that the allotment of the same was left to the officers of the American Carnation Society. A collection of the awards made to be sent to the National Flower Show Committee. All collections in this behalf are to be turned over to the treasurer of the S. A. F. and O. H. and all disbursements to be made by the same officer. It was believed that this plan would avoid some confusion which has heretofore arisen in handling these matters as between the two associations.

Mr. Farenwald suggested that it would be a great mistake to interfere with the rules of the separate subsidiary societies. The rules of the American Carnation Society were accepted as governing the exhibits by its members at the National Flower Show, with the exception of rule three, which reads: "Only members of the American Carnation Society are eligible to compete for prizes, medals or certificates." Secretary Young voiced the sentiment of the committee that the endorsement and co-operation of the retailers generally throughout the country was realized as being of the greatest assistance, and the National Flower Show Committee pledged itself to do everything possible to look after their interests.

At the request of Chairman Asmus, Secretary Young read the typewritten instructions formulated by Chairman Asmus covering in detail the work of the respective sub-committees of the National Flower Show Committee. The full details covered in these programs of work for the committees evidenced the great foresight and thorough manner in which these instructions had been worked out by Mr. Asmus, and they were the subject of general commendation and approval. Charles H. Fox, Chairman of the Committee on Publicity, addressed the committee, outlined what he expects to do, and expressed the greatest enthusiasm and confidence in the work that will be done by his committee proving most effective. Chairman Asmus invites suggestions from all quarters that may conduce to the furtherance of the Show.

Instructions to the several sub-committees were endorsed by formal motion and the chairman directed to send them out. The chairman of the Special Program Committee, W. P. Craig, made a report showing the progress to date, and giving a large list of firms who have already contributed special prizes. Mr. Craig reported that the business men of Philadelphia are generally enthusiastic over the show and anxious to co-operate. A resolution was unanimously adopted instructing the secretary to write Messrs. W. N. Rudd and Chas. H. Totty the regrets of the committee at their inability to be present through illness and then to convey to them the best wishes of the committee and the hope that they would soon be completely recovered.

JOHN YOUNG, Secretary

Luncheon.

The Chicago florists were most assiduous in their attention to an entertainment of the members and guests of the Board Executive of the S. A. F. & O. H., the Executive Board of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery and the National Flower Show Committee. Besides various luncheons and a smoker, an elaborate luncheon, which might more properly have been termed a banquet, was tendered by the Chicago Florists' Committee at the Hotel LaSalle, at 1 P. M., Wednesday, March 3, 1915. The Committee for the Chicago Florists' Club having this special function in charge were Messrs. Ernst Weinhoeber, George Asmus and August Pochlmann.

After a most appetizing spread, George Asmus, as toast-master, called upon the following gentlemen, all of whom made remarks that were out of the ordinary after-dinner speeches, inasmuch as they abounded in suggestions of a business character that were most timely and interesting, these speakers being Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit, Mich.; A. Pochlmann, secretary F. T. D., Detroit, Mich.; George E. M. Stumpp, director F. T. D., New York; E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; J. C. Vaughan, Chicago, Ill.; Patrick Welch, president S. A. F. & O. H., Boston, Mass.; August Pochlmann, director S. A. F. & O. H., Chicago, Ill.; John Young secretary S. A. F. and O. H., New York; Wm. Kroeschell, Chicago, Ill.; Wm. F. Kasting, treasurer S. A. F. & O. H., Buffalo, N. Y.; George Sykes, Lord & Burnham Co., Chicago, Ill.; Wm. F. Gude, Washington representative S. A. F. & O. H., Washington, D. C.; Charles H. Fox, chairman Publicity Committee, National Flower Show, Philadelphia, Pa.; L. D. McNeff, McNeff-Swenson Co., Chicago, Ill.; Thos. Roland, director S. A. F. & O. H., Nahant, Mass.; W. W. Barnard, seedsman, Chicago, Ill.; Theodore Wirth, ex-president S. A. F. & O. H., Minneapolis, Minn.; Ernst Weinhoeber, director F. T. D., Chicago, Ill.; J. J. Hess, director S. A. F. and O. H., Omaha, Neb.; H. H. Bartsch, president Gardeners' and Florists' Club, Boston, Mass.; George Burton, president Florists' Club, Philadelphia, Pa.; Irwin Bertermann, president F. T. D., Indianapolis, Ind.; A. Farenwald, Roslyn, Pa.; Alexander Henderson, seedsman, Chicago, Ill.

The first preliminary schedule of the plant classes and premiums for the Fourth National Flower Show, to be held in Philadelphia, March 25 to April 2, 1916, has been issued by Secretary John Young. This includes sections A to N inclusive. The schedule is issued thus early to give plant growers full time in which to prepare their exhibition stock. All who are interested should send to John Young, 53 West 28th street, New York for a copy at once.

The publicity work for the New York Spring Show seems to be in very enterprising hands. The city and the countryside away out in Jersey and Long Island are liberally placarded with flower show posters and all the metropolitan dailies are giving more than customary space to the promised event. A little disposition to fall back on the sensational, regardless of truth, should be promptly vetoed by the Horticultural Society of New York and the New York Florists' Club, whose members have no desire to be held responsible for wierd fables about uncanny floral freaks.

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

The meeting of this club on Monday evening, March 8, was in some respects a record breaker. The hall was crowded almost to the limit, and some of the proceedings approached the spectacular. From the spirited joviality which prevailed one would never dream that there was anything the matter with business or that the members knew what it was to be burdened with a care. From the president down to the youngest recruit it was "snap and go" from start to finish. The commissary department, under the management of Phil Kessler and a retinue of busy assistants, contributed its full share to the general congeniality, and at the close each member carried away a stein, presented with the compliments of the house committee.

The principal attraction of the evening was a stereopticon lecture by J. Ross Lynch on the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Beautifully colored views in great numbers were thrown upon the screen depicting the buildings and other features of the great fair, as well as views of the canal itself and the picturesque scenery on the various transcontinental routes from the East to San Francisco.

The Spring Flower Show, now close at hand, came in for considerable discussion in the final details of preparation, all of which seem to be well in hand, and the various committees working harmoniously and enthusiastically to that end. F. R. Pierson as chairman of the general committee, reported that the sales of space in the trade section amounted to $8300 up to date, and advertising in the souvenir program $1700. A total of over $2000 had been contributed in special premiums and $1200 worth of trade tickets had already been sold. M. W. Colwell, who has charge of the publicity work, made an address on this subject which was very clever and witty, and made an excellent impression. The "booth" committee was granted an appropriation of $200 for the completion of their plans.

The exhibition tables were but sparsely furnished. It has been announced that this was to be "rose night" and rose growers were invited to show their specialties, but not a solitary rose was there. Van Waveren & Son were represented by vases of tulips De Wet, Flamingo and McKinley, and Poetaz Narcissus Mignon; Max Schling showed a fine cocos, Frank Linda sent a vase of his new white carnation Peace, and there was a vase of beautiful mixed Spencer sweet peas from A. C. Zvolanek. The absence of the roses furnished Max Schling the opportunity for an inimitable burlesque report on the beauties of the imaginary exhibits, which was simply a scream from beginning to end in its droll comicality, and all the funnier because of the seriousness with which it was taken by certain members. The next meeting will be "sweet pea and orchid night."

Various committees reported progress. The "outing" will take place at Witzel's Point View Grove on July 14. Everything is ready for the annual dinner, Saturday evening, March 20. Five new members were nominated.

PITTSBURGH FLORISTS' AND GARDENERS' CLUB.

The regular meeting of this Club was held on March 2d. Carl Becherer, gardener at Dixmont Hospital, showed cyclamen in different colors and forms. All the cyclamen he showed were either unusually floriferous, or novel in the shape and size of their blooms. He also showed tulips, hyacinths and some good carnation seedlings. He was awarded a cultural certificate for cyclamen. T. Tyler, gardener for C. D. Armstrong, showed seedling cypripediums, Dendrobium nobile virginale, and Odontioda Bradshawae. He was awarded a cultural certificate for the cypripediums. The Bureau of Parks, per Jno. W. Jones, foreman, showed hyacinths La Victoire and Correggio, a white with very large bells, Prince of Austria, his favorite single tulip; daffodils, and Matador, a dark red, very fine cineraria.

An interesting discussion took place between Mr. Jones and Mr. Becherer, Mr. Jones claiming that tobacco stems in a greenhouse, especially when wet, were of no value as an insecticide, and Mr. Becherer saying he would not attempt to run a greenhouse without them. A talk was given on the "Cities of Germany," illustrated by colored lantern slides, by Dr. Emil Krapf, who gave the interesting talk on "Radio Active Earth," at the February meeting. Mr. Jones showed two plants of salvia; one grown in Radio-Active earth, the other not. They were passed around among the members that the difference might be noted, which was in favor of the one grown in the earth treated with the Radio-Active fertilizer.

At the April meeting it is expected that some of the professors from Pitt University will talk on some late discoveries in chemistry as applicable to plant growing.

HOLYOKE AND NORTHAMPTON FLORISTS' AND GARDENERS' CLUB.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club was held on Tuesday evening, March 9th, in the new G. H. Sinclair greenhouse at Smith's Ferry, Mass., and was largely attended, about forty being present. Mr. Sefton, president of the Hittings Greenhouse Construction Co., gave a most interesting and instructive talk upon the construction of greenhouses and the mathematical calculations required in the roofs of large greenhouses to make them rigid and safe through any kind of snow or wind storms. His talk was closely followed by all the members present and many questions were asked at the close.

Mr. Sinclair's new greenhouse is 400 ft. long by 60 ft. and although only finished in late October last, is now in fine condition. Carnations occupy half the house and the other half is devoted to sweet peas, gladioli, antirrhinums, forget-me-nots, and young carnations and chrysanthemum stock. His sweet peas are a sight worth seeing.

H. Downer of Smith College exhibited English wallflowers with a pure white one among them. He also exhibited nemesias in 4-inch pots which attracted much attention. D. Gallivan exhibited some well-grown and flowered ericas, F. D. Keyes & Son callas.

FLORISTS' CLUB OF WASHINGTON

All of the officers of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., were re-elected at the annual meeting as follows: George H. Cooke, president; R. L. Jenkins, vice-president; C. L. Linz, secretary; William F. Gude, treasurer; George Field, Adolph Gude, Theodore Diedrich, George H. Cooke, David Bisset and William H. Ernest, executive committee.

Otto Bauer, manager of the local branch of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Company, exhibited, on behalf of J. J. Perry, manager of the Baltimore branch, a handsome collection of the carnation Mrs. Siegwart, a very large flower which closely resembles Pink Delight as to color and foliage.

A committee was appointed with Adolph Gude as chairman to make plans for a banquet to be given shortly after Easter.

While refreshments were being served, Sidney B. Lust, manager of the United Film Service Company, presented a very interesting exhibition of motion pictures. That which attracted the attention of the members the most was a film showing the growth of a sweet pea and other flowers from the time of the planting of the seed in the ground until the appearance of the flower ready for cutting.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The American Rose Society's annual meeting will be held in Massachusetts Horticultural Hall in Boston next week. The exhibition of roses will be fine from what we are now advised. It is hoped that members of the Rose Society will take particular interest in this exhibition. It is expected that the governor of the state and mayor of the city of Boston will visit the exhibition. There are several things to be brought up at the annual business meeting which will be of much interest to rose growers. The annual business meeting will be called at three o'clock in the afternoon of March 18th. The election of officers, selection of next place of meeting, rose test gardens, grading roses for market, affiliation of local societies, etc., will be in order.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Sec'y.

The Schedule Committee of the American Rose Society wishes to announce that since the prize-list was issued there have been received two additional prizes, namely a cut glass piece valued $25 presented by the Boston Co-Operative Flower Market, said prize to be offered for fifty Mrs. Taft first premium, (second premium will be $10 offered by the American Rose Society); also $15 from Mrs. W. W. Edgar for the W. W. Edgar Co., this prize to be applied to fifty any other disseminated red variety as a first premium (second premium of $10 is offered by the American Rose Society).

ALBANY FLORIST CLUB.

The Albany Florist Club met Thursday evening, March 4th, at the Albany Cut Flower Exchange. There was an attendance of about 75 members. The feature of the evening was the flower show. Pennock-Meehan Co. displayed some very fine carnations, white lilacs, Spencer sweet peas and orchids. F. R. Pierson Co. exhibited some of the new rose, Francis Scott Key. The Albany Cut Flower Exchange exhibited for A. S. Burns, Jr., of Spring Valley, some very fine Rubrum lilies. A. N. Pierson showed some fine Matchless carnations and lilies. J. Traudt, of Cana-

Friends and Fellow Market Gardeners

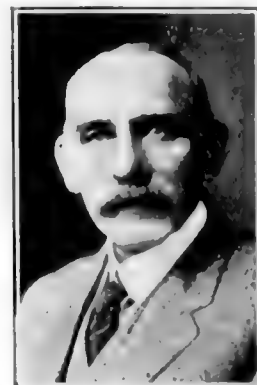

Baltimore County, Maryland
March 2nd, 1915.

I hereby inform my many friends, the Market Gardeners, Canners and the public in general, I have placed my entire supply of "John Baer" Tomato Seed which I personally grew and selected, with J. Bolgiano & Son of Baltimore, Maryland. Any seed offered by any other source is not my production and I cannot feel morally responsible for the results it may produce.

I have given this tomato my greatest care and attention for many years and take pride in seeing that my fellow Market Gardeners are getting only seed that truly represents the results of my lifework.

joharie, showed some very fine azaleas, primroses, etc., as did also H. Hansen, of Catskill. Wm. Hannell, Watervliet, showed Enchantress carnations and Killarney, Sunburst and Hadley roses. F. A. Danker exhibited some very fine plants; Henkes Bros., Watervliet, plants and carnations; R. Velle, carnations.

There was a long talk in regard to the November Flower Show. The committee is hard at work but wish for more time before making a final report.

After the meeting adjourned, refreshments were served and all the members reported a very fine time and think it a good idea for the growers to exhibit specimen plants and cut flowers at each meeting.

The next meeting will be the first Thursday in April, at the Albany Cut Flower Exchange.

SOUTHAMPTON (N. Y.) HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The above Society held its regular meeting on March 4th. There were several interesting discussions on the making of hot-beds, pruning of peaches and best to plant, also hardy Tea and H. T. roses to plant in Southampton.

The next meeting will be held in Odd Fellows' hall, Southampton, on March 18th at 8 P. M., when horticulturists visiting Southampton on that date will be welcomed.

The members here are, one and all, busy now getting ready for the summer show, which looks to be a big success this season.

DURING RECESS.

Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston.

The members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, their wives, sisters, daughters and other lady friends, had a glorious happy evening on Wednesday, March 10, the occasion being the annual banquet and dance. It was held at the New American House this year instead of Horticultural Hall and the innovation proved advantageous in many ways. Nearly three hundred guests were present, fully one-half of this number being ladies.

The banquet hall was handsomely decorated under the supervision of George M. Anderson, southern smilax on the walls, palms about the corners and flowers in rich profusion on the tables. The menu was excellent and well served.

President Herman Bartsch was his own toastmaster and did it up most creditably. The principal speaker was President Patrick Welch of the S. A. F. Mr. Welch said some good things about the national society and the approaching convention at San Francisco and said them so convincingly that quite a few who were present, several ladies included, volunteered to accompany the Boston party to California next August. Other speakers were Secretary W. N. Craig, Treasurer Peter Fisher, Vice-President Methven, S. J. Goddard, Henry Penn and W. J. Kennedy, the last named breaking forth into whirlwind eloquence on behalf of woman suffrage. There was an enjoyable entertainment by Margaret With-er, piano solos; Emil Chevrill, comedy violin imitations; James Singer, baritone solos; Katharine Singer, pianist, and Combie's orchestra. Dancing was indulged in from 10 to 12 midnight.

The next meeting of the Club comes on Tuesday evening, March 16, when Eber Holmes will talk on Indoor Roses.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES

The Students' Club at the Missouri Botanical Garden will hold a meeting on Friday, March 19, at which G. H. Pring will read a paper on "Aquatic Gardening" and N. J. Cella on "Lawns and their Care."

Henry F. Michell Co. have offered a very generous list of prizes to be awarded at the National Flower Show in Philadelphia in the spring of 1916. The list includes four gold medals, twenty-one silver medals, seven bronze medals and fourteen silver cups.

Quite a few St. Louis Florist Club members attended the annual meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association at Urbana, Ill., last week. Among them were J. F. Ammann, W. J. Pilcher, John Stridel, Edwin Denker and Charles Johann.

The Maine State Florists' Association was organized on March 10, at Orono. J. H. Stalford of Bar Harbor was chosen president; Charles F. Strout, Biddeford, vice-president; Alexander Lurie, Orono, secretary, and Ernest Saunders, Lewiston, treasurer.

The St. Louis Co. Plant and Flower Growers' Association held a meeting on March 3, at Eleven Mile House. Quite an interesting program was laid out on which discussions followed. It was voted to assist the St. Louis Florist Club when the Carnation Society holds its meeting in St. Louis. J. F. Ammann made an interesting address.

SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers—President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif.; First Vice-President, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Second Vice-President, F. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa.; Secretary and Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary, S. L. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O.

The value of horticultural imports into New York for the week ending February 27, 1915, is given as follows: Mammoth seed, $2,548; bulbifer, $2,027; clover seed, $500,000; grass seed, $25,100; sugar beet seed $500; trees and plants, $25,410.

One of the most attractive seed store window displays we have seen is that of Peter Henderson & Co., at present. It displays a wealth of kitchen garden products, exact reproductions in form and color of all the leading table vegetables, the central figure being a happy husbandman trundling a wheelbarrow load of the tempting product. We understand that the models are all the work of an employee of the store. The show serves its purpose well for there is constantly a throng of admirers with mouths watering, outside the window.

A RADICAL STEP BY PLANT IMPORTERS.

At the last meeting of the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers the matter of the importation of Belgium and Holland stock was brought up and it was pointed out that owing to the roundabout manner in which the shipments were forwarded and the length of time during which they were in transit the importers realized very little, if any, profit out of their purchases.

It was also pointed out that the exporters are in closer touch with the shipping facilities from their respective countries and have charge of the routing of the shipments and the packing thereof and that it would be no injustice to require them to share some part of the risk connected therewith.

It was, therefore, resolved that the members of this Association shall hereafter purchase Belgium and Holland shipments f. o. b. New York and refuse to place orders upon any other basis. This meeting of the Association had a very large attendance and the membership shows a healthy growth. W. H. SORRELL, JR., Sec'y.

CATALOGUE RECEIVED.

New Bedford, Mass. — Wm. Keith, gardener for Mr. Stetson has some very fine bulb stock in bloom as well as azaleas of both hardy and forcing varieties. One of the azaleas measures over four feet through and at the present writing has over 1000 blooms and buds.

Dr. Hugh, who has a country home at Nantucket, plans to have over 150 varieties of iris on his place this summer. FRANK L. GRAY.

NEWS FROM THE PANAMA PACIFIC EXPOSITION.

A notable feature at the Exposition this week is the blossoming of a large planting of hyacinths in some of the courts. Santa Clara county had its day at the Exposition, March 5, and a large crowd came up from San Jose in automobiles, fairly buried in fruit blossoms. The floral exhibits in the Palace of Horticulture are rapidly taking on their finished form. Unfortunately the Cuban exhibit, which is the central feature under the main dome of the building, was delayed in transit, and had rather a hard trip, but the palms and shrubs are now practically all in place, together with a lot of bulbs, etc., which will come up later. This planting has been arranged for a monthly rotation of blossoms, and the flowers for the first two months will be from native Cuban bulbs. The exhibit includes palms and ferns of many varieties, all the smaller ones being brought from Cuba, while the larger are acclimated specimens from local nurseries. One of the plots is devoted to broad-leaved Cuban plants, and in another are some very fine tree ferns. This exhibit also includes some fine crotons, and several extremely old specimens of microcyclus; and some Cuban giant-leaved plants have just been put in. Under the dome are also scattered a number of beautiful Australian tree ferns. One of the side plots is occupied by an exhibit from E. James, of Oakland, Cal., some notable features of which are the Adiantum gloriosa and Polypodium Mandaianum. A nice lot of cyclamen is also shown here, to be replaced later by primulas. In one of the side rooms off the central dome is a large orchid display by the MacRorie-McLaren Company, showing at present a large collection of cattleyas, in addition to a lot of fine white and pink phalaenopsis and oncidium. In another side room is shown a large collection of New Zealand ferns, together with a wonderful collection of 80 varieties of Hawaiian hibiscus; and a pond of water lilies, not yet blossoming, by Henry A. Dreer, of Philadelphia. A space is also occupied by the Yokohama Nursery company, Yokohama, Japan, with a large collection of ornamental plants and bamboos. Out in the main building of the Palace of Horticulture is a large booth of C. C. Morse & Co., the San Francisco seed house, showing at present an assortment of bulb stock, hyacinths, tulips, lily of the valley, crocus, etc., all blossoming; and at this booth sample packages of California poppy seed are being given away. A booth has also been taken by Sutton & Sons, Reading, England, whose exhibit is due to arrive on the steamer Jason.

At the meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, March 6, final plans will be made for the spring bulbous flower show, to be held shortly in the Palace of Horticulture.

The Southern California Arboricultural Association has postponed its annual meeting, to be held on the San Diego Exposition grounds, to March 11 and 12, on account of the addition of new features to the program.

CLEVELAND PLANS A BIG SHOW.

The Cleveland Florists' Club was in earnest when it invited the Chrysanthemum Society of America to come to the sixth city for their next meeting and show, which will be in November this fall. It is the plan of the Clevelanders to make this show one of the largest ever held in the United States. The Ohio Horticultural Society has joined forces with the Florists' Club and will assist them to make the above statement a reality.

At a joint meeting held last week of the two organizations the following executive committee was elected: S. Prentiss Baldwin, chairman; Frank A. Friedley, sec'y; John Boddy, treas.; Herman A. Knoble, show manager; Mrs. L. Dean Holden; Mrs. A. S. Ingalls; Mrs. John E. Newell.

The work will be divided among eight committees under the direction of the following named chairmen:

Herbert Bate, Premium List; F. C. W. Brown, Decorations; George Bate, Publicity; Timothy Smith, Admission; G. W. Smith, Entertainment; C. E. Russell, Retail Display; H. P. Merrick, Trade Display; Frank A. Friedley, Exhibition.

It is the plan of general chairman Knoble to have each committee completely organized and in good working order in the very near future. The dates selected are November 10 to 14 inclusive. The large Wigmore Coliseum has been leased for the show. Put the dates down on your calendar now.

GEO. BATE.

The Worcester County (Mass.) Horticultural Society held a very fine exhibition on March 4 and 5. A Dutch garden by E. W. Breed and H. F. A. Lange was a prime attraction. Carnations, orchids, cinerarias, primulas and bulbous flowers were included in the exhibits and there were some very good fruit and forced vegetables.

Of Interest to Retail Florists

"FOR BETTER BUSINESS METHODS."

From your article in your issue of February 27, under "For Better Business Methods," I would draw conclusion that the retailers had been asked by the growers and wholesalers to meet with them. If so, I did not know it, but would have been there had I known retailers were expected. For some year or two it has been in my mind how could it be brought about that the grower and retailer might work together for the better good of both. I know there are those among the retailers of Boston and vicinity who would gladly co-operate with the grower and among themselves for improvement and better business methods. In these days antagonism should be eliminated entirely among retailers and producers—the producers and retailers generally are too far apart in their views and ideas, for thoroughly good feelings to exist and when retailer and producer can meet and discuss matters pertaining to the welfare of the florist business in general, we shall have accomplished a wonderful good thing.

I had also hoped for a good retail association of influence for good in the business before this. It would seem that for reasons, in part unexplainable, the one started must die—circumstances and conditions being against it and for one reason more than another, a too hurried formation of the society. Let us hope!

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

H. K. W. Miller's store, 100 North Street, had a very attractive display of fruit this week in which a big basket of sweet peas was featured.

The Gardeners and Florists' Club will hold a club day, March 29, at Waverley, where they will be the guests of the W. W. E. Co. The meeting of the club, March 16, will be a special Rose Night, a timely event preceding the big Rose Show, March 18-21.

Maurice Hambro, buyer for H. M. Robinson & Co., is all with some foot trouble. The salesman in the markets displayed their sympathy by sending him a splendid basket of fruit this last week. It is expected that he will be "on deck" Monday.

F. J. Dolansky's store in Lynn is being renovated and will be completed by next week. A new office has been built and several large mirrors placed on the walls. This store is very advantageously located on one of the busiest streets of the city.

The Swanavelt Flower Shop, of Lynn, is an artistic establishment of the kind that one would hardly expect to find in such a busy manufacturing centre. The firm specializes on baskets and pottery and has acquired a well-merited reputation for table decorations.

The windows of two large department stores, Filene and Jordan-Marsh Co., are superbly decorated with rich fabrics set off with masses of cinerarias, genistas and other brilliant flowering plants. The combinations and contrasts of color are beautifully done. S. Hoffman supplied the floral material.

Frederic Southworth, of Lynn, is producing a special strain of silver pink snapdragon with which he has had much success. Mr. Southworth specializes on snapdragons, and in a recent visit to his range the writer noted several promising seedlings in white, cerise, golden-yellow and dark red.

Ed. Winkler, of Wakefield, is very optimistic about the future of his new carnation, Morning Glow. He plans to disseminate it next year and will specialize on this variety altogether for the next few years. Morning Glow is a seedling from Winona by Queen, a delicate silver pink color, with a tendency to deepen in summer.

Several local retailers are complaining against the system of sales tags now in use in the markets. As it is now, each salesman possesses his own sales book and when a sale is made the retailer signs the slip and receives a duplicate with his goods. Mistakes are liable and retailers claim to have received bills for goods they never bought and never signed for. One prominent retailer already uses his own receipt tags, thus effectively checking up all claims. Each salesman is compelled to produce the slips of this retailer when presenting his bill.

CHICAGO.

N. Miller has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his father, whose death occurred March 8. Mr. Miller is no longer with the A. L. Vaughan Co.

The three south rooms on the first floor of the Le Moyne block will soon be occupied by E. C. Amling Co., who have taken out a long term lease, North Wabash Ave. is thus gaining two of the large wholesale houses.

Miss Charlotte Megchelsen, 4654 Grand Boul., finds the call for baskets greater each year. A very large proportion of orders now are for flowers to be put into some of the new baskets, and she finds the profits just as large for herself and customers better pleased than with flowers alone.

A call at the Flower Growers' Association, Tuesday, impressed one with the idea that that firm had added the sale of silverware to its business, but it proved to be the trophies belonging to the Chicago Florists' Club. Manager Paul Klingsporn, who likes to see things right, has had it put in first class condition and it is now an honor to the club.

At the Muir Conservatories, 4647 Grand Boul., trade is reported as very encouraging. Miss Muir has been in business long enough to have a broad outlook, and she says the dull times for florists are past and a good business awaits those who make the effort to get it. This store is one of the large south side places and most attractive in its arrangement.

The "loop" retail florists are all giving extra attention to their window displays. With the coming of the spring openings at the big department stores, the tastefully arranged windows in the flower stores make a good advertisement and appeal strongly to the throngs of passers by. A good trade is reported generally by the downtown florists with potted bulbous stock as leaders.

A Model of Decorative Art.

Again the world's largest store has its spring opening after six months of preparation. A. V. Fraser, who for twenty years has spoken daily to thousands of people, through his artistic expressions in flowers and fabrics in the Marshall Field windows, says that decorative art is like religion and the results we get are the expressions of the creeds we hold. He studies constantly and says that parks, landscapes and gardens are his best teachers. Two years ago he visited the Kew gardens in England and his descriptions of the color effects seen there in the rhododendrons and other plants make one seem to feel as well as to see the exquisite blending of colors. The decorations this year reflect impressions of a recent southern trip. Great gray urns high above your head are filled with drooping branches of southern dogwood bearing thousands of the big white blooms, red tipped as they grow in Virginia. The long main aisle is crossed with high arches, massed with roses, and you walk as under a bower of rare loveliness. The effect of such scenes on the passing multitudes cannot be estimated, and to one who has the inclination to study, here is a great opportunity. Mr. Fraser is not a florist, but he is a floral artist.

Good Fellowship.

The social events reported as under way one week ago, in honor of the presence in Chicago of the directors of the Society of American Florists, the Florists' Telegraph Delivery and the National Flower Show Committee, were successfully carried out and the spirit of good fellowship received a new impetus. The closing was in the form of a luncheon at the La Salle Hotel, and the hearty expressions of good will brought encouragement to the workers all along the three lines represented, and the departing guests left with the feeling, shared also by their entertainers, that it was something to look back upon with pleasure and profit.

State Florists' Organization.

The Chicago delegation to the Illinois State Florists' Association which held its tenth annual meeting, March 2 and 3, at Urbana, Ill., came home with glowing accounts of that meeting. Their reception in the state university town was cordial and they were well taken care of. Phil. Foley accompanied them and the inspection of the greenhouses recently erected by his company was one of the features of the meeting. The University of Illinois is one of the leaders in maintaining a department where floriculture and landscape engineering are studied in a way befitting their importance, with encouraging results showing great progress. In the years to come—and not distant ones either—this institution is expected to turn out men whose equipment will place them in the lead in horticultural matters in this country. Once each year, hereafter, will a meeting be held here that closer touch may be kept with the works in original research in the experiment station. The officers for the coming year are as follows: President, C. W. Johnson, Morgan Park, Ill.; 1st vice-president, I. L. Pillsbury, Galesburg, Ill.; secretary, J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.; treasurer, F. L. Washburn, Bloomington, Ill.

PHILADELPHIA.

The session of the Farmers' Institute held at Horticultural Hall, March 5 and 6, were rather slimly attended but otherwise were very successful.

Thomas P. Smith, late of Boston, entered on his duties March 1st as superintendent of gardens and grounds at the Pennsylvania Hospital (Kirkbrides) 44th and Market Streets.

Chas. Sim of Rosemont, and party left Santa Barbara headed east on the 29th ult. A visit to Edwin Lansdale at Burpee's Floradale Farms at Lompoc was one of the pleasant episodes of the Santa Barbara part of the trip. Mr. Sim speaks very enthusiastically of the San Francisco Fair.

TWO TABLE DECORATIONS OF SIMPLE DESIGN.

Centerpiece of sweet peas and Barberton daisies (Gerbera Jamesonii).

Basket decoration. Baskets filled with sweet peas, pansies and Adiantum Farleyense.

The two illustrations herewith tell their own story. They are examples of extreme simplicity in detail and good taste in color combination, by Max Schling of New York. The Gerberas, in their various shades of scarlet, vermilion and orange are worthy of a larger use by the decorating florist. They keep well and, if intelligently used, always please.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Clarence Shaffer, the young son of George C. Shaffer, of Fourteenth and Eye streets, Northwest, is reported to be quite ill with scarlet fever.

A number of the Washington ladies made a sisterly visit to their friends in Baltimore last week, spending the day in bowling and attending a local theatre.

W. W. Kimmel took the part of a hero on Saturday last when he twice entered a burning building, first to rescue a woman whom he had previously warned of the impending danger but who after leaving the building re-entered it in order to save some valuables, and later to rescue the rescued woman's pet canary.

George W. Hess, superintendent of the Botanic Gardens, is complaining of acts of vandalism committed by visitors. Of his own accord, Mr. Hess recently announced that the gardens would be open to the general public on Sundays, something that has not heretofore been done, but on each of the four Sundays following this announcement some of the rare and valuable plants have been mutilated.

Declaring that the various railroads doing business in the District of Columbia have omitted to publish and put into effect just and reasonable commodity rates applicable to Washington, D. C., which omission has caused unjust and unreasonable freight charges, several of the florists have joined with merchants in other lines in petitioning the Interstate Commerce Commission to cause the establishment of such specific commodity rates as the commission may deem just and reasonable. It is also asked that reparation be made for the unlawful charges described.

The retail florists of Washington are about to form an organization of their own independent of the local club and to endeavor to advise ways and means for combating a large number of trade evils which they are at present forced to face. Their particular grievance at this time, although they have been complaining for a long time, is that the street vendors can offer a good quality of flowers at prices cheaper than the legitimate florists can buy them. It is stated that this is causing them to use a large amount of business and that it does not help the grower when the crop is sold at less than the cost of production. The practice of wholesalers, growers and exchanges of furnishing such men with stock is severely condemned.

Many of the prominent citizens of Secaucus, N. J., are trying to induce Fred Meerbott, the well known florist, to be a candidate for school trustee at the coming election.

PITTSBURGH.

The A. W. Smith Company are today observing the last of their twin "Spring Flower Days," when they give special attractions for their much advertised "Dollar Box." So far the Smiths are the only florists included in the "Savings Checks" merchants. This "Savings Check System" is an ingenious plan inaugurated in Pittsburgh last month, which is to be extended to other cities as rapidly as possible. Through it the customer becomes a savings bank depositor at the expense of the merchant, the banks chosen paying a small amount for new accounts, thus opened. The checks are given by the firm (only one of a kind in each district) for cash purchases or for prompt payment of accounts.

De Forest W. Ludwig of the E. C. Ludwig Company, left on Saturday night for an extended trip to California. Mr. Ludwig will scarcely remain for the Convention of the Society of American Florists in August, expecting to return east early in July. Fred Burki of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Company, who, accompanied by his family, left a few days before with the Convention as his objective point, will remain indefinitely. Another visitor at the Convention will be B. L. Elliott of the John Bader Company, who, Mrs. Elliott and Miss Elliott, will take a two months' trip to the coast. Another less fortunate individual—a retailer—when interrogated as to a Panama-Pacific trip, answered frankly, but cheerfully, "No, we are having all we can do to pay our taxes." And so it goes.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Business continues depressed, except for one or two flashes caused by large funeral orders received by individual retailers. There is a moderate supply of all kinds of stock. Prices in general have not declined very much, but the demand is weak, thus making the movement of flowers extremely slow. Roses are plentiful and are mostly of good quality. The only item in fairly active demand is yellow stock of roses. This holds true also for tulips, jonquils, daisies, etc. The demand for carnations is about the same as last week, showing a tendency to weaken. A few fancies are going at $4.00 per 100. Orchids are still moving quietly and the demand for gardenias is light. Violets continue to overcrowd and are finding a poor outlet through the street boys. Potted plants of tulips and jonquils are really the only active items. Boston was entirely over-looked by the snow blizzard which caught so many other places last Saturday, and sunny spring weather has prevailed.

Considering the Lenten BUFFALO days the flower market is up to all expectations. Of course there are dull days and very dull at times, as well as good ones. When there is a good sprinkling of floral work, we call them good days as a surplus is moved for which there is no other outlet at the present. Stock that cannot be used for floral works sees its name on some sign as a bargain sale. Daffodils, tulips and violets are amongst the latter. Roses are about equal to the demand. Carnations are in good supply and the best quality has found good sales. Peas are good, also plentiful. Lily of the valley is very quiet. Lilies sell satisfactory. There was too much freesia for a while and the price was down, also too much other bulbous stock.

Stock is cleaning up fairly well. During the busier part of the week everything was disposed of. Flowers are beginning to come in in large quantities, the change being noticed particularly in roses, much to the pleasure of the wholesalers, but there is not enough to warrant any decrease in price. Some American Beauties of fine quality are at last seen and as the amount is very limited they are quickly bought up. Carnations are more plentiful. Bulbous stock still comes on in quantity. Prices have been steadily going down, but now are steady at a fair profit to the grower. Violets continue to bring a discouraging price and many are not sold at all. Lily of the valley is in fair supply. Orchids are bringing a better price.

The market is in a pretty good condition with supplies sufficient while the call is generally steady and prices fair. Roses are coming along nicely. The American Beauty cut is larger, also the carnation cut and prices have dropped. Lilies are plentiful, also and all other bulbous stock. The first outdoor jonquils and daffodils from the south have made their appearance. Sweet peas are having a pretty fair market. Lily of the valley has only an ordinary call. The orchids offered are excellent. Antirrhinums sell fairly well.

The retail trade generally complain of light demand and this lamentation is reflected and vigorously re-echoed by the wholesale commission men and market dealers. It is fortunate that at such a time the supply of roses and carnations is not excessive and a fairly steady balance of prices is consequently maintained on these two staples. All bulbous stock, violets, etc., are in excess far beyond requirements and the regular trade makes but little impression on the accumulation, which finds its main outlet through the hole-in-the-wall stands and similar means. Cattleyas are still suffering from lack of appreciation, we regret to say. A bright spot in the situation is the crimson rose Hadley, which some growers are producing in size and form rivaling the best American Beauty. A. S. Burns is one of the successful growers of this rose and his representative, P. J. Smith says that the choice specimens bring 40 cents.

NEW BEDFORD

about at last reported. Violets are plentiful, and sell well. There is a great deal of good bulb stock, particularly tulips and hyacinths, and it moves slowly. Much of the Easter stock is in forcing now, and every one is looking forward to a good Easter trade.

PHILADELPHIA

Too much stock and business none too good is the gist of the situation here at present. The wind-up last week was particularly bad on account of the big storm which comes along every year about the first week in March. Don't tell me that you never can tell about the weather. Old J. Pluvius is a pretty consistent kind of cuss, I think. Did you ever know him to miss with a good old blizzard about the first week in March? Bulbous flowers were the worst sufferers, and next to them came violets and lily of the valley. Some of the wise ones claim that the extraordinary improvement and importance as a commercial cut flower attained by the sweet pea in recent times has cut up the lily of the valley as well as the violet market—not only in design work but in corsage and general floral decorations. This may be true as to lily of the valley in designs where a white Spencer will make a better show for less money; but not as to violets for corsage wear. There, I think, it is largely a change of fashion—and perhaps to some extent the increasing use of the artificial flower as a corsage—which is a deplorable sign of degeneration in the human—for which cheap sensation, the movies, and lads like Billy Sunday are largely responsible. Trailing arbutus from the south—hail and welcome.

PITTSBURGH

Considering the mid-Lenten season, the market conditions are just about as to be expected, with practically no change since St. Valentine's day. Roses and carnations remain steady, and generally speaking, the supply about parallels the demand, with the exception of sweet peas and bulb flowers, especially tulips, which are somewhat overloading their producers. It almost goes without saying that it is the exclusive social caterer in flowers who feels the dearth in business most at this season, as funerals and the banquets and dinners of commercial and professional organizations and the various secret orders are prone to move along as though there were no such thing as penance with sackcloth and ashes. Charles Penek, the manager for Mitchell Kronis' shops in the stations of the P. R. R., reports their branch of business "picking up a little," and is optimistic for a continuance of good, although he frankly admits that business this season has not been half what in was in former years.

ST. LOUIS

The wholesale flower market has been dull. Dark weather and snow has curtailed business somewhat and the commission houses had plenty of stock, especially in carnations, violets, sweet peas and all kinds of bulbs both home grown and Southern shipped stock. Prices have slumped somewhat in all grades.

SAN FRANCISCO

Business has been further curtailed this week. There is some activity in special decorative work for Exposition events, but many florists say that the San Francisco people are simply spending their time at the Exposition, with the result that ordinary retail trade is very slack. The great abundance of bulb stock and other spring flowers also has a depressing effect. Wild flowers—buttercups, eschscholtzias, native iris, etc., are blossoming freely, and home plantings of bulb stock, violets, etc., are coming out so as to interfere with purchases. Fruit blossoms are not so early as in former years, but are becoming rather plentiful. Daffodils are exceptionally fine, but the demand is dropping off and prices are very low. Hyacinths also are overabundant, and tulips are less eagerly sought, while the market is fairly glutted with lily of the valley. More anemones are offered, and some ranunculus has appeared. Beauty roses have been poor all along. Russells are very fine, and so is Sunburst, and there is a large cut of Aaron Ward. Kilarney Queen is also well received, and Brilliant is doing nicely. Milady is not much favored, and some growers are cleaning it out. Gardenias continue to improve, some being shown this week with stems 18 inches long; but a new element of competition in these flowers has caused a cut in prices for ordinary stock, the better offerings being still held up to $3 per dozen, as usual. Cattleyas are holding fairly well in price, but there are more than will move readily. Rhododendrons and azaleas are fairly plentiful.

WASHINGTON

The usual "Inauguration Weather" prevailed the latter part of last week when Washington was visited by a heavy snow and hail followed by rain and cloudy weather. As a result stock has slackened up considerably. Sweet peas are still very plentiful, the supply being nearly three times as heavy as it was two weeks ago. There is an oversupply of Easter lilies for those who grow them for the Easter business have commenced shipping their first cut while those who grow them the year round are cutting increased quantities. Rubrum lilies are also hanging fire. Daffodils from Georgia when received in small quantities clean up readily. Consignments from a number of Northern growers have been discontinued, but there is still an oversupply. The demand for daisies has been good all winter. Carnation sales are easier and there are plenty to go around. Early last week there was a glut of roses but weather conditions have caused the supply to lessen greatly. Northern American Beauty roses are more plentiful. The demand for cornflowers is increasing. Adiantum is scarce. Asparagus is also slackening up. There is a good demand for gardenias. Orchids are getting very scarce.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS.
NEW YORK, N. Y.AN INTERESTING IRRIGATION PROJECT.

Mr. Theodore Strawn of DeLand, Florida, has contracted for what will be a very unique and at the same time very efficient irrigation plant on what he calls his Island Grove at DeLeon Springs.

The distribution of water in this plant is to be through a new type of sprinkler known as the Turbo-Irrigator, which when placed on stand pipes 100 feet distant from each other and extending up through trees, will thoroughly and evenly distribute water in the form of fine rain over the entire surface.

The standpipes, which on account of the trees being very large, average over 20 feet in height, will be supplied with water under pressure by an underground pipe system forced direct by a two-stage centrifugal pump operated by an oil engine situated at a nearby lake.

The large area covered by these sprinklers, which are manufactured by J. P. Campbell of Jacksonville, Florida, greatly reduces the cost of irrigation, especially for orchard use, and as the cost of a modern system of irrigation of this kind has heretofore been almost prohibitive, many of the leading growers of Florida are awaiting the completion and testing out of this plant with great interest.

South American Sheep and Goat Manure

We have just landed the Third 1000 Ton Cargo in New England and it is certainly as good or even better than the last. If South American Goat and Sheep Manure had not come up to the expectations of the growers who bought the first, or if we could not guarantee to furnish the same high grade article, which has built up for itself and for us such a splendid reputation from the very first start, we would never have had to send a ship after another 1000 tons. That's plain. We have an abundant supply for New England and it is our aim to keep this right up to the high standard you know it to be. It is ground fine and is clean to handle, makes an ideal liquid manure, which is safe. WE GUARANTEE OUR S. A. S. & G. M. TO BE ABSOLUTELY PURE. Spring is near and plants need feeding. For Roses, Carnations, Lilies, Ferns, Palms, or any other plants, our S. A. S. & G. M. will do just what a full meal will do for a hungry man.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
 $4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

Come To The New York Show Be Sure To See Our New Type Greenhouse

FIRST we Reconstructed our Commercial Construction. Then we reconstructed the Curved Eave one for private places. Both of them were radical departures. Both are so far in advance of the old constructions that, mark our word, they will be followed as nearly as possible by other builders, before even the Spring is over.

One of the Reconstructed curved eave houses, we have as our exhibit at the Show. Be sure and see it.

Photographs and details will be there, of the Commercial Reconstructed Construction, so you can see exactly what that's like. We shall be expecting you.

We drew this double decked section, to show you the difference in height of sides and shape of roof, between the standard curved eave house, and our new Reconstructed Construction.

IF YOU ARE LOOKING FOR HARDY PERENNIALS

Get them at Dreer's

We offer here only a few of the most important recent introductions. For a complete list of new varieties as well as all the good old sorts worth planting, see DREER'S GARDEN BOOK and our current WHOLESALE PRICE LIST

THE NEW ANCHUSAS.

The Improved Varieties of Italian Alkenet or Bugloss.

These wonderfully improved Anchusas have proven most valuable additions to our limited list of blue flowering hardy perennials, and particularly so as they flower from May to July, a time when this color is only sparingly represented in the hardy border.

The habit of the plants while strong and vigorous is not at all coarse, they form many branched specimens from 3 to 5 feet high, each branch of which is terminated by a large, graceful pyramidal spike of blue flowers.

Dropmore Variety. Rich gentian-blue.

Opal. A splendid lustrous light blue.

$1.50 per doz.; $10 per 100.

THREE CHOICE ANEMONE JAPONICA.

Alice. Large semi-double, silvery-rose suffused with carmine.

Kriemhilde. Nearly four inches in diameter, semi-double rose-pink.

Loreley. Cup-shaped flowers, three inches in diameter, light mauve-pink.

ARTEMESIA LACTIFLORA.
